PREFATORY NOTE TO THE SECOND EDITION

The welcome which THE HOME BOOK OF QUOTATIONS has received is especially pleasing to its compiler because of the public's quick appreciation of what may be called its human quality. It was this quality which he worked hardest to achieve, for what he was striving to produce was not merely another dictionary of quotations—a work of reference to be consulted on occasion—but a book with personality and interest, to be read, lingered over and enjoyed.

Another pleasant feature of the book's reception has been the general recognition of the fact that it is by no means dead and done with, but is a living thing, with endless possibilities of growth and improvement. It should grow better and wiser as it grows older and larger—each edition nobler than the last, like Dr. Holmes's nautilus. At least, its compiler intends to try to make it so.

Already in the brief time which has elapsed since the final reading of the proofs for the first edition, a surprisingly large amount of new material has become available. There is "Ike" Hoover's Forty-Two Years in the White House, with its apparently well-based contention that Calvin Coolidge did not in the least mean his "I do not choose" to be taken as final. There is Stanley Walker's City Editor, with its assertion that the famous "man bites dog" definition of news was not an invention of Charles A. Dana, as generally supposed, nor of his city editor, John B. Bogart, as Frank O'Brien, the present editor of the Sun, believes, but of Amos Cummings, another of Dana's editors. There is David Muzzey's life of Blaine, with many citations, one of which sent the compiler digging back into the pages of the Congressional Globe for April 30, 1866, to read for himself the official account of one of the most amusing orgies of recrimination which ever took place on the floor of the House. There is the assertion by H. G. Wells in Liberty for December 29, 1934, "I launched the phrase 'The War to End War.'" These are only examples of a mass of material, in almost every item of which a nugget or two may be turned up by careful digging.

Most valuable of all have been the suggestions from readers and reviewers. Almost everyone has his favorite quotations, and when any of them have been found missing from this collection, its compiler has been promptly informed—exactly as he had hoped he would be. A number of these suggestions have been included in the present edition, such errors corrected as have been discovered, certain ambiguities made clear, many new entries added to the Concordance, and definite dates given for forty or fifty additional names in the Index of Authors. These are but the first steps in a sort of continuing life-process of renewal and regeneration, which will carry on indefinitely.

It should be noted that the word "familiar" has been carefully excluded from the title of this book. Apart from the fact that the phrase "familiar quotations" is all but meaningless, it is surely the duty of a compiler to rescue from obscurity sayings which deserve to be preserved either because of their own merit or because they indicate the origin and development of those more widely known. The present compiler has spent a great deal of time in searching for such waifs, and also in retrieving hundreds of others which have hitherto been considered too banal or too vulgar to merit attention, for he has felt that "baloney" and "bonehead" and "stuffed shirt" deserve a place here no less than "magic casements."

THE HOME BOOK

SUGGESTIONS FOR USING THE HOME BOOK OF QUOTATIONS

THE quotations in this book are arranged alphabetically by subject, and, under each subject, alphabetically by author; except that quotations which are merely variations of the same phrase are grouped together chronologically, with dates to indicate priority of authorship.

The more important subjects are divided into sections in which cognate quotations are grouped together. This division follows a uniform plan, the first section comprising definitions of the subject; the second, apothegms about it; the third, praise; the fourth, criticism. "Painting" is an example of this arrangement. Sometimes, instead of Praise and Criticism, the division is Virtue and Folly (as in "Ambition"), or Blessing and Curse (as in "Adversity"), or Compensations and Penalties (as in "Age"). The purpose has been to set the quotations for and against any subject in a sort of deadly parallel, which in many cases will be found both interesting and amusing.

The major subjects are still further sub-divided, the divisions varying with the nature of the subject, and an examination of the Table of Contents will show that this has been carried out in considerable detail. "Age," for example, has seventeen sub-divisions; "Man" has nineteen; "Life" has thirty; and "Love" has thirty-seven; the purpose being not only to make any quotation more easy to find, but also to present to the reader all related quotations in a single group. An elaborate system of cross-references works to the same end.

In looking for a particular quotation, it is suggested that the reader turn direct to the subject, or to the division of the subject, under which the quotation would naturally be found, the division being determined by a glance at the Table of Contents at the front of the book. If it is not found, recourse should be had to the Concordance at the back of the book, where quotations are grouped by leading words and phrases, with a reference not only to the page but to the number of the quotation on the page, so that it may be turned to instantly. The Concordance is really a word-index to the quotations, and identifying words are generously given, in order that a quotation which is not exactly remembered may be traced through a number of channels.

Let us suppose that the phrase which is being sought is "The conscious water saw its God and blushed." Perhaps all that is remembered of it is that it has something to do with water seeing God, or with water blushing. In any case, one would naturally look under "Water," where it will be found (Page 2124, No. 14), with a cross-reference to the full quotation, which has been placed under "Miracle" because it has to do with the turning of water into wine. If it had been necessary to consult the Concordance, the phrase would have been found indexed under both "Water" and "Blushed."

There are, of course, many phrases so vague that they do not belong definitely anywhere, and for these the Concordance should be consulted at once, using the leading word of the phrase as a guide. For example, "The beggarly last doit" will be found indexed under "Doit," with a reference to 1337:10, under "Money."

If the desired quotation is not turned up in either of these ways, there is a third resource, provided the author is known. Preceding the Concordance is an Index of Authors, which gives the author's full name, his nationality and profession, dates of birth and death, and the pages on which quotations from his works may be found—except in the cases of such authors as Shakespeare, Pope, Young, and so on, where the quotations are so numerous that to list them in this way would be an absurdity. But anyone wishing to know what quotations are included from the work of Mencken, Chesterton, Santayana, or thousands of less prolific writers, will find this information in the Index of Authors.

If the desired quotation is still not discovered, there remains the final resource of writing to the compiler and asking about it. He will be happy to answer such queries, though in most cases he will probably be able to do no more than to echo Dr. Johnson's reply to the woman who criticized his definition of "pastern."

The great problem in a book such as this, aside from the basic one of including the widest possible range of quotations, accurately given and carefully classified, is to provide a system whereby any quotation may be found with a minimum of search, and the system outlined above is the best which the present compiler has been able to devise. Suggestions for its improvement will be very welcome, as will also information concerning any mistakes which may be discovered in either text or indexes.

ABILITY

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

<sup>2</sup> There never was a bad man that had ability for good service.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings. Third day.

<sup>3</sup> You are a devil at everything, and there is nothing in the whole world but what you can turn your hand to.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25.

"Lippen all to him," he [Corp] said with grand confidence, "he'll find a wy."

J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy. Ch. 21.

He was capable of imagining all, of arranging all, and of doing everything.

VOLTAIRE, Siècle de Louis XV. Referring to the Chevalier de Belle-Isle.

<sup>4</sup> As we advance in life, we learn the limits of our abilities.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Education.

<sup>5</sup> Every person is responsible for all the good within the range of his abilities, and for no more, and none can tell whose sphere is the largest.

GAIL HAMILTON, Country Living and Country Thinking: Men and Women.

<sup>7</sup> The heart to conceive, the understanding to direct, or the hand to execute.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 37, 19 March, 1770.

In every deed of mischief he [Commenus] had a heart to resolve, a head to contrive, and a hand to execute.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 48.

He [Hampden] had a head to contrive, a tongue to persuade, and a hand to execute any mischief.

EDWARD HYDE, EARL OF CLARENDON, History of the Rebellion, iii, vii, 84.

<sup>8</sup> A Traveller at Sparta, standing long upon one leg, said to a Lacedæmonian, "I do not believe you can do as much." "True," said he, "but every goose can."

PLUTARCH, Laconic Apothegms.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 786. (c. 50 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> A man's ability cannot possibly be of one sort and his soul of another. If his soul be well-ordered, serious, and restrained, his ability also is sound and sober. Conversely, when the one degenerates, the other is contaminated. (Non potest alius esse ingenio, alius animo color. . . . Illo vitiato hoc quoque adflatur.)

<sup>11</sup> I am as able and as fit as thou.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 33.

<sup>12</sup> Let every man be occupied, and occupied in the highest employment of which his nature is capable, and die with the consciousness that he has done his best.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 231.

What a man kens he cans.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. iii, bk. 3, ch. 4.

<sup>15</sup> We cannot all do all things. (Non omnia possumus omnes.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. viii, l. 63.

Everyone excels in something in which another fails. (In aliis rebus alius est præstantior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 17.

I never learned how to tune a harp, or play upon a lute; but I know how to raise a small and obscure city to glory and greatness.

THEMISTOCLES, on being taunted with his lack of social accomplishments. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cimon. Ch. 9, sec. 2.)

<sup>16</sup> Man's capacities have never been measured; nor are we to judge of what he can do by any precedents, so little has been tried.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

<sup>17</sup> And all may do, what has by man been done.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 607.

I—Absence: Apothegms

- 1 Brutus and Cassius shone by their absence.
CHÉNIER, Tiberius. Act i, sc. 1. A paraphrase of Tacitus (Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 76), who, speaking of the funeral procession of Junia, sister of Brutus and wife of Cassius, says, "Brutus and Cassius shone with preëminent lustre for the very reason that their images were not displayed."

Among the defects of the bill, which were numerous, one provision was conspicuous by its presence, and one by its absence.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, Address to the Electors of the City of London, 6 April, 1859, referring to Lord Derby's Reform Bill.

- 2 Friends, though absent, are still present. (Et absentes adsunt.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. vii, sec. 23.

Absent in body, but present in spirit.
New Testament: I Corinthians, v, 3.

- 3 To him that absent is All things succeed amiss.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25.

- 4 The Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.
Old Testament: Genesis, xxxi, 49.

- 5 The absent party is still faulty.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Never was the absent in the right. (Nunca los ausentes se hallaron justos.)
UNKNOWN. A Spanish proverb.

The absent shall not be made heir. (Absens hæres non erit.)
UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

- 6 Achilles absent was Achilles still.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 418. (Pope, tr.)

This is not the son of Achilles, but Achilles himself.
PLUTARCH, Lives: Alcibiades. A Greek proverb.

- 7 "Presents," I often say, "endear absents."
CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: A Dissertation upon Roast Pig.

- 8 Let no one be willing to speak ill of the absent. (Absenti nemo non nocuisse velit.)
PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 19, l. 32.

Everyone agrees that the absent are warned by a ringing in the ears when they are being talked about. (Absentés tinnitu aurium præsentire sermones de se receptum est.)

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxviii, sec. 5.

- 9 There is not one among them but I dote on his very absence.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 121.

- 10 Greater things are believed of those who are absent. (Majora credi de absentibus.)
TACITUS, History. Bk. ii, sec. 83.

- 11 Far from our eyes th' Enchanting Objects set,

Advantage by the friendly distance get.

UNKNOWN, A Poem Against Fruition, from Poems by Several Hands (1685). See also under DISTANCE.

- 12 He rages against the absent. (Sæviti in absentis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ix, l. 63.

II—Absence and Love

- 13 Until she come again
The May is not the May,
And what she calls a week
Is forever and a day!

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Forever and a Day.

- 14 Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

T. H. BAYLY, Isle of Beauty. The line is not original with Bayly, for it was the first line of an anonymous poem published in Davison's Poetical Rhapsody, 1602.

Distance only lends enchantment,
Though the ocean waves divide;
Absence makes the heart grow fonder,
Longing to be near your side.
ARTHUR GILLESPIE, Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder. (1900)

Absence makes the heart grow fonder—
Of the other fellow!
UNKNOWN, Absence.

- 15 But ay the tear comes in my ee,
To think on him that's far awa.
BURNS, The Bonnie Lad That's Far Awa.

And my heart falls back to Erin's Isle,
To the girl I left behind me.
UNKNOWN, The Girl I Left Behind Me.

- 16 Absence! is not the soul torn by it
From more than light, or life, or breath?
'Tis Lethe's gloom, but not its quiet,—
The pain without the peace of death!
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Absence.

- 17 Absence from whom we love is worse than death,

And frustrate hope severer than despair.
COWPER, Despair at His Separation, l. 35.

- 18 Our hours in love have wings; in absence crutches.

COLLEY CIBBER, Xerxes. Act iv, sc. 3.

Love reckons hours for months, and days for years;

And every little absence is an age.
DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act iii, sc. 1.

Though absent, present to desires they be;
Our soul much further than our eyes can see.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Barons' Wars. Bk. iii,
l. 20. (1603)

2
Absence sharpens love, presence strengthens
it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 755.

I find that absence still increases love.

CHARLES HOPKINS, To C. C.

Absences are a good influence in love and keep it bright and delicate.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

Think not, O thou guide of my youth, that absence can impair my respect, or interposing trackless deserts blot your reverend figure from my memory. . . . By every remove, I only drag a greater length of chain.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 3.

Where'er I roam, whatever realms to see,
My heart untravell'd fondly turns to thee;
Still to my brother turns with ceaseless pain,
And drags at each remove a lengthening chain.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 7.

The farther off, the more desired; thus lovers
tie their knot.

HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY, The Faithful Lover Declareth His Paines. (c. 1540)

Distance sometimes endears friendship, and absence sweeteneth it.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 1, let. 6. (1655)

Absent or dead, still let a friend be dear
(A sigh the absent claims, the dead a tear).

POPE, Epistle to Robert Earl of Oxford, l. 13.

My mother bids me bind my hair
With bands of rosy hue,
Tie up my sleeves with ribbands rare,
And lace my bodice blue;

For why, she cries, sit still and weep,
While others dance and play?
Alas, I scarce can go or creep,
While Lubin is away.

ANNE HUNTER, My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair.

Ever absent, ever near;
Still I see thee, still I hear;
Yet I cannot reach thee, dear!

FRANCIS KAZINCZY, Separation.

What shall I do with all the days and hours
That must be counted ere I see thy face?

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Absence.

What's this dull town to me?
Robin's not near—

He whom I wished to see,
Wished for to hear;
Where's all the joy and mirth

Made life a heaven on earth?
O! they're all fled with thee,
Robin Adair.

CAROLINE KEPPEL, Robin Adair.

10 Absence diminishes little passions and increases great ones, just as the wind blows out a candle and fans a fire. (L'absence diminue les médiocres passions, et augmente les grandes, comme le vent éteint les bougies et allume le feu.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 276.

Absence is to love what wind is to a fire; it puts out the little, it kindles the great.

ROGER DE BUSSY-RABUTIN, Épigram.

Absence quickens our love and elevates our affections. Absence is the invisible and incorporeal mother of ideal beauty.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations:
Kosciusko and Poniatowski.

Tho' lost to sight, to mem'ry dear
Thou ever wilt remain.

GEORGE LINLEY, Tho' Lost to Sight. Written by Linley, probably about 1830, for Augustus Braham, and sung by him with great success. The first line is much older and of unknown origin. It was quoted as an axiom in the Monthly Magazine, Jan., 1827.

Perchance all des'late and forlorn
These eyes shall miss thee many a year;
But unforgotten every charm—

Tho' lost to sight, to mem'ry dear.

RUTHVEN JENKINS, Sweetheart, Good-Bye.

This poem was published in London in 1880 by Horace F. Cutler, who claimed to have discovered it in the Greenwich Magazine for Marines for 1803, but it was eventually proved that no such magazine existed, and that Cutler's claim was a hoax. (See Notes and Queries, 27 March, 1909, p. 249; 21 Oct., 1916, p. 336.)

Tho' lost to sight, within this filial breast
Hendrick still lives in all his might confest.

WILLIAM RIDER, Tho' Lost to Sight. (London Magazine, 1755, p. 589.)

Thou art gone from my gaze like a beautiful dream,
And I seek thee in vain by the meadow and stream.

GEORGE LINLEY, Thou Art Gone.

Ever of thee I'm fondly dreaming,
Thy gentle voice my spirit can cheer.

GEORGE LINLEY, Ever of Thee.

See also under MEMORY.

14
Absence not long enough to root out quite
All love, increases love at second sight.

THOMAS MAY, Henry II.

15
For there's nae luck about the house,
There's nae luck ava',

There's little pleasure in the house
When our gudeman's awa'.

WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE, The Sailor's Wife.
Sometimes attributed with slight foundation to Jean Adam.

But O the heavy change, now thou art gone,
Now thou art gone, and never must return!

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 37.

With what a deep devotedness of woe
I wept thy absence—o'er and o'er again
Thinking of thee, still thee, till thought grew pain,
And mem'ry, like a drop that, night and day,
Falls cold and ceaseless, wore my heart
away!

THOMAS MOORE, *Lalla Rookh: The Veiled
Prophet of Khorassan*, l. 510.

A boat at midnight sent alone
To drift upon the moonless sea,
A lute, whose leading chord is gone,
A wounded bird, that hath but one
Imperfect wing to soar upon,
Are like what I am, without thee.

THOMAS MOORE, Loves of the Angels: The Second Angel's Story, l. 1533.

But love will long for the absent things,
Ever the old earth over.

J. U. NICOLSON, String Stars for Pearls.

Ye flowers that droop, forsaken by the spring,
Ye birds that, left by Summer, cease to sing,
Ye trees, that fade when Autumn-heats remove,

Say, is not absence death to those who love?

POPE, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 27.

Condemn'd whole years in absence to deplore,
And image charms he must behold no more.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 361.

When those who love are severed, love's tide stronger flows. (Semper in absentes felicior æstus amantes.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 33, l. 43.

What, keep a week away? seven days and nights?

Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours,

More tedious than the dial eight score times?
O weary reckoning!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 173.

All days are nights to see till I see thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xliii.

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xcvi.

She only said, "My life is dreary,
He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I am weary, weary,
I would that I were dead!"
TENNYSON, Mariana.

Jest a-wearyin' fer you—
All the time a-feelin' blue.

FRANK L. STANTON, Wearyin' fer You.

'Tis said that absence conquers love,
But oh! believe it not;
I've tried, alas! its power to prove,
But thou art not forgot.

FREDERICK WILLIAM THOMAS, Song.

Since you have waned from us,
Fairest of women!

I am a darkened cage
Songs cannot hymn in.

My songs have followed you,
Like birds the summer;

Ah! bring them back to me,
Swiftly, dear comer!

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Carrier Song.

III—Absence: Out of Sight Out of Mind

11
Times daily change and we likewise in them;
Things out of sight do straight forgotten die.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Aurora. Sonnet lxiii.

12
To men a man is but a mind. Who cares
What face he carries or what form he wears?
But woman's body is the woman. O
Stay thou, my sweetheart, and do never go,
But heed the warning words the sage hath said:

A woman absent is a woman dead.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary, p. 15.

Distance makes the heart less fond. (Spatio debilitatur amor.)

CLAUDIAN, Epistula ad Olybrium, l. 12. (c.
400 A.D.)

Absence is the enemy of love. (Assenza nemica di amore.)

UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb.

14
The rarer seen, the less in mind,
The less in mind, the lesser pain.

BARNABE GOOGE, Out of Sight, Out of Mind.

Out of sight, out of mind. (ἄστος ἀπύστος.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 242.

As soon as the breath is out of their bodies, it is "Out of sight, out of mind." (ἄστοι, ἀπύστοι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 33.

16
'Tis sweet to think, that, where'er we rove,
We are sure to find something blissful and
dear;

And that, when we're far from the lips we love,

We've but to make love to the lips we are near.

THOMAS MOORE, 'Tis Sweet to Think.

Wives in their husbands' absences grow subtler,
And daughters sometimes run off with the butler.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 22.

'Tis ever common

That men are merriest when they are from home.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 2, l. 271.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 357.

<sup>2</sup> Far as I journey from thy sight, so far Shall love too journey from my mind. (Quantum oculis, animo tam procul ibit amor.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 21, l. 10.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 2.

He's got 'em on the list—he's got 'em on the list;
And they'll none of 'em be missed.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

<sup>4</sup> And when man is out of sight, quickly also is he out of mind.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 23. (1460)

Out of sight, out of mind.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

Out of mind as soon as out of sight.

SIR FULKE GREVILLE, Sonnets. No. lvi. (c. 1600)

Out of sight out of mind seems to be a proverb which applies to enemies as well as friends.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 2.

That out of sight is out of mind

Is true of most we leave behind.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Songs in Absence. No. 9.

I do perceive that the old proverb be not always true, for I do find that the absence of my Nath. doth breed in me the more continual remembrance of him.

ANNE, LADY BACON, Letter, to Jane, Lady Cornwallis. (1613) Bacon himself had quoted the proverb. (Private Correspondence of Lady Cornwallis, p. 19.)

<sup>5</sup> He that is absent is soon forgotten.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred. No. 134. (c. 1270)

Far from eyes, far from heart, quoth Hendyng.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. (c. 1320)

IV—Absence: Absence of Mind

ADDISON, The Spectator, 29 May, 1711.

<sup>8</sup> What is commonly called an absent man, is commonly either a very weak or a very affected man; but be he which he will, he is, I am sure, a very disagreeable man in company.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746.

I would rather be in company with a dead man, than with an absent one; for if the dead man gives me no pleasure, at least he shows me no contempt; whereas, the absent man, silently indeed, but very plainly, tells me that he does not think me worth his attention.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Sept., 1749.

<sup>9</sup> But my thoughts ran a wool-gathering; and I did like the countryman, who looked for his ass while he was mounted on his back.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. lvii.

Have you summoned your wits from wool-gathering?

MIDDLETON, The Family of Love. Act v, sc. 3.

<sup>10</sup> For with G. D., to be absent from the body is sometimes (not to speak it profanely) to be present with the Lord.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation.

Your absence of mind we have borne, till your presence of body came to be called in question by it.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Amicus Redivivus.

Thou shalt abstain, Renounce, refrain.

(Entbehren sollst du! sollst entbehren.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4.

<sup>13</sup> Call'd to the temple of impure delight,
He that abstains, and he alone, does right.
If a wish wander that way, call it home;
He cannot long be safe whose wishes roam.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 584.

<sup>14</sup> Refin'd himself to Soul, to curb the Sense;
And made almost a Sin of Abstinence.

DRYDEN, The Character of a Good Parson, l. 10.

1 Abstinence is whereby a man refraineth from anything which he may lawfully take.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Governour. Pt. iii, ch. 16. (1531)

2 Against diseases here the strongest fence Is the defensive virtue, abstinence.

ROBERT HERRICK, Abstinence.

3 Abstinence is as easy to me as temperance would be difficult.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (MORE, Johnsoniana, 467.)

4 All is, I never drink no sperit,
Nor I haint never signed no pledge.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 7, st. 9.

5 The lean and sallow abstinence.

MILTON, Comus, l. 709.

6 To abstain that we may enjoy is the epicurianism of reason. (L'abstenir pour jouir, c'est l'épicurisme de la raison.)

J.-J. ROUSSEAU.

7 Refrain to-night,
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next more easy;
For use almost can change the stamp of nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 165.

8 And must I wholly banish hence
These red and golden juices,

And pay my vows to Abstinence,
That pallidest of Muses?

WILLIAM WATSON, To a Fair Maiden Who Bade Me Shun Wine.

ACCIDENT

12 By some fortuitous concourse of atoms.
(Fortuito quodam concursu atomorum.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 24, sec.

66. Adapted. The words in Cicero are, "Nulla cogente natura, sed concursu quodam fortuito."

How comes it to pass, if they be only moved by chance and accident, that such regular mutations and generations should be begotten by a fortuitous concourse of atoms?

JOHN SMITH, of Cambridge, Select Discourses. Vol. iii, p. 48. (1669)

A blind, fortuitous concourse of atoms, not guided by an understanding agent.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. iv, ch. 20, sec. 15. (1690)

Epicureans, that ascribed the origin and frame of the world not to the power of God, but to the fortuitous concourse of atoms.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Sermons. Vol. iii, p. 147. Preached in 1692.

LESSING, Emilia Galotti. Act iv, sc. 3.

At first laying down, as a fact fundamental,
That nothing with God can be accidental.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. vi.

16 There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip. (Πολλὰ μεταξύ πέλει κύλικος, καὶ χεῖλος ἄκρον.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 32.)

A very ancient proverb, sometimes attributed to Homer, and frequently quoted. See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xiii, ch. 18, sec. 3.

Between the mouth and the morsel many things may happen. (Inter os atque offam multa intervenire posse.)

CATO THE CENSOR, On the Improper Election of Ædiles. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xiii, ch. 18, sec. 1.)

Many things fall between the cup and mouth.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. 15. (1539)

Oft times many things fall out between the cup and the lip.

ROBERT GREENE, Perimedes the Blacksmith. (1588)

Many things happen between the cup and the lip.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 3. (1621)

<sup>1</sup> What the reason of the ant laboriously drags into a heap, the wind of accident will collect in one breath.

LORD EDWARD THURLOW, Speech, in reply to the Duke of Grafton. Grafton had taunted Thurlow, then Lord Chancellor, on his humble origin. Thurlow, advancing on Grafton, expressed his amazement at the speech and added: "The noble lord cannot look before him, behind him, or on either side of him without seeing some noble peer who owes his seat in this House to his successful exertions in the profession to which I belong. Does he not feel that it is as honourable to owe it to these as to being the accident of an accident?"

<sup>7</sup> The only things in life in which we can be said to have any property, are our actions.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 52.

DEMOSTHENES, when asked what were the three essentials of oratory. (PLUTARCH, Lives of the Ten Orators.) The saying has often been imitated. When Louis XI asked what was needed to make war, Marshal Trivulce replied, "Three things: money, more money, always money." (De l'argent, encore de l'argent, et toujours de l'argent.) Danton, in a speech before the National Assembly, Au gust, 1792, said three things were needed to save France, "Boldness, more boldness, and always boldness." (De l'audace, encore de l'audace, et toujours de l'audace.) Gambetta (Speech, 24 June, 1872) prescribed, "Work, more work, and always work," to achieve success. Daniel O'Connell, when asked how to free Ireland, replied, "Agitate, agitate, agitate!" and was himself known as "the great agitator." Parnell changed the prescription to "Organize, organize, organize!"

For as action follows speeches and votes in the order of time, so does it precede and rank before them in force.

DEMOSTHENES, Olynthiaca. No. iii, sec. 6.

<sup>9</sup> Prodigious actions may as well be done
By weaver's issue, as by prince's son.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 638.

<sup>10</sup> Why should we be cowed by the name of Action? . . . The rich mind lies in the sun and sleeps, and is Nature. To think is to act.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

<sup>11</sup> I see how many firm acts have been done; how many valiant noes have this day been spoken, when others would have uttered ruinous yeas.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

<sup>12</sup> We are taught by great actions that the universe is the property of every individual in it.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Beauty.

<sup>13</sup> Act, if you like,—but you do it at your peril. Men's actions are too strong for them. Show me a man who has acted and who has not been the victim and slave of his action.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Prophetess. Act ii, sc. 3.

Great acts grow out of great occasions and great occasions spring from great principles, working changes in society, and tearing it up by the roots.

The great end of life is not knowledge, but action.

T. H. HUXLEY, Technical Education.

<sup>17</sup> It is not book learning young men need, nor instruction about this and that, but a stiffening of the vertebræ which will cause them to be loyal to a trust, to act promptly, concentrate their energies, do a thing—"carry a message to Garcia."

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Message to Garcia, first printed in The Philistine, March, 1900. The man who carried the message to Garcia was Lieut. Andrew S. Rowan, of the Bureau of Military Intelligence. It was delivered 1 May, 1898.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 409.

3 No action, whether foul or fair,
Is ever done, but it leaves somewhere
A record, written by fingers ghostly,
As a blessing or a curse, and mostly
In the greater weakness or greater strength
Of the acts which follow it.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii.

4 Trust no Future, howe'er pleasant!
Let the dead Past bury its dead!

Act,—act in the living Present!
Heart within, and God o'erhead!

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

5 Every man feels instinctively that all the beautiful sentiments in the world weigh less than a single lovely action.

20 An actor is a sculptor who carves in snow.
LAWRENCE BARRETT. (Ascribed to him by Wilton Lackaye in conversation with George
C. Tyler.)

1 Farce follow'd Comedy, and reach'd her prime,

In ever-laughing Foote's fantastic time: . . .

"Alas, poor Yorick!" now forever mute!

Whoever loves a laugh must sigh for Foote.

We smile, perforce, when histrionic scenes

Ape the swoln dialogue of kings and queens,

When "Chrononhotonthologos must die,"

And Arthur struts in mimic majesty.

BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 329.

To see Kean act was like reading Shakespeare by flashes of lightning.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

He doesn't act on the stage; he behaves.

OSCAR WILDE, of George Alexander. (HARRIS, Oscar Wilde, p. 342.)

2 Never meddle with actors, for they are a favored class. . . . Remember that, as they are merry folk who give pleasure, everyone favors and protects them.

RICHARD STEELE, Spectator. No. 22.

4 Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time: after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 545.

5 Is it not monstrous that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own conceit
That from her working all his visage wann'd,
Tears in his eyes, distraction in 's aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suit-
ing

With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing!

For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her? What would he do,

Had he the motive and the cue for passion
That I have? He would drown the stage with tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 577.

To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 124.

6 Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue:
but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus, but use all gently; for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings. . . . Be not too tame, neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

. . . . And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the mean time, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that's villanous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 1.

Who teach the mind its proper face to scan,
And hold the faithful mirror up to man.

ROBERT LLOYD, The Actor, l. 265.

7 Play out the play.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 531.

8 As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-graced actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 2, l. 23.

9 A part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 32.

I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;
Speak and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 5.

Like a strutting player, whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
3, l. 153.

"Ham," a poor and generally fatuous performer, was originally "ham fatter," a neophyte in the minstrel ranks, forced to sing "Ham Fat," an old ditty of the George Christy days.

EDWARD B. MARKS, They All Sang, p. 66.

If one tolerable page appears
In folly's volume, 'tis the actor's leaf,
Who dries his own by drawing others' tears,
And, raising present mirth, makes glad his future years.

The purple robe and silver's shine
More fit an actor's needs than mine.
SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 8.)

The play is done; the curtain drops,
Slow falling to the prompter's bell:
A moment yet the actor stops,
And looks around, to say farewell.
It is an irksome word and task:
And, when he's laughed and said his say,
He shows, as he removes the mask,
A face that's anything but gay.

Beware the lure within her lovely tresses.
GOETHE, Faust: Sc. 21, Walpurgis Night.
(Bayard Taylor, tr.)

Of Adam's first wife, Lilith, it is told
(The witch he loved before the gift of Eve)
That, ere the snake's, her sweet tongue could deceive

And her enchanted hair was the first gold.
And still she sits, young while the earth is old,
And, subtly of herself contemplative,
Draws men to watch the bright net she can weave,

Till heart and body and life are in its hold.

ADAPTABILITY

10 Nothing is more politic than to make the wheels of the mind concentric and voluble with the wheels of fortune.

FRANCIS BACON, *Advancement of Learning:
Of the Understanding*.

11 You shall see a bold fellow many times do Mahomet's miracle. Mahomet made the people believe that he would call an hill to him, and from the top of it offer up his prayers, for the observers of his law. The people assembled; Mahomet called the hill to come to him, again and again; and when the hill stood still, he was never a whit abashed, but said: If the hill will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet will go to the hill.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldness.

12 I am of a constitution so general, that it

ADDISON, JOSEPH

11 Whoever wishes to attain an English style, familiar but not coarse, and elegant but not ostentatious, must give his days and nights to the volumes of Addison.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Addison.

12 No whiter page than Addison remains.

He from the taste obscene reclaims our youth,

And sets the passions on the side of Truth, Forms the soft bosom with the gentlest Art, And pours each human virtue in the heart.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 216.

Were there one whose fires True Genius kindles, and fair Fame inspires, Bless'd with each talent and each art to please, And born to write, converse, and live with ease; Should such a man, too fond to rule alone, Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne; View him with scornful, yet with jealous eyes, And hate for arts that caus'd himself to rise; Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer, And without sneering teach the rest to sneer; Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike, Just hint a fault, and hesitate dislike; Alike reserv'd to blame or to commend, A tim'rous foe, and a suspicious friend; Dreading ev'n fools, by flatterers besieged, And so obliging that he ne'er obliged, Like Cato, give his little Senate laws, And sit attentive to his own applause; While Wits and Templars ev'ry sentence raise, And wonder with a foolish face of praise— Who but must laugh if such a man there be? Who would not weep, if Atticus were he?

You brought your Clio to the virgin's aid.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, Poetical Address to Mr. Addison. A reference to the fact that Addison signed his papers in The Spectator with one or other of the letters making up the name of Clio, the Muse of history. Dr. Johnson said of this couplet: "The couplet which mentions Clio is written with the most exquisite delicacy of praise; it exhibits one of those happy strokes which are seldom attained."

<sup>2</sup> If business calls, or crowded courts invite,
Th' unblemish'd statesman seems to strike
my sight;

If in the stage I seek to soothe my care,
I meet his soul which breathes in Cato there;
If pensive to the rural shades I rove,
His shape o'ertakes me in the lonely grove;
'Twas there of just and good he reason'd strong,

Clear'd some great truth, or rais'd some serious song:

There patient show'd us the wise course to steer,

A candid censor and a friend severe.

THOMAS TICKELL, To the Earl of Warwick, on the Death of Mr. Addison.

Nor e'er was to the bowers of bliss convey'd

A fairer spirit or more welcome shade.

THOMAS TICKELL, To the Earl of Warwick, on the Death of Mr. Addison.

To admire (or wonder at) nothing. (Nihil admirari.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 14, sec. 30.

Nil admirari: a very necessary lesson.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

<sup>14</sup> To admire nothing, (as most are wont to do;) Is the only method that I know
To make men happy, and to keep them so. (Nil admirari prope res et una, Numici, Solaque quæ possit facere et servare beatum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 1. (Crech, tr.)

Not to admire, is all the art I know

To make men happy and to keep them so.

POPE, Imitations of Horace. Adapted from Creech's translation.

"Not to admire is all the art I know

(Plain truth, dear Murray, needs few flowers of speech)

To make men happy, or to keep them so"

(So take it in the very words of Creech)—

Thus Horace wrote, we all know, long ago;

And thus Pope quotes the precept, to re-teach From his translation; but had none admired,
Would Pope have sung, or Horace been inspired?

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 101.

And I must say, I ne'er could see the very Great happiness of the "Nil Admirari."

<sup>15</sup> Season your admiration for a while.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 192.

Admiration did not hoop at them.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 108.

<sup>16</sup> We hear it not seldom said that ignorance is the mother of admiration. No falser word was ever spoken, and hardly a more mischievous one.

R. C. TRENCH, The Study of Words: Introductory Lecture.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 763.

The freshness, the everlasting youth,
Of admiration sprung from truth;
From beauty infinitely growing
Upon a mind with love o'erflowing.

ADVENTURE

<sup>7</sup> Adventure is the vitaminizing element in history both individual and social.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Introduction.

The life of an adventurer is the practice of the art of the impossible.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Charles XII of Sweden.

It is always the adventurers who accomplish great things. (Ce sont toujours les aventuriers qui font de grandes choses.)

MONTESQUIEU.

<sup>9</sup> In the Law of Adventure, male adventure, love is no more than gold or fame—all three, glitterings on the horizon, beckoning constellations. But with the woman-adventurer all is love or hate. Her adventure is man; her type is not the prospector, but the courtesan. That is, her adventure is an escape, developing inevitably into a running fight with the institution of marriage.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Lola Montez.

<sup>10</sup> Are there not, dear Michal,
Two points in the adventure of the diver,
One—when, a beggar, he prepares to plunge,
One—when, a prince, he rises with his pearl?

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. The French form is, "En aventure gisent beau coups."

<sup>16</sup> The day shall not be up so soon as I,
To try the fair adventure of to-morrow.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 5, l. 21.

<sup>17</sup> Her father loved me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life, . . .
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field.

He was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth:
he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

Old Testament: Isaiah, liii, 7.

Feed him with bread of affliction, and with water of affliction.

Old Testament: I Kings, xxii, 27; II Chronicles, xviii, 26.

Adversity reminds men of religion.

LIVY, History. Bk. v, ch. 51.

For thine own purpose, thou hast sent
The strife and the discouragement!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii.

Let us be patient! These severe afflictions

Not from the ground arise,

But oftentimes celestial benedictions

Assume this dark disguise.

LONGFELLOW, Resignation.

Are afflictions aught But blessings in disguise?
DAVID MALLET, Amyntor and Theodora.

Who would have known of Hector, if Troy had been happy? The road to valor is builded by adversity. (Hectora quis nosset, si felix Troia fuisset? Publica virtutis per mala facta via est.)

l. 55.

If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 10.

The good are better made by ill,
As odours crushed are sweeter still.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. St. 3.

As aromatic plants bestow

No spicy fragrance while they grow;

But crush'd, or trodden to the ground,

Diffuse their balmy sweets around.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Captivity. Act i.

It loves to be trodden and bruised under foot,
and the more it is destroyed the better it thrives.
(Gaulet calcari et atteri, pereundoque melius provenit.)

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxi, sec. 6. The reference is to the crocus.

The camomile, the more it is trodden and pressed down, the more it spreadeth.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 46.

The camomile, the more it is trodden on the faster it grows.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 439.

Gold is tried by fire, brave men by adversity.
(Ignis aurum probat, miseria fortes viros.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. v, sec. 9.

Some souls we see

Grow hard, and stiffen with adversity.

JOHN DRYDEN, Hind and Panther. Pt. i, l. 444.

Sweet are the uses of adversity,

Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,

Wears yet a precious jewel in his head.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1,
l. 12. (1599)

The foul Toad hath a fair stone in his head.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 53. (1579)

Of the uses of adversity which are sweet, none are sweeter than those which grow out of disappointed love.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, Notes from Life, p. 78.

1 His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 64.

2 O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxix.

3 Affliction is not sent in vain, young man,
From that good God who chastens whom he loves.

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iii, l. 165.

4 The Lord gets his best soldiers out of the highlands of affliction.

C. H. SPURGEON, Sorrow's Discipline.

5 For a man to rejoice in adversity is not grievous to him who loves; for so to joy is to joy in the cross of Christ.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 6.

6 Till from the straw the flail the corn doth beat,

Until the chaff be purgèd from the wheat,
Yea, till the mill the grains in pieces tear,
The richness of the flour will scarce appear.

GEORGE WITHER, Fragmenta Poetica.

II—Adversity: A Curse

7 Afflictions induce callosities.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v, 10.

8 Daughter of Jove, relentless power,
Thou tamer of the human breast,
Whose iron scourge and tort'ring hour
The bad affright, afflict the best.

THOMAS GRAY, Hymn to Adversity.

9 Unrighteous fortune seldom spares the noblest virtue; no one with safety can expose himself to frequent danger. Adversity finds at last the man whom she has often passed by.
(Iniqua raro maximis virtutibus Fortune parcit; nemo se tuto diu Periculis offerre tam crebris potest. Quem sæpe transit casus, ali-quando invenit.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 325.

10 A wretched soul, bruis'd with adversity,
We bid be quiet when we hear it cry;
But were we burden'd with like weight of
pain,

As much, or more, we should ourselves complain.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 34. See also FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY;
MISFORTUNES OF OTHERS.

11 Let me embrace thee, sour adversity,
For wise men say it is the wisest course.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 24.

Henceforth I'll bear
Affliction till it do cry out itself
"Enough, enough," and die.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 76.

12 Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 46.

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 3,
l. 2.

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3,
l. 82.

A man I am cross'd with adversity.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 12.

Whom unmerciful disaster
Followed fast and followed faster.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven.

They seemed Like old companions in adversity.
BRYANT, A Winter Piece.

13 What time to tardy consummation brings Calamity, like to a frosty night
That ripeneth the grain, completes at once.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, Philip von Artevelde. Pt.
i, act iv, sc. 2.

14 What region of earth is not full of our calamities? (Quæ regio in terris nostri non plena laboris?)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 460.

III—Adversity and Man

15 We cannot be more faithful to ourselves,
In anything that's manly, than to make
Ill fortune as contemptible to us
As it makes us to others.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act i, sc. 1.

16 Strong men greet war, tempest, hard times.
They wish, as Pindar said, "to tread the floors of hell, with necessities as hard as iron."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

17 In adversity a man is saved by hope.
("Ἄνθρωπος ἀνυχῶν σώζεται ὑπὸ τῆς ἐλπίδος.")

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 813.

18 Do they not seek occasion of new quarrels
On my refusal, to distress me more,
Or make a game of my calamities?

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1329.

1 Great men rejoice in adversity just as brave soldiers triumph in war.

SENECA, De Providentia. Sec. 4.

2 Behold a worthy sight, to which the God . . . may direct his gaze. Behold a thing worthy of a God, a brave man matched in conflict with adversity. (Ecce spectaculum dignum, ad quod respiciat . . . Deus. Ecce par Deo dignum, vir fortis cum mala fortuna compositus.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Sec. 4.

The bravest sight in all this world is a man fighting against odds.

FRANKLIN K. LANE, The Unconquerable Soul.

3 Seneca thinks the gods are well pleased when they see great men contending with adversity.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 1, subs. 1.

A wise man struggling with adversity is said by some heathen writer to be a spectacle on which the gods might look down with pleasure.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sermon on the Duties of the Queen.

4 A brave man struggling in the storms of fate, And greatly falling with a falling state.

POPE, Prologue to Mr. Addison's Cato, l. 21.

5 The greatest object in the universe, says a certain philosopher, is a good man struggling with adversity; yet there is a still greater, which is the good man that comes to relieve it.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 30.

1 There are wonders in true affection: it is a body of enigmas, mysteries, and riddles; wherein two so become one, as they both become two.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 7.

2 Alas! our young affections run to waste, Or water but the desert.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 120.

Talk not of wasted affection, affection never was wasted;

If it enrich not the heart of another, its waters, returning

Back to their springs, like the rain, shall fill them full of refreshment.

4 He carries an old mind with a youthful body.
(Γέροντα τὸν νοῦν, σάρκα δ' ἥβώσαν φέει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 622.

A man that is young in years may be old in hours, if he have lost no time.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Youth and Age.

Nature is full of freaks, and now puts an old head on young shoulders, and then a young heart beating under fourscore winters.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

Young in limbs, in judgement old.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
ii, sc. 7, l. 71.

I never knew so young a body with so old a head.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 163.

5 Old age is more suspicious than the free
And valiant heart of youth, or manhood's firm,

Uncloaked reason.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 156.

6 The child's toys and the old man's reasons
Are the fruits of the two seasons.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

7 Young, all lay in dispute; I shall know, being old.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 15.

8 Let age approve of youth, and death complete the same!

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. Last line.

9 It was an old, old, old, old lady,
And a boy who was half-past three.

H. C. BUNNER, One, Two, Three.

10 The arrogance of age must submit to be taught by youth.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Fanny Burney.

The rev'rend grey-beards rav'd and storm'd,
That beardless laddies
Should think they better were inform'd
Than their auld daddies.

ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to Simpson: Postscript.

Young folks are smart, but all ain't good thet's
new,

I guess the gran'thers they knowed sunthin', tu.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers: Ser. ii,
Mason and Slidell.

11 Yes, Life in Youth-tide standeth still; in Manhood streameth soft and slow;
See, as it nears th' abysmal goal how fleet
the waters flash and flow!

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. iii, st.
28.

The more we live, more brief appear

Our life's succeeding stages;

A day to childhood seems a year,

And years like passing ages. . . .

Heaven gives our years of fading strength

Indemnifying fleetness;

And those of Youth, a seeming length,

Proportioned to their sweetness.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, A Thought Suggested by the New Year.

12 'Tis the defect of age to rail at the pleasures of youth.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Basset Table. Act i.

13 Young men think old men are fools; but old men know young men are fools.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act v, sc. 1, l. 292.

(1605) WILLIAM CAMDEN (Remains, 1605) quotes this, in slightly different form, as a saying of Dr. Metcalf.

14 Old age may be sweet, if it is made like youth; but youth is burdensome if it be like old age. (Grata senectus homini, quæ parilis juventæ; Illa juvena est gravior, quæ similis senectæ.)

CHILON. (AUSONIUS [?], *Septem Sapientum
Sententiæ*, l. 41.)

15 Rashness is a quality of the budding-time of youth, prudence of the harvest-time of old age. (Temeritas est florentis ætatis, prudentia senescentis.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. vi, sec. 20.

From thoughtless youth to ruminating age.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 24.

No life is perfect that has not been lived youth in feeling, manhood in battle, old age in meditation.

WILFRID SCAWEN BLUNT, The Perfect Life.

Old the proverb, old, but true;—

Age should think, and Youth should do.

D'ARCY THOMPSON, Sales Attici.

For just as I approve of a young man in whom there is a touch of age, so I approve of the old man in whom there is some of the flavor of youth. He who strives thus to mingle youthfulness and age may grow old in body, but old in spirit he will never be. (Ut enim adulescentem in quo est senile aliquid, sic senem in quo est aliquid adulescentis probro, quod qui sequitur, corpore senex esse poterit, animo numquam erit.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xi, sec. 38.

The true way to render age vigorous is to prolong the youth of the mind.

MORTIMER COLLINS, The Village Comedy, i. 56.

If within the old man there is not a young man,—within the sophisticated, one unsophisticated,—then he is but one of the devil's angels.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 26 Oct., 1853.

Age, out of heart, impatient, sighed:—
"I ask what will the Future be?"

Youth laughed contentedly, and cried:—
"The future leave to me!"

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Youth and Age.

Youth beholds happiness gleaming in the prospect. Age looks back on the happiness of youth, and, instead of hopes, seeks its enjoyment in the recollections of hope.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk: Youth and Age.

Youth with swift feet walks onward in the way;
The land of joy lies all before his eyes;
Age, stumbling, lingers slowly day by day,
Still looking back, for it behind him lies.
Fail not for sorrow, falter not for sin,
But onward, upward, till the goal ye win!

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Lines to the Young Gentlemen Leaving Lenox Academy.

'Tis well to give honour and glory to Age,
With its lessons of wisdom and truth;
Yet who would not go back to the fanciful page,
And the fairy tale read but in youth?

Read, ye that run, the awful truth,
With which I charge my page;
A worm is in the bud of youth,
And at the root of age.

COWPER, Stanzas Subjoined to the Yearly Bill of Mortality of the Parish of All Saints, Northampton, A. D. 1787.

When youth is fallen, there's hope the young may rise,
But fallen age for ever hopeless lies.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter 21.

The spring, like youth, fresh blossoms doth produce,
But autumn makes them ripe and fit for use:
So Age a mature mellowness doth set

On the green promises of youthful heat.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cato Major. Pt. iv, l. 47.

Youth is a blunder; Manhood a struggle;
Old Age a regret.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

The blunders of youth are preferable to the triumphs of manhood, or the success of old age.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 31.

The disappointment of Manhood succeeds to the delusion of Youth; let us hope that the heritage of Old Age is not despair.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. viii, ch. 4.

O Youth must bleed and measure
The days that span the sea—
But Age will keep for pleasure
What Youth thought misery.

GLENN WARD DRESBACH, Youth and Age.

10
For all their courteous words they are not one,
This Youth and Age, but civil strangers still;

Age with the best of all his seasons done.

Youth with his face towards the upland hill.

JOHN DRINKWATER, Olton Pools: Dedication.

When youth is spent, a penny at a fair,
The old men tell of the bargains there.
There was this and that for a price and a wage,

But when they came away they had all bought age.

LOUISE DRISCOLL, Bargain.

In youth, we clothe ourselves with rainbows, and go as brave as the zodiac. In age, we put out another sort of perspiration,—gout, fever, rheumatism, caprice, doubt, fretting, avarice.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Youth is everywhere in place. Age, like woman, requires fit surroundings.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

13
An angelic boyhood becomes a satanic old age. (Angelicus juvenis senibus satanizat in annis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Quoted as a proverb invented by Satan.

It is a common proverb, young saint old devil.
UNKNOWN, Dives et Pauper. Fo. 34. (1493)

Fie upon such as say, young saints, old devils: it is no doubt a devilish and damnable saying.

ROBERT GREENE, Works. Vol. x, p. 239. (1592)

Of a young hermit, an old devil. (De jeune hermite, viell diable.)

RABELAIS, Works. Vol. ii. Quoted as a proverb.

14
If youth but knew; if old age could! (Si jeunesse savoit, si vieillesse pouvoit.)

HENRI ÉTIENNE, Les Prémices.

If I were a man and a young man,
And knew what I know today.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

If youth knew what age would crave,
It would both get and save.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6085.

While strength and years permit, endure labor;
soon bent old age will come with silent foot.
(Dum vires annique sinunt, tolerate labores.
Jam veniet tacito curva senecta pede.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 669.

When we are young we lay up for old age;
when we are old we save for death.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Biens de Fortune.

Old men have in some degree their reprisals upon younger, by making nicer observations upon them.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 256.

Struggle and turmoil, revel and brawl—
Youth is the sign of them, one and all.
A smoldering hearth and a silent stage—
These are a type of the world of Age.

W. E. HENLEY, Ballad of Youth and Age: En-vo-y.

Boys must not have th' ambitious care of
men,
Nor men the weak anxieties of age.

HORACE, Ars Poetica. l. 176. (Dillon, tr.)

'Tis time for thee to be gone, lest, when you have drunk too freely, youth mock and jostle you off the stage, playing the wanton with better grace. (Tempus abire tibi est, ne potum largius æquo Rideat et pulset lasciva decentius ætas.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 215.

"Let me not live," quoth he,
"After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits."

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act.
i, sc. 2, l. 58.

The luck will turn. . . . Presently the younger generation will come knocking at my door.

IBSEN, The Master Builder. Act i.

As newer comers crowd the fore,
We drop behind—
We who have laboured long and sore
Times out of mind,
And keen are yet, must not regret
To drop behind.

THOMAS HARDY, The Superseded.

All the world's a mass of folly,
Youth is gay, age melancholy:
Youth is spending, age is thrifty,
Mad at twenty, cold at fifty;
Man is nought but folly's slave,
From the cradle to the grave.

W. H. IRELAND, Of the Folly of all the World.

Your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions.

Old Testament: Joel, ii, 28.

Youth lives on hope, old age on remembrance.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

8
The conversation of the old and the young ends generally with contempt or pity on either side.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 69.

Power pleases the violent and proud; wealth delights the placid and the timorous. Youth therefore flies at power, and age grovels after riches.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. x, p. 431.

10
Young men differ in various ways, but old men all look alike. (Plurima sunt juvenum discrimina, . . . una senum facies.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 196.

11
Around the child bend all the three
Sweet Graces—Faith, Hope, Charity.
Around the man bend other faces—
Pride, Envy, Malice are his Graces.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Around the Child.

12
He who hath braved Youth's dizzy heat
Dreads not the frost of Age.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, To Age.

And boasting youth, and narrative old age,
Their pleas were diff'rent, their request the same;

For good and bad alike are fond of fame.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 291.

Where the older age sins, the younger is led astray. (Quod ætas vitium posuit, ætas auferet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 557.

Where old age is evil, youth can learn no good.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

15
To love is natural in a young man, a crime in an old one. (Amare juveni fructus est, crimen seni.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 29.

Who early loves, though young, is wise—
Who old, though grey, a fool.

COWPER, Upon a Venerable Rival.

Youth is the proper time for love,
And age is virtue's season.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Corinna.

They who would be young when they are old,
must be old when they are young.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

17
Of young men die many; of old escape not any.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

O, roses for the flush of youth,
And laurel for the perfect prime;
But pluck an ivy branch for me,
Grown old before my time.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Song.

The young man who has not wept is a savage, and the old man who will not laugh is a fool.
GEORGE SANTAYANA, Dialogues in Limbo.

A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sables and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 78.

Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So thou through windows of thine age shall see,
Despite of wrinkles this thy golden time.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. iii.

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together:
Youth is full of pleasance, age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame;
Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee; youth, I do adore thee.

Youth is the time for the adventures of the body, but age for the triumphs of the mind.
LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, On Reading Shakespeare, p. 36.

In the days of my youth I remembered my God,
And He hath not forgotten my age.
SOUTHEY, The Old Man's Comforts.

All sorts of allowances are made for the illusions of youth; and none, or almost none, for the disenchantments of age.
R. L. STEVENSON, *Virginibus Puerisque:
Crabbed Age and Youth*.

When an old gentleman waggles his head and says: "Ah, so I thought when I was your age," it is not thought an answer at all if the young man retorts: "My venerable sir, so shall I most probably think when I am yours." And yet the one is as good as the other.

R. L. STEVENSON, *Virginibus Puerisque:
Crabbed Age and Youth*.

Age may have one side, but assuredly Youth has the other. There is nothing more certain than that both are right, except perhaps that both are wrong.

R. L. STEVENSON, *Virginibus Puerisque:
Crabbed Age and Youth*.

9
A full, busy youth is your only prelude to a self-contained and independent age; and the muff inevitably develops into the bore.

R. L. STEVENSON, *Virginibus Puerisque:
Crabbed Age and Youth*.

10
A young man will be wiser by and by;
An old man's wit may wander ere he die.
TENNYSON, The Coming of Arthur, l. 403.

The tears of the young who go their way,
Last a day;
But the grief is long of the old who stay.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, A Home Idyll. Pt. xv.

Youth is confident, manhood wary, and old age confident again.
MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Experience.

13
Youth, large, lusty, loving—youth full of grace, force, fascination,
Do you know that Old Age may come after you with equal grace, force, fascination?
WALT WHITMAN, Youth, Day, Old Age and Night.

14
A happy youth, and their old age
Is beautiful and free.
WORDSWORTH, The Fountain, l. 43.

Of all the barbarous middle ages, that
Which is most barbarous is the middle age
Of man; it is—I really scarce know what;
But when we hover between fool and sage.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 1.

Since more than half my hopes came true
And more than half my fears
Are but the pleasant laughing-stock
Of these my middle years:— . . .
Shall I not bless the middle years?

Not I for youth repine
While warmly round me cluster lives
More dear to me than mine.
SARAH N. CLEGHORN, Contented at Forty.

In the middle of the journey of our life. (Nel mezzo del cammin di nostra vita.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto i, l. 1.

Thyself no more deceive, thy youth hath fled.
PETRARCH, To Laura in Death. Sonnet 82.

So take the hint, the hands of Time
Are pointing, not unkindly,
Back to the hills we used to climb

While prospects beckoned blindly.

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, Farewell to Town.

The pools of art and memory keep Reflections of our fallen towers,
And every princess there asleep,
Whom once we kissed, is always ours.

E. B. C. JONES, Middle-Age.

1 Sweet is the infant's waking smile,

And sweet the old man's rest—

But middle age by no fond wile,

No soothing calm is blest.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: St. Philip and St. James. St. 3.

I may not be Meethosalem, but I am not a child in arms.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Bk. i, ch. 44.

2 Of middle age the best that can be said is that a middle-aged person has likely learned how to have a little fun in spite of his troubles.

DON MARQUIS, The Almost Perfect State.

3 Let us, then, love the perfect day,

The twelve o'clock of life, and stop

The two hands pointing to the top,

And hold them tightly while we may.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Sea of Fire. Canto xxiii.

4 Thou'lt find thy Manhood all too fast—

Soon come, soon gone! and age at last

A sorry breaking-up!

THOMAS MOORE, Ode: Clapham Academy.

5 To be interested in the changing seasons is,
in this middling zone, a happier state of mind than to be hopelessly in love with spring.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 277.

6 On his bold visage middle age

Had slightly press'd its signet sage,

Yet had not quench'd the open truth

And fiery vehemence of youth;

Forward and frolic glee was there,

The will to do, the soul to dare.

SCOTT, Lady of The Lake. Canto i, st. 21.
(1810)

Age has now

Stamped with its signet that ingenuous brow.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life. (1819)

7 Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you,
some relish of the saltiness of time.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 108.

8 Pass, thou wild heart,

Wild heart of youth that still

Hast half a will

To stay.

I grow too old a comrade, let us part:

Pass thou away.

WILLIAM WATSON, Leavetaking.

Once he sang of summer,
Nothing but the summer;
Now he sings of winter,
Of winter bleak and drear;
Just because there's fallen
A snowflake on his forehead
He must go and fancy
'Tis winter all the year!

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, A Snowflake.

9 Among the peaceful harvest days,
An Indian Summer comes at last!

ADELINE D. T. WHITNEY, Equinoctial.

10 Ho, pretty page with the dimpled chin

That never has known the barber's shear,

All your wish is woman to win,

This is the way that boys begin,—

Wait till you come to Forty Year.

Forty times over let Michaelmas pass,

Grizzling hair the brain doth clear,—

Then you know a boy is an ass,

Then you know the worth of a lass,

Once you have come to Forty Year.

THACKERAY, The Age of Wisdom.

Forty years on, growing older and older,

Shorter in wind and in memory long,

Feeble of foot and rheumatic of shoulder,

What will it help you that once you were young?

UNKNOWN, Harrow School Song.

11 Be wise with speed;

A fool at forty is a fool indeed.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire ii, l. 281.

He who at fifty is a fool

Is far too stubborn grown for school.

NATHANIEL COTTON, Slander.

12 A boy may still detest age,

But as for me I know

A man has reached his best age

At forty-two or so.

R. C. LEHMANN, Middle Age.

III—Age: Old Age

13 To know how to grow old is the master-work of wisdom, and one of the most difficult chapters in the great art of living.

AMIEL, Journal, 21 Sept., 1874.

Few people know how to be old. (Peu de gens savent être vieux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 423.

14 Age has crept upon thee unperceived, nor canst thou call back the days that are gone.
(Obrepsit non intellecta senectus Nec revocare potes, qui periere, dies.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. xxxiv, l. 3.

Whilst we drink, and call for garlands, for perfumes, and for maidens,
Old age is creeping on us unperceived.

(Dum bibimus, dum sarta unguenta puellas Poscimus, obrepit non intellecta senectus.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 128.

But on us both did haggish age steal on.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 29.

For Age, with stealing steps,
Hath clawed me with his clutch.
THOMAS VAUX, *The Aged Lover Renounceth
Love* (c. 1550). Quoted by Shakespeare,
Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 79.

Old age comes on apace to ravage all the clime.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, st. 25.

I am too old, and the seas are too long, for me to double the Cape of Good Hope.
FRANCIS BACON, Memorial of Access.

Age will not be defied.
BACON, Essays: Of Regiment of Health.

What's a man's age? He must hurry more,
that's all;
Cram in a day what his youth took a year to hold.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess.

I am long on ideas, but short on time. I expect to live to be only about a hundred.
THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, April, 1931.)

This I know without being told,
'Tis time to live as I grow old.
'Tis time short pleasures now to take,
Of little Life the best to make,
And manage wisely the last stake.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Age.

Age is like love, it cannot be hid.
THOMAS DEKKER, Fortunatus. Act ii, sc. 1.

Few envy the consideration enjoyed by the oldest inhabitant.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

We do not count a man's years, until he has nothing else to count.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

It is time to be old, To take in sail.
EMERSON, Terminus.

Sir, you shall taste my anno domini.
FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1.

Old and well stricken in age.
Old Testament: Genesis, xviii, 11.

And if I should live to be
The last leaf upon the tree
In the spring,
Let them smile, as I do now,
At the old forsaken bough
Where I cling.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, The Last Leaf.

Age is rarely despised but when it is contemptible.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 50.

Is age a sorrow, then, too great to share?
Or to be old, perhaps, is not to care.

EDWARD D. KENNEDY, Strange, Is It Not?

We dread old age, yet how few attain it! . . .
We hope to grow old and we dread old age;
that is to say, we love life and flee from death. (L'on espère de vieillir, et l'on craint la vieillesse.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. xi.

Every man desires to live long; but no man would be old.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

All would live long, but none would be old.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

Age loves to give good precepts to console itself for being no longer able to give bad examples. (Les vieillards aiment à donner de bons préceptes, pour se consoler de n'être plus en état de donner de mauvais exemples.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 93.

In growing old, one grows more foolish and more wise. (En vieillissant, on devient plus fou et plus sage.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 210.

Old age makes us wiser and more foolish.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
The inaudible and noiseless foot of Time
Steals ere we can effect them.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act v,
sc. 3, l. 40.

I confess that I am old; Age is unnecessary.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 156.

I am declined into the vale of years.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 265.

Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 198.

Old men and comets have been revered for the same reason: their long beards, and pretences to foretell events.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Works. Vol. iii, p. 409.

The older I grow the more I distrust the familiar doctrine that age brings wisdom.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 311.

IV—Age: Senility

Everyone knows that old men are twice boys. (Ἐγὼ δὲ γ' ἀντρεποῦν' ἄν' ὡς δὺς παῖδες οἱ γέροντες.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 1417.

Old men are children for the second time. (Δὶς παῖδες οἱ γέροντες.)

MENANDER, Xera: Fragment.

Once a man reaches the witless stage, without senses or mentality, they say that he has grown a child again. (Senex quom extemplo est, jam nec sentit nec sapit, Aiunt solere eum rorum repuerascere.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 295. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

Old men are twice children.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Jealous Lovers, iii, 6.

An old man is twice a child.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 404. TAYLOR, The Old, Old, Very Old Man.

1 Old Age, a second child, by Nature curst, With more and greater evils than the first: Weak, sickly, full of pains, in every breath Railing at life and yet afraid of death.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. i, l. 215.

2 Senile debility, usually called "dotage," is a characteristic, not of all old men, but only of those who are weak in mind and will. (Ista senilis stultitia, quæ deliratio appellari solet, senum levium est, non omnium.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xi, sec. 36.

3 The ruins of himself! now worn away With age, yet still majestic in decay.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxiv, l. 271. (Pope, tr.)

And a crook is in his back,
And a melancholy crack

In his laugh.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, The Last Leaf.

A poor, weak, palsy-stricken, churchyard thing.

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 18.

4 On his last legs.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1.

Went on three feet, and sometimes crept on four,
His withered fist still knocking at death's door.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Mirror for Magistrates: Old Age.

5 Last scene of all,
That ends this strange, eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 163.

6 Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 149.

A poor, infirm, weak, and despised old man.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 20.

Palsied eld.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 36.

The lean and slippered pantaloons.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 158.

The oldest man he seemed that ever wore grey hairs.

WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence.

V—Age: Facing the Sunset

7 Beyond the ever and the never,

I shall be soon.

Love, rest, and home!

Sweet hope!

Lord, tarry not, but come.

HORATIUS BONAR, Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping.

Abide with me, fast falls the eventide;
The darkness deepens; Lord, with me abide.

HENRY FRANCIS LYTE, Eventide.

8 I stand upon the summit of my years;
Behind, the toil, the camp, the march, the strife,

The wandering and the desert; vast, afar,
Beyond this weary way, behold! the Sea!

JOSEPH BROWNLEE BROWN, Thalatta! Thalatta!

9 And he died in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honour.

Old Testament: I Chronicles, xxix, 28.

10 Drawing near her death, she sent most pious thoughts as harbingers to heaven; and her soul saw a glimpse of happiness through the chinks of her sickness-broken body.

THOMAS FULLER, Life of Monica. Bk. i, ch. 2.

To vanish in the chinks that Time has made.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: Pastum, l. 59. (c. 1820)

No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs;
The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure, that should confine it in,
So thin that life looks through and will break out.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 117. (1597)

The soul's dark cottage, battered and decayed,
Lets in new light through chinks that time has made;

Stronger by weakness, wiser men become,
As they draw near to their eternal home.
Leaving the old, both worlds at once they view,
That stand upon the threshold of the new.

EDMUND WALLER, Of the Last Verses in the Book. (1645)

The robe of flesh wears thin, and with the years
God shines through all things.

JOHN BUCHAN, The Wise Years.

11 So peaceful shalt thou end thy blissful days,
And steal thyself from life by slow decays.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 164. (Pope, tr.)

An age that melts with unperceiv'd decay,
And glides in modest innocence away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 293.

Bends to the grave with unperceiv'd decay,
While Resignation gently slopes the way;

And, all his prospects bright'ning to the last,
His Heaven commences ere the world be pass'd.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 109.

<sup>1</sup> When he's forsaken, Wither'd and shaken,
What can an old man do but die?
THOMAS HOOD, Ballad: Spring It Is Cheery.

<sup>2</sup> Superfluous lags the veteran on the stage,
Till pitying Nature signs the last release,
And bids afflicted worth retire to peace.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes,
l. 308.

<sup>3</sup> I strove with none, for none was worth my strife.
Nature I loved, and, next to Nature, Art;
I warmed both hands before the fire of Life;
It sinks, and I am ready to depart.
W. S. LANDOR, The Last Fruit of an Old Tree: Dedication.

<sup>4</sup> For you the To-come,
But for me the Gone-by;
You are panting to live,
I am waiting to die.
RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, An Old Man's Song.

<sup>5</sup> The course of my long life hath reached at last,
In fragile bark o'er a tempestuous sea,
The common harbor, where must rendered be,
Account of all the actions of the past.
LONGFELLOW, Old Age.

<sup>6</sup> Youth having passed, there is nothing to lose but memory. Cherishing the past without regrets and viewing the future without misgivings, we wait, then, for the nightfall when one may rest and call it a life.
GEORGE E. MACDONALD, Fifty Years of Free-thought. Vol. ii, p. 635.

<sup>7</sup> So may'st thou live till, like ripe fruit, thou drop
Into thy mother's lap, or be with ease
Gather'd, not harshly pluck'd, for death mature:
This is old age.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 532.

<sup>8</sup> Would that by no disease, no cares oppress,
I in my sixtieth year were laid to rest.
MIMNERMUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon.
Sec. 17.)

Surely a wiser wish were thus expressed,
At eighty years let me be laid to rest.
SOLON, Fragments. Frag. 20.

<sup>9</sup> I'm wearin' awa', John,
Like snaw-wreaths in thaw, John,
I'm wearin' awa'
To the land o' the leal.
CAROLINA NAIRNE, The Land o' the Leal.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 252.

<sup>11</sup> Old age hath yet his honour and his toil;
Death closes all.
ALFRED TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 50.

<sup>12</sup> For my eightieth year warns me to pack up my baggage before I leave life. (Annus enim octogesimus admonet me, ut sarcinas colli-gam, antequam proficiscare vita.)
VARRO, De Re Rustica, i, 1.

At seventy-seven it is time to be earnest.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, v, 288.)

<sup>13</sup> A little more tired at close of day,
A little less anxious to have our way;
A little less ready to scold and blame;
A little more care of a brother's name;
And so we are nearing the journey's end,
Where time and eternity meet and blend.
ROLIN J. WELLS, Growing Old.

<sup>14</sup> Then Old Age and Experience, hand in hand, Lead him to Death, and make him understand,
After a search so painful and so long,
That all his life he has been in the wrong.
JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, *A Satire
Against Mankind*, l. 25.

VI—Age: Its Love of Life

<sup>15</sup> No one is so old as to think he cannot live one more year. (Nemo est tam senex qui se annum non putet posse vivere.)
CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. vii, sec. 24.

For never any man was yet so old
But hoped his life one winter more might hold.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Old Age. Pt. i, l. 135.

<sup>16</sup> With lying lips prays eld for death's release.
Plaining of age and weary-wearing time.
Let death draw near—who hails his coming?
None:

No more is age a burden.
EURIPIDES, Alcestitis, l. 669.

<sup>17</sup> Yet we hope and hope, and fancy that he who has lived to-day may live to-morrow.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. Vol. iv,
p. 270.)

<sup>18</sup> There is no man so decrepit, whilst he has Methuselah before him, who does not think he has still twenty years of life in his body.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19.

<sup>19</sup> The tree of deepest root is found Least willing still to quit the ground;
'Twas therefore said by ancient sages
That love of life increased with years,
So much that in our later stages,

When pains grow sharp, and sickness rages,
The greatest love of life appears.

HESTER LYNCH PIOZZI, The Three Warnings.

No man is so old that it is improper for him to hope for another day of existence. And one day, mind you, is a stage on life's journey.
(Deinde nemo tam senex est, ut inprobe unum diem speret. Unus autem dies gradus vitæ est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 6.

They that went on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life to see him a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 1, l. 44.

Since, my last moments to assuage,
Your Majesty's humane decree
Has deign'd to leave the choice to me,
I'll die, so please you, of old age.

HORACE SMITH, Jester Condemned to Death.

4
Nobody loves life like an old man.

SOPHOCLES, Acrisius. Frag. 63.

O! why do wretched men so much desire
To draw their days unto the utmost date?

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto iii, st. 1.

VII—Age: Its Compensations

6
In seventy or eighty years, a man may have a deep gust of the world; know what it is, what it can afford, and what 'tis to have been a man.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt.
iii, sec. 22.

Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made:
Our times are in his hand
Who saith, "A whole I planned,
Youth shows but half; trust God: see all,
nor be afraid!"

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 1.

8
For out of old fields, as men saith,
Cometh all this new corn fro year to year.

CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 22.

Though summer goes, remember
The harvest fields;
The color-work of autumn
And what it yields.

FREDERICK HERBERT ADLER, To One Who Fears Old Age.

9
Old age lacks the heavy banquet, the loaded table, and the oft-filled cup; therefore it also lacks drunkenness, indigestion, and loss of sleep.

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xiii, sec. 44.

I am profoundly grateful to old age, which has increased my eagerness for conversation and taken away that for food and drink. (Habeoque senectuti magnam gratiam, quæ mihi sermonis aviditatem auxit, potionis et cibi sustulit.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xiv, sec. 46.

10
Old age, especially when crowned with honor, enjoys an authority which is of more value than all the sensual pleasures of youth.
(Habet senectus, honorata præsertim, tantem auctoritatem, ut ea pluris sit quam omnes adulescentiæ voluptates.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xvii, sec. 61.

It is in old men that reason and judgment are found, and had it not been for old men no state would have existed at all. (Mens enim et ratio et consilium in senibus est, qui si nulli fuissent, nullæ omnino civitates fuissent.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 67.

The fruit of old age is the memory of abundant blessings previously acquired. (Fructus autem senectutis est, ante partorum bonorum memoria et copia.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 71.

11
We come now to the third ground for abusing old age, and that is, that it is devoid of sensual pleasures. O glorious boon of age, if it does indeed free us from youth's most vicious fault!

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 39.

If age had no other pleasure than this, . . . it were a great one to have left all my painful and troublesome lusts behind me.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 5.

Heaven forbid! I have fled from them as from a harsh and cruel master! (Di meliora! ego vero istinc sicut a domino agresti ac furioso profugi.)

SOPHOCLES, when asked if he indulged in the delights of love in his old age. (CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xiv, sec. 47.)

The seas are quiet when the winds give o'er:
So, calm are we when passions are no more!

EDMUND WALLER, Of the Last Verses in the Book.

12
Come, Captain Age,
With your great sea-chest full of treasure!
Under the yellow and wrinkled tarpaulin
Disclose the carved ivory
And the sandalwood inlaid with pearl:
Riches of wisdom and years.

SARAH N. CLEGHORN, Come, Captain Age.

Then welcome age, and fear not sorrow;
Today's no better than tomorrow. . . .
I know we grow more lovely Growing wise.

ALICE CORBIN, Two Voices.

13
And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light;
In front, the sun climbs slow, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, *Say Not the Struggle
Nought Availeth*.

Suffer, O silent one, that I remind thee
Of the great hills that stormed the sky behind
thee,
Of the wild winds of power that have resigned
thee.

ALICE MEYNELL, Letter from a Girl to Her Old Age.

<sup>1</sup>
The year grows rich as it groweth old,
And life's latest sands are its sands of gold!
JULIA C. R. DORR, To the "Bouquet Club."

<sup>2</sup>
[Age] has weathered the perilous capes and shoals in the sea whereon we sail, and the chief evil of life is taken away in removing the grounds of fear. . . . At every stage we lose a foe. At fifty years, 'tis said, afflicted citizens lose their sick-headaches.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

Old age brings along with its ugliness the comfort that you will soon be out of it. . . . To be out of the war, out of debt, out of the drouth, out of the blues, out of the dentist's hands, out of the second thoughts, mortifications, and re-morses that inflict such twinges and shooting pains,—out of the next winter, and the high prices!

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. x, p. 51.

<sup>3</sup>
O blest retirement, friend to life's decline,
Retreats from care, that never must be mine,
How blest is he who crowns in shades like these,
A youth of labour with an age of ease;
Who quits a world where strong temptations
try,
And, since 'tis hard to combat, learns to fly!
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 97.

God on our Youth bestows but little ease,
But on our Age most sweet indulgences.

ROBERT HERRICK, Youth and Age.

<sup>5</sup>
Many blessings do the advancing years bring with them; many, as they retire, they take away. (Multa ferunt anni venientes commoda secum, Multa recedentes adimunt.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 175.

<sup>6</sup>
Light heart, light foot, light food, and slumber light,
These lights shall light us to old age's gate,
While monarchs, whom rebellious dreams
affright,
Heavy with fear, death's fearful summons
wait.

EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, When In the Woods I Wander All Alone.

<sup>7</sup>
With the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days understanding.

Old Testament: Job, xii, 12.

The essence of age is intellect.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.
Old age takes from the man of intellect no qualities save those which are useless to wisdom. (La vieillesse n'ôte à l'homme d'esprit que des qualités inutiles à la sagesse.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 87.

As you are old and reverend, you should be wise.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 262.

<sup>8</sup>
In the decline of life, shame and grief are of short duration.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 4.

We grow with years more fragile in body, but morally stouter, and we can throw off the chill of a bad conscience almost at once.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

<sup>9</sup>
It is too late! Ah, nothing is too late
Till the tired heart shall cease to palpitate.
Cato learned Greek at eighty; Sophocles
Wrote his grand Œdipus, and Simonides
Bore off the prize of verse from his compeers,
When each had numbered more than fourscore years, . . .

Chaucer, at Woodstock with the nightingales,
At sixty wrote the Canterbury Tales;
Goethe at Weimar, toiling to the last,
Completed Faust when eighty years were past.

These are indeed exceptions; but they show
How far the gulf-stream of our youth may flow

Into the arctic regions of our lives. . . .
For age is opportunity no less
Than youth itself, though in another dress,
And as the evening twilight fades away
The sky is filled with stars, invisible by day.
LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 238.

<sup>10</sup>
Age is not all decay; it is the ripening, the swelling, of the fresh life within, that withers and bursts the husk.

GEORGE MACDONALD, The Marquis of Lossie.
Ch. 40.

<sup>11</sup>
Not till the fire is dying in the grate,
Look we for any kinship with the stars.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 4.

<sup>12</sup>
We age inevitably:
The old joys fade and are gone:
And at last comes equanimity and the flame burning clear.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, New Year's Eve.

<sup>13</sup>
Certainly old age has a great sense of calm and freedom; when the passions relax their hold, then, as Sophocles says, you have escaped from the control not of one master, but of many.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. i, sec. 329.

<sup>14</sup>
Why will you break the Sabbath of my days,
Now sick alike of Envy and of Praise?

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 3.

In life's cool ev'ning, satiate of applause.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 9.

1 Life is most delightful when it is on the downward slope. (Jucundissima est ætas devexa jam.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 5.

2 Let us cherish and love old age; for it is full of pleasure, if one knows how to use it. . . . The best morsel is reserved to the last. (Conplectamur illam at amemus; plena est voluptatis, si illa scias uti. . . . Quod is se jucundissimum omnis voluptas habet, in finem sui differt.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 4.

Of earthly blessing age is not the least,
Serene its twilight sky, the journey past;
Like that rare draught at Cana's marriage feast,
Life's best wine is the last.

FRANCES E. POPE, The End of the Road.

The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 68.

3 More are men's ends mark'd than their lives before:

The setting sun, and music at the close,
As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,
Writ in remembrance more than things long past.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 11.

4 The day becomes more solemn and serene
When noon is past: there is a harmony
In Autumn, and a lustre in its sky
Which through the Summer is not heard or seen,

As if it could not be, as if it had not been!

SHELLEY, Hymn to Intellectual Beauty. St. 7.

5 Old age and the wear of time teach many things. (Γῆρας διδάσκει πολλά καὶ χρόνου τριβή.)

SOPHOCLES, Tyro. Frag. 586.

WALT WHITMAN, To Old Age.

The lights indeed from them—old age's lambent peaks.

WALT WHITMAN, Old Age's Lambent Peaks.

11

Honorable age is not that which standeth in length of time, nor that is measured by number of years. But wisdom is the gray hair unto men, and an unspotted life is old age.

APOCRYPHA: Wisdom of Solomon, iv, 8, 9.

VIII—Age: Its Penalties

12

What is it to grow old? . . .

Ah, 'tis not what in youth we dreamed 'twould be!

'Tis not to have our life

Mellowed and softened as with sunset glow,

A golden day's decline. . . .

It is to spend long days

And not once feel that we were ever young; . . .

It is—last stage of all!—

To hear the world applaud the hollow ghost
Which blessed the living man.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Growing Old.

The foot less prompt to meet the morning dew,
The heart less bounding at emotion new,
And hope, once crushed, less quick to spring again.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Thyrsis. St. 14.

Remember age, and thou canst not be proud,
For age pulls down the pride of every man.

RICHARD BARNEFIELD, The Affectionate Shepherd. St. 31.

15

Old age doth in sharp pains abound;

We are belabored by the gout,

Our blindness is a dark profound,

Our deafness each one laughs about.

Then reason's light with falling ray

Doth but a trembling flicker cast.

Honor to age, ye children pay!

Alas! my fifty years are past!

When once life's day draws near the gloamin',

Then fareweel vacant, careless roamin';
An' fareweel cheerfu' tankards foamin';

An' social noise;
An' fareweel dear, deluding Woman,
The joy of joys!

BURNS, Epistle to James Smith. St. 14.

I've seen sae monie changefu' years,
On earth I am a stranger grown;
I wander in the ways of men,
Alike unknowing and unknown.

BURNS, Lament for James, Earl of Glencairn.
What is the worst of woes that wait on age?
What stamps the wrinkle deeper on the brow?
To view each loved one blotted from life's page,
And be alone on earth, as I am now.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 98.
How strange it seems, with so much gone
Of life and love, to still live on!

WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 181.

He, who grown aged in this world of woe,
In deeds, not years, piercing the depths of life.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 5.

3
Years steal
Fire from the mind as vigour from the limb,
And life's enchanted cup but sparkles near the brim.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 8.

4
Just as old age is creeping on apace,
And clouds come o'er the sunset of our day,
They kindly leave us, though not quite alone,
But in good company—the gout or stone.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 59.

My days are in the yellow leaf;
The flowers and fruits of love are gone;
The worm, the canker, and the grief
Are mine alone!

BYRON, On This Day I Complete My Thirty-sixth Year.

Though the night was made for loving,
And the day returns too soon,
Yet we'll go no more a roving
By the light of the moon.

BYRON, So We'll Go No More A Roving.

Statesmen and beauties are very rarely sensible of the gradations of their decay; and, too sanguinely hoping to shine on in their meridian, often set with contempt and ridicule.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Feb., 1754.

The heart never grows better by age; I fear rather worse; always harder. A young liar will be an old one; and a young knave will only be a greater knave as he grows older.

When I was young?—Ah, woeful When!
Ah! for the change 'twixt Now and Then!
This breathing house not built with hands,
This body that does me grievous wrong,
O'er aery cliffs and glittering sands,
How lightly then it flashed along:—
Like those trim skiffs, unknown of yore,
On winding lakes and rivers wide,
That ask no aid of sail or oar,
That fear no spite of wind or tide!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age, l. 6.

Flowers are lovely; Love is flower-like;
Friendship is a sheltering tree;
O! the joys that came down shower-like,
Of Friendship, Love, and Liberty,
Ere I was old!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age, l. 18.

Like some poor nigh-related guest,
That may not rudely be dismissed,
Yet hath outstay'd his welcome while,
And tells the jest without the smile.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age, l. 46.

Oh! better, then, to die and give
The grave its kindred dust,

Than live to see Time's bitter change
In those we love and trust.

That life protracted is protracted woe.
Time hovers o'er, impatient to destroy,
And shuts up all the passages of joy.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 257.

10 There is a wicked inclination in most people to suppose an old man decayed in his intellects. If a young or middle-aged man, when leaving a company, does not recollect where he laid his hat, it is nothing; but if the same inattention is discovered in an old man, people will shrug up their shoulders, and say "His memory is going."

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iv, 181.)

11 Young men have more virtue than old men; they have more generous sentiments in every respect.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, i, 445.)

I hope our young men will not grow into such dodgers as these old men are.

16 Whatever poet, orator, or sage
May say of it, old age is still old age.
It is the waning, not the crescent moon;
The dusk of evening, not the blaze of noon;
It is not strength, but weakness; not desire,
But its surcease; not the fierce heat of fire,
The burning and consuming element,
But that of ashes and of embers spent.

What makes old age so sad is, not that our joys but that our hopes cease. (Das Alter ist nicht trübe weil darin unsere Freuden, sondern weil unsere Hoffnungen aufhören.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 34.

10
I'm growing fonder of my staff;
I'm growing dimmer in the eyes;
I'm growing fainter in my laugh;
I'm growing deeper in my sighs;
I'm growing careless of my dress;
I'm growing frugal of my gold;
I'm growing wise, I'm growing—yes,
I'm growing old.

JOHN G. SAXE, I'm Growing Old.

And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe,
And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 26.

15
There is an old poor man, . . .
Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 129.

These tedious old fools!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 223.

NO FOOL LIKE AN OLD FOOL, see under FOOL.

16
The satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potentially believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for you yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 198.

At your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 68.

And 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 3.

Falstaff: You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you do measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Chief Justice: Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? is not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with antiquity? and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 197.

Pray, do not mock me:
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Forescore and upward; not an hour more nor less,

And, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 59.

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 100.

I have lived long enough; my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but in their stead,
Curses, not loud but deep; mouth-honour,
breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 3, l. 24.

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,—

Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxxiii.

When thou art old and rich,
Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty,

To make thy riches pleasant.

5
When the age is in, the wit is out.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing.

Act iii, sc. 5, l. 37. A play upon the proverb,
"When the wine is in, the wit is out."

6
The eternal dawn, beyond a doubt,

Shall break on hill and plain,

And put all stars and candles out

Ere we be young again.

R. L. STEVENSON, To Minnie.

7
When men grow virtuous in their old age they are merely making a sacrifice to God of the devil's leavings.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Occasions.

8
Fires that shook me once, but now to silent ashes fall'n away.

Cold upon the dead volcano sleeps the gleam of dying day.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After. St. 21.

Old age brings this one vice to mankind, that we all think too much of money. (Solum unum hoc vitium adfert senectus hominibus, adtentiores sumus ad rem omnes, quam sat est.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 833. (Act v, sc. 3.)

A man can no more separate age and covetousness than a' can part young limbs and lechery.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 256.

That disease

Of which all old men sicken,—avarice.

MIDDLETON, The Roaring Girl. Act i, sc. 1.

So for a good old-gentlemanly vice,

I think I must take up with avarice.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 216.

Avarice is the vice of declining years.

Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 3,
l. 47.

<sup>1</sup>
You are old, Father William, the young man
cried,

The few locks which are left you are grey;
You are hale, Father William, a hearty old man,

Now tell me the reason, I pray.

In the days of my youth, Father William replied,

I remember'd that youth would fly fast,
And abused not my health and my vigour at first,

That I never might need them at last.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Old Man's Comforts.

"You are old, Father William," the young man
said,

"And your hair has become very white;
And yet you incessantly stand on your head—
Do you think, at your age, it is right?"

"In my youth," Father William replied to his son,

"I feared it might injure the brain;
But, now that I'm perfectly sure I have none,
Why, I do it again and again."

<sup>5</sup>
But an old age serene and bright,
And lovely as a Lapland night,
Shall lead thee to thy grave.

WORDSWORTH, To a Young Lady.

<sup>6</sup>
The monumental pomp of age
Was with this goodly Personage;
A stature undepressed in size,
Unbent, which rather seemed to rise,
In open victory o'er the weight
Of seventy years, to loftier height.

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone.
Canto iii, l. 737.

<sup>7</sup>
Age . . . is a matter of feeling, not of years.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, Prue and I. Ch. vi.

O wherefore our age be revealing?

Leave that to the registry books!

A man is as old as he's feeling,

A woman as old as she looks.

MORTIMER COLLINS, How Old Are You?

One is as old as one's heart. (On a l'âge de son cœur.)

ALFRED D'HOUDETOT, Age.

A man is as old as his arteries.

Quoted by DR. JOHN HARVEY KELLOGG as from "an eminent French physiologist."

X—Age: Its Crown of Glory

See also Hair: Gray

<sup>8</sup>
The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 31.

The beauty of old men is the gray head.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 29.

Thy white locks, the blossom of old age.

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 42.

<sup>9</sup>
But now your brow is beld, John,
Your locks are like the snow;

But blessings on your frosty pow,

John Anderson my jo.

ROBERT BURNS, John Anderson My Jo.

Nor can the snow, which now cold Age does shed

Upon thy reverend head,

Quench or allay the noble fires within.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, To Mr. Hobs. St. 6.

<sup>10</sup>
A little more toward the light;—
Me miserable! Here's one that's white;

And one that's turning;

Adieu to song and "salad days";

My Muse, let's go at once to Jay's,

And order mourning.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Growing Gray.

Come let me pluck that silver hair

Which 'mid thy clustering curls I see;

The withering type of time or care

Has nothing, sure, to do with thee.

ALARIC ALEX WATTS, The Grey Hair.

<sup>11</sup>
We grizzle every day. I see no need of it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

He is more than halfway

On the road from Grizzle to Grey.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Robert the Rhymer's Account of Himself.

<sup>1</sup> "Gray temples at twenty?"—Yes! white if we please!

Where the snow-flakes fall thickest there's nothing can freeze!

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, The Boys.

<sup>2</sup> Though Time has touched it in his flight,
And changed the auburn hair to white.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv, l. 388.

<sup>3</sup> Remote from cities liv'd a Swain,
Unvex'd with all the cares of gain;
His head was silver'd o'er with age,
And long experience made him sage.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Pt. i, Introduction.

<sup>4</sup> My whitening hair softens a spirit prone to strife and wanton brawling; I had not brooked such insult when hot with youth, in the consulship of Plancus. (Lenit albescens animos capillus Litium et rixæ cupidos protervæ; Non ego hoc ferrem calidus juvena Consule Planco.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 14, l. 25.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 13, l. 12.

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 539. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

<sup>7</sup> Darling, I am growing old,
Silver threads among the gold
Shine upon my brow today;
Life is fading fast away.

EBEN E. REXFORD, Silver Threads Among the Gold. (1873)

<sup>8</sup> The silver livery of advised age.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 47.

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 5, l. 52.

<sup>9</sup> When white hairs thatch the furrowed brow

Crowns come too late!

RICHARD HENRY STODDARD, Threescore and Ten.

XI—Age and Learning

<sup>10</sup> It is always in season for the old to learn.

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 224.

<sup>11</sup> Nor does age prevent our persisting in the study of other matters, and especially agriculture, even to the latest period of old age. (Nec ætas impedit quo minus et ceterarum rerum, et in primis agri colendi studia teneamus, usque ad ultimum tempus senectutis.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 17, sec. 60.

<sup>12</sup> If I were running in the stadium, ought I to slacken my pace when approaching the goal? ought I not rather to put on speed?

DIOGENES, when told that he should take a rest, since he was an old man. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 34.)

The riders in a race do not stop short when they reach the goal. There is a little finishing canter before coming to a standstill. There is time to hear the kind voice of friends and to say to one's self: "The work is done."

JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Radio Address on his 90th birthday.

<sup>13</sup> Nothing is more dishonorable than an old man, heavy with years, who has no other evidence of having lived long except his age.

SENECA, De Tranquillitate. Ch. iii, sec. 7.

An old man learning his A B C is a disgraceful and absurd object; the young man must store up, the old man must use. (Turpis et ridicula res est elementarius senex; juveni parandum, seni utendum est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxvi, 4.

What a stupid thing is an old man learning an alphabet! (La sottie chose qu'un vieillard abecedaïre!)

<sup>14</sup> The head grey, and no brains yet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4587.

SOLON. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 31.)

I am still learning. (Ancora imparo.)

MICHELANGELO. His motto.

<sup>16</sup> The latter part of a wise man's life is taken up in curing the follies, prejudices, and false opinions he had contracted in the former.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

XII—Age: Its Garrulity

<sup>17</sup> When a man fell into his anecdoteage it was a sign for him to retire from the world.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 28. "The world in its anecdoteage" is referred to in the preface to Isaac D'Israeli's Curiosities of Literature.

But oh! the biggest muff afloat
Is he who takes to anecdote.

HENRY SAMBROOKE LEIGH, Men I Dislike.

<sup>18</sup> Miss not the discourse of the elders.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 14.

Narrative old age.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 291.

<sup>20</sup> Chiefs who no more in bloody fights engage,
But, wise thro' time, and narrative with age,

In summer-days like grasshoppers rejoice,
A bloodless race. that send a feeble voice.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 199. (Pope, tr.)

As ancient Priam at the Scæan gate
Sat on the walls of Troy in regal state
With the old men, too old and weak to fight,
Chirping like grasshoppers in their delight
To see the embattled hosts, with spear and shield,
Of Trojans and Achæans in the field.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 78.

It was near a miracle to see an old man silent, since talking is the disease of age.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Homeri Ulysses.

A fond old man is often as full of words as a woman.

SIR THOMAS MORE, English Works, p. 1169.

A good old man, sir; he will be talking.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 36.

What should we speak of
When we are old as you? When we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 36.

Age too shines out: and, garrulous, recounts
The feats of youth.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 1231.

XIII—Age: In Women: Its Beauty

The autumn of the beautiful is beautiful.
(Pulchrorum autumnus pulcher.)

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty. Quoted.

5
And there is healing in old trees,
Old streets a glamour hold;

Why may not I, as well as these,

Grow lovely, growing old?

KARLE WILSON BAKER, Let Me Grow Lovely.

Laura was blooming still, had made the best
Of time, and time return'd the compliment.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 23.

As a white candle in a holy place,
So is the beauty of an aged face.

JOSEPH CAMPBELL, The Old Woman.

8
No Spring, nor Summer Beauty hath such grace

As I have seen in one Autumnal face.

JOHN DONNE, Elegies: No. 9, Autumnal.

It may be, old age is gentle and fair . . .
Still I shall tremble at a gray hair.

DOROTHY DOW, Unbeliever.

The dear old ladies whose cheeks are pink
In spite of the years of Winter's chill,
Are like the Autumn leaves, I think,
A little crumpled, but lovely still.

JANIE SCREVEN HEYWARD, Autumn Leaves.

11
You are beautiful and faded,
Like an old opera tune
Played upon a harpsichord.

AMY LOWELL, A Lady.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
Such seems your beauty still.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. civ.

But spite of Heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 13.

13
Women sit or move to and fro, some old, some young,

The young are beautiful—but the old are more beautiful than the young.

WALT WHITMAN, Beautiful Women.

XIV—Age: In Women: Its Ugliness

14
By candle-light nobody would have taken you for above five-and-twenty.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Maid of the Mill. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1760)

And a very nice girl you'll find her!
She may pass very well for forty-three
In the dusk, with a light behind her.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

15
A lady of a "certain age," which means
Certainly aged.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 69.

She was not old, nor young, nor at the years
Which certain people call a "certain age,"
Which yet the most uncertain age appears.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 22.

There are three classes into which all elderly women that I ever knew were to be divided:
first, that dear old soul; second, that old woman; third, that old witch.

17
She might be young, some forty years ago.

COWPER, Truth, l. 132.

18
Old women sit, stiffly, mosaics of pain, . . .
Their memories: a heap of tumbling stones,
Once builded stronger than a city wall.

BABETTE DEUTSCH, Old Women.

Once they were flowers, and flame, and living bread;

Now they are old and brown and all but dead!

MARYA ZATURENSKA, Spinners at Willowsleigh.

Phyllis, 'tis true thy glass does run,
But since mine too keeps equal pace,
My silver hair may trouble thee,
As much as me thy ruined face.

THOMAS FLATMAN, Song on Wedlock.

20
To everybody's prejudice I know a thing or two;

I can tell a woman's age in half a minute—
and I do.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act i.
One should never trust a woman who tells one her real age. A woman who would tell one that would tell one anything.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act i.

1
What though she be toothless and bald as a coote?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. i, ch. v.

Ladies, stock and tend your hive,
Trifle not at thirty-five;
For howe'er we boast and strive,
Life declines from thirty-five.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, *To Mrs. Thrale, When
Thirty-five*, l. 11.

3
The hell of women is old age. (L'enfer des femmes, c'est la vieillesse.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No.
562. Said to have been addressed by La Roche foucauld to his former mistress, Ninon de l'Enclos, who died in 1705 at the age of 90.

When you try to conceal your wrinkles, Polla, by the use of bean-meal, you deceive yourself, not me. Let a blemish, which perhaps is small, be undisguised. A fault which is hidden is deemed greater than it is. (Lomento rugas uteri quod condere temptas, Polla, tibi ven-trem, non mihi labra linis. Simpliciter pateat vitium fortasse pusillum: Quod tegitur, majus creditur esse malum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, ep. 42.
Double we see those faults which art would mend.

MARTIAL, Epigrams, iii, 42. (Sedley, tr.)
Sovereigns may sway materials, but not matter,
And wrinkles, the d——d democrats, won't flatter.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 24.

My aunt! my poor deluded aunt!
Her hair is almost gray;
Why will she train that winter curl
In such a spring-like way?

O. W. HOLMES, My Aunt.

5
The time will come when it will vex you to look at a mirror, and grief will prove a second cause of wrinkles. (Tempus erit, quo vos speculum videsse pigebit, Et veniet rugis altera causa dolor.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 47.
Here, Cyprian, is my jeweled looking-glass,
My final gift to bind my final vow:
I cannot see myself as I once was;
I would not see myself as I am now.

ALINE KILMER, To Aphrodite: With a Mirror.
6
She's six-and-forty, and I wish nothing worse to happen to any woman.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act ii.

7
Fat, fair and forty.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 7. The Prince Regent's description of what a wife should be.
A fat, fair and fifty card-playing resident of the Crescent.

MELESINA TRENCH, Letter, 18 Feb., 1816.

I am resolved to grow fat and look young till forty, and then slip out of the world with the first wrinkle and the reputation of five-and-twenty.

DRYDEN, The Maiden Queen. Act iii, sc. 1.

8
Even in the afternoon of her best days.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 7, l.
186.

By the sharp tooth of cankering eld defaced.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, The Schoolmistress. St. 16.

I swear she's no chicken; she's on the wrong side of thirty, if she be a day.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 1.

10
So grieve not, Ladies, if at night
You wake to feel the cold December;

Rather recall the early light,
And in your loved one's arms, remember.
ANNA HEMPSTEAD BRANCH, Grieve Not Ladies.

XV—Age: Old Things Are Best

11
Alonso of Aragon was wont to say in commendation of age, that age appears to be best in four things,—old wood best to burn, old wine to drink, old friends to trust, and old authors to read.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 97.

Old wood to burn! Old wine to drink! Old friends to trust! Old authors to read!—Alonso of Aragon was wont to say in commendation of age, that age appeared to be best in these four things.

MELCHIOR, *Floresta Española de Apothegmas
o Sentencias*, ii, 1, 20.

One who professes the maxim of King Alphonso of Castille—old wood to burn—old books to read —old wine to drink—and old friends . . . to converse with.

SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 6.

12
Our nature here is not unlike our wine;
Some sorts when old continue brisk and fine.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Old Age. Pt. iii, l.
245.

As for age, what that's worth depends on the quality of the liquor.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede.

13
I love everything that's old: old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act i,
sc. 1.

Old loves, old aspirations, and old dreams,
More beautiful for being old and gone.

J. R. LOWELL, The Parting of the Ways.

Old thanks, old thoughts, old aspirations,
Outlive men's lives and lives of nations.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Age and Song.

1 No man also having drunk old wine straightway desireth new; for he saith, The old is better.

New Testament: Luke, v, 39. (Vetus melius est.—Vulgate.)

2 What find you better or more honourable than age? . . . Take the preëminence of it in everything: in an old friend, in old wine, in an old pedigree.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, The Antiquary. Act
ii, sc. 1. (1635)

3 Old wine to drink! . . .

Old wood to burn! . . .

Old books to read! . . .

Old friends to talk! . . .

R. H. MESSINGER, Give Me the Old.

4 So Life's year begins and closes;
Days, though short'ning, still can shine;

What though youth gave love and roses,
Age still leaves us friends and wine.

THOMAS MOORE, Spring and Autumn.
A man not old, but mellow, like good wine.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Ulysses. Act iii, sc. 2.

5 With years a richer life begins,
The spirit mellows:

Ripe age gives tone to violins,

Wine, and good fellows.

JOHN TOWNSEND TROWBRIDGE, Three Worlds.

6 Is not old wine wholesomest, old pippins toothsomest, old wood burn brightest, old linen wash whitest? Old soldiers, sweetheart, are surest, and old lovers are soundest.

JOHN WEBSTER, Westward Hoe! Act ii, sc. 2.
(1603)

XVI—Age: The Age

7 The age of great men is going; the epoch of the ant-hill, of life in multiplicity, is beginning.

AMIEL, Journal, 6 Sept., 1851.

8 Years hence, perhaps, may dawn an age
More fortunate, alas! than we,
Which without hardness will be sage,
And gay without frivolity.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Grande Chartreuse. St. 27.

9 Why slander we the times?

What crimes

Have days and years, that we Thus charge them with iniquity?

If we would rightly scan,

It's not the times are bad, but man.

DR. JOSEPH BEAUMONT, The Times.

10 Every age has its pleasures, its style of wit,
and its own ways.

NICHOLAS BOILEAU-DESPREUX, The Art of Poetry. Canto iii, l. 374.

11 Every age,
Heroic in proportions, double-faced,
Looks backward and before, expects a morn
And claims an epos. Ay, but every age
Appears to souls who live in 't (ask Carlyle)
Most unheroic. Ours, for instance, ours:
The thinkers scout it, and the poets abound
Who scorn to touch it with a finger-tip:
A pewter age,—mixed metal, silver-washed;
An age of scum, spooned off the richer past.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 152.

12 Every age
Through being beheld too close, is ill-discerned.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 167.

13 To complain of the age we live in, to murmur at the present possessors of power, to lament the past, to conceive extravagant hopes of the future, are the common dispositions of the greatest part of mankind.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

The world always had the same bankrupt look,
to foregoing ages as to us,—as of a failed world just re-collecting its old withered forces to begin again and try to do a little business.

EMERSON, Papers from the Dial: Past and Present.

What age was not dull? When was not the majority wicked? or what progress was ever made by society?

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iv, p. 85.

The illusion that times that were are better than those that are, has probably pervaded all ages.

1, p. 21. See also under ANTIQUITY.

XVII—Age: The Golden Age

22 Now sloth triumphs over energy, indolence over exertion, vice over virtue, arrogance over courage, and theory over practice in arms, which flourished and shone only in the golden ages.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

<sup>10</sup> Good ale, the true and proper drink of Englishmen. He is not deserving of the name of Englishman who speaketh against ale, that is good ale.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 48.

I have fed purely upon ale; I have eat my ale, drank my ale, and I always sleep upon ale.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1.

Good ale is meat, drink, and cloth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>11</sup> Give me a bumper, fill it up:

See how it sparkles in the cup;

O how shall I regale!

Can any taste this drink divine,
And then compare rum, brandy, wine,
Or aught with nappy Ale?

JOHN GAY, A Ballad on Ale.

Ev'n while these stanzas I indite,
The bar-bell's grateful sounds invite
Where joy can never fail.

Adieu, my Muse! adieu, I haste
To gratify my longing taste
With copious draughts of Ale.

JOHN GAY, A Ballad on Ale.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT

16
Verily, if I were not Alexander, I would be Diogenes. ('Αλλὰ μὴν ἐγώ, εἰ μὴ 'Αλέξανδρος ἦμην, Διογένης ἂν ἦμην.)

ALEXANDER THE GREAT. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Ch. 14, sec. 3.) It was at this interview that Diogenes, when Alexander asked if there was anything he could do for him, replied, "Yes; stand a little out of my sun."
(Μικρόν, ἀπὸ σοῦ ἡλίου μεράσσει.)

Were I not Napoleon, I would be Alexander.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, in 1814, speaking of Alexander of Russia.

17
So would I, if I were Parmenio. (Κάγώ, νή Δα, εἰ Παρμενίων.)

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, to his friend Parmenio, who said that, if he were Alexander, he would accept the offer made by Darius to share his empire. Alexander declined the offer, saying, "Heaven cannot support two suns, nor earth two masters." (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander, 29, 4.)

So would I, were I Cleander.

LYSANDER, when advised to accept a bribe. Eteocles afterward said of him, "Greece cannot bear two Lysanders." (PLUTARCH, Life.)

1 O Athenians, what toil do I undergo to please you!

ALEXANDER THE GREAT. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Ch. 60, sec. 3.)

2 The whole world was not half so wide
To Alexander, when he cried
Because he had but one to subdue,
As was a paltry narrow tub to Diogenes.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1021.

3 Graceless son of graceless sire to graceless wight by graceless squire. ("Ἀθλῖος παρ' ἀθλῖου

DIOGENES, of Alexander the Great, when the latter sent a letter to Antipater at Athens by a certain Athlios. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 44.)

4 One globe is all too little for the youth of Pella; he chafes uneasily within the narrow limits of the world. (Unus Pellæo juveni non sufficit orbis; Æstuat infelix angusto limite mundi.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 168. Alexander was born at Pella, 356 B.C.; died at Babylon, 323 B.C.

Alexander wept when he heard from Anaxarchus that there was an infinite number of worlds, and his friends asking him if any accident had befallen him, he returned this answer: Do you not think it is a matter worthy of lamentation that, where there is such a vast multitude of worlds, we have not yet conquered one?

AMBER

12 We see spiders, flies, or ants entombed and preserved forever in amber, a more than royal tomb.

FRANCIS BACON, Historia Vitæ et Mortis. Same idea BACON'S Sylvia Sylvarum. Century i, 100.

I saw a fly within a bead
Of amber cleanly buried.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Amber Bead.

13 Embalmed in amber every pirate lies.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

14 The bee is enclosed, and shines preserved, in a tear of the sisters of Phaëton, so that it seems enshrined in its own nectar. It has obtained a worthy reward for its labors; methinks the bee itself would have desired such a death.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, ep. 32.

The bee enclosed and through the amber shown,
Seems buried in the juice which was his own.

MARTIAL, Epigrams, iv, 32. (Hay, tr.)

While an ant was wandering under the shade of a tree of Phaëton, a drop of amber enveloped the tiny insect; thus she, who in life was disregarded, became precious by death.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, ep. 15.

15 Let opening roses knotted oaks adorn,
And liquid amber drop from ev'ry thorn!

POPE, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 37.

16 Pretty! in amber to observe the forms
Of hairs, or straws, or dirt, or grubs, or worms!

The things, we know, are neither rich nor rare,
But wonder how the devil they got there.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 169.

He is a fly in amber, nobody cares about the fly;

the only question is, How the Devil did it get there?

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 7. Referring to Canning.

And wonders how the devil they durst come there.

I—Ambition: Definitions

1 Ambition is the growth of every clime.
WILLIAM BLAKE, King Edward the Third. Sc. iv, l. 2.

2 Ambition, a proud covetousness, or a dry thirst of honour, a great torture of the mind, composed of envy, pride, and covetousness, a gallant madness, one defines it a pleasant poison.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 11.

Ambition is but avarice on stilts and masked.
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Brooke and Sidney.

3 The passion of ambition is the same in a courtier, a soldier, or an ecclesiastic; but, from their different educations and habits, they will take very different methods to gratify it.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1747.

4 Ambition aspires to descend. (Il aspire à descendre.)

CORNELLE, Cinna. Act i, sc. 2.

5 Ambition is the mind's immodesty.
SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Gondibert.

6 Ambition, like a torrent, ne'er looks back; And is a swelling, and the last affection A high mind can put off.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 4.

Ambition dares not stoop.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act iv, sc. 2.

7 The wise man is cured of ambition by ambition.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Du Mérite Personnel.

8 Ambition first sprung from your blest abodes, The glorious fault of Angels and of Gods; Thence to their images on earth it flows, And in the breasts of Kings and Heroes glows. Most souls, 'tis true, but peep out once an age, Dull sullen pris'ners in the body's cage.

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady.

9 The very substance of the ambition is merely the shadow of a dream. . . . I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 264.

10 Ambition is our idol, on whose wings Great minds are carry'd only to extreme; To be sublimely great, or to be nothing.

SOUTHERNE, The Loyal Brother. Act i, sc. 1.

11 Ambition
Is like the sea wave, which the more you drink
The more you thirst—yea—drink too much,
as men
Have done on rafts of wreck—it drives you mad.

TENNYSON, The Cup. Act i, sc. 3.

12 The true ambition there alone resides,
Where justice vindicates, and wisdom guides; . . .

Where public blessings public praise attend;
Where glory is our motive, not our end.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vii, l. 175.

Ambition! powerful source of good and ill!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 399.

II—Ambition: Small Town, Great Renown

13 I would rather be the first man here than the second at Rome. (Ἐγὼ μὲν ἐβουλόμην παρὰ τούτοις εἶναι μᾶλλον πρῶτος ἢ παρὰ Ῥωμαίους δεύτερος.)

JULIUS CÆSAR, referring to a little village, while crossing the Alps on his way to Spain, 61 B. C. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar. Ch. 11, 2.)

Cæsar, when he went first into Gaul, made no scruple to profess that he would rather be first in a village than second at Rome.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii, 23.

14 It is the true cry of nature; wherever we are we wish to be first.

LACORDAIRE, Conférences.

15 Just contrary to the other, I should like much better to be second or third at Périgueux than first at Paris. (Tout à l'opposite de l'autre, m'aimerois à l'avanture mieux deuxième ou troisième à Périgueux que premier à Paris.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

III—Ambition: Its Virtue

17 My father was an eminent button maker . . . but I had a soul above buttons. . . . I panted for a liberal profession.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Sylvia Dag-gerwood. Act i, sc. 10.

1 All ambitions are lawful except those which climb upward on the miseries or credulities of mankind.

JOSEPH CONRAD, A Personal Record: Preface.

2 What shall I do to be for ever known,
And make the age to come my own?

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Motto.

It is not necessary to live,
But to carve our names beyond that point,
This is necessary. (Non è necessario
Vivere, si scolpire olte quel termine
Nostro nome: quæsto è necessario.)

GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO, Canzone di Umberto Cagni.

3 When a man is no longer anxious to do better than well, he is done for.

B. R. HAYDON, Table-Talk.

4 Oft have I levell'd, and at last have learn'd
That peril is the chiefest way to happiness,
And resolution honour's fairest aim.
What glory is there in a common good,
That hangs for every peasant to achieve?
That like I best that flies beyond my reach.

MARLOWE, The Massacre at Paris, l. 94.

5 Such joy ambition finds.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 92.

6 How can I mend my title then? Where can Ambition find a higher style than man?

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. iii, emb. 5.

7 Though ambition is itself a vice, it is often the parent of virtues. (Licet ipsa vitium sit ambitio, frequenter tamen causa virtutum est.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 22.

Though ambition itself be a vice, it is often the cause of great virtue. Give me that wit whom praise excites, glory puts on, or disgrace grieves;
he is to be nourished with ambition, pricked forward with honour, checked with reprehension, and never to be suspected of sloth.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

Ambition, in a private man a vice,
Is, in a prince, a virtue.

MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act i, sc. 2.

The same ambition can destroy or save,
And makes a patriot as it makes a knave.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 201.

8 Hardly anything will bring a man's mind into full activity if ambition be wanting.

No. 3.

But what will not ambition and revenge
Descend to? who aspires must down as low
As high he soar'd.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 168.

Ambition often puts men upon doing the meanest offices: so climbing is performed in the same posture with creeping.

17 Nor think ambition wise because 'tis brave.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Gondibert. Bk. i, canto 5, st. 75.

18 But wild Ambition loves to slide, not stand,
And Fortune's Ice prefers to Virtue's land.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achiophel. Pt. i, l. 198.

It has never, we believe, been remarked that two of the most striking lines in the description of Achiophel are borrowed, and from an obscure quarter. In Knolles' History of the Turks, printed more than sixty years before the appearance of Absalom and Achitophel, are the following verses, under a portrait of Sultana Mustapha I:

Greatness on goodness loves to slide, not stand,
And leaves for Fortune's ice Virtue's firm land.
The circumstance is the more remarkable, because Dryden has really no couplet more intensely Drydenian, both in thought and expression, than this, of which the thought, and almost the whole expression, are stolen.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Sir William Temple.

Most people would succeed in small things if they were not troubled with great ambitions.

LONGFELLOW, Drift-Wood: Table-Talk.

Let proud Ambition pause
And sicken at the vanity that prompts
His little deeds.

DAVID MALLET, The Excursion. Canto ii, l. 221.

10
How vainly men themselves amaze
To win the palm, the oak, or bays.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden.

Ambition sigh'd: she found it vain to trust
The faithless column and the crumbling bust.

POPE, Epistle to Mr. Addison, l. 19.

12
Pride still is aiming at the bless'd abodes,
Men would be Angels, Angels would be Gods.
Aspiring to be Gods, if Angels fell,
Aspiring to be Angels, men rebel.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 125.

Oh, sons of earth! attempt ye still to rise
By mountains pil'd on mountains to the skies?
Heav'n still with laughter the vain toil surveys,
And buries madmen in the heaps they raise.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 73.

13
Who knows but He, whose hand the lightning
forms,
Who heaves old ocean, and who wings the storms,
Pours fierce ambition in a Cæsar's mind,
Or turns young Ammon loose to scourge mankind?

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. 1, l. 157.

When Catiline by rapine swell'd his store,
When Cæsar made a noble dame a whore,
In this the Lust, in that the Avarice
Were means, not ends, Ambition was the vice.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 212.

But see how oft ambition's aims are cross'd,
And chiefs contend till all the prize is lost!

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 107.

14
The trap to the high-born is ambition.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

15
My Lord Ambition passed, and smiled in scorn;

I plucked a rose, and, lo! it had no thorn.

GEORGE JOHN ROMANES, Simple Nature.

Ambition so frenzied that you regard yourself last in the race if there is anyone in front of you. (Tantus erit ambitionis furor, ut nemo tibi post te videatur, si aliquis ante te fuerit.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 10.

1 Ill-weaved ambition, how much thou art shrunk!

When that this body did contain a spirit,
A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
But now two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 88.

Ambition's debt is paid.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 83.

O fading honours of the dead!

O high ambition, lowly laid!

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto ii, 10.

2 Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 18.

Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 143.

3 Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition:
By that sin fell the angels; how can man,
then,

The image of his Maker, hope to win by it?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 440.

I had Ambition, by which sin

The angels fell;

I climbed and, step by step, O Lord,
Ascended into Hell.

Returning now to peace and quiet,
And made more wise,

Let my descent and fall, O Lord,
Be into Paradise.

WILLIAM H. DAVIES, Ambition.

4 Lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees

By which he did ascend.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 22.

Such a nature,

Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow
Which he treads on at noon.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 263.

Th' aspirer, once attain'd unto the top,
Cuts off those means by which himself got up.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Civil War. Bk. ii.

Men do not heed the rungs by which they climb.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Biography.

5 The noble Brutus
Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it. . . .
When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept:

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 82.

6 How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell:
Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 368.

And he that strives to touch the stars
Oft stumbles at a straw.

SPENSER, Shepherd's Calendar. July, 1. 99.

7 Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself,
And falls on the other.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 27.

Thrifless ambition, that wilt ravin up
Thine own life's means.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 28.

8 Few live exempt
From disappointment and disgrace, who run
Ambition's rapid course.

SMOLLETT, The Regicide. Act iv, sc. 2.

9 In Heaven Ambition cannot dwell,
Nor Avarice in the vaults of Hell;
Earthly these passions of the Earth,
They perish where they have their birth.

SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. x, st. 10.

10 O sacred hunger of ambitious minds,
And impotent desire of men to reign.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto xii, st. 1.

Vain the ambition of kings
Who seek by trophies and dead things
To leave a living name behind,
And weave but nets to catch the wind.

JOHN WEBSTER, Song.

11 Ambition destroys its possessor.
The Talmud. Yoma 86.

12 How like a mounting devil in the heart
Rules the unrein'd ambition!

N. P. WILLIS, Parrhasius.

And mad ambition trumpeteth to all.

N. P. WILLIS, Poem Delivered at the Departure of the Senior Class of Yale College, 1827.

13 Ambition has but one reward for all:
A little power, a little transient fame,
A grave to rest in, and a fading name!

WILLIAM WINTER, The Queen's Domain, l. 90.

14 And this is the moral,—Stick to your sphere;
Or, if you insist, as you have the right,
On spreading your wings for a loftier flight,
The moral is,—Take care how you light.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Darius Green. Last lines.

V—Ambition and Love

15 Love is not to be reason'd down, or lost
In high ambition or a thirst of greatness.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1.

Affection chain'd her to that heart;
Ambition tore the links apart.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 6.

1
Ambition is the only power that combats love.
COLLEY CIBBER, Cæsar in Egypt. Act i.

Ambition is no cure for love.
SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 27.

2
Love's but a frailty of the mind
When 'tis not with ambition join'd.
CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii,
sc. 12.

One often passes from love to ambition, but one rarely returns from ambition to love.
(On passe souvent de l'amour à l'ambition; mais on ne revient guère de l'ambition à l'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 490.

4
Love is wiser than ambition.
BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, A Vision.

AMERICA

I—America: Songs of Praise

5
O, Columbia, the gem of the ocean,
The home of the brave and the free,
The shrine of each patriot's devotion,
A world offers homage to thee.

THOMAS À BECKET, Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean. Probably written in 1843 by Becket, a young English actor playing at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, for another English actor named David Taylor Shaw, to be sung at the latter's benefit. Shaw published it first as "written, composed and sung by David T. Shaw, and arranged by T. à Becket, Esq.," and then Becket published it as "written and composed by T. à Becket, and sung by D. T. Shaw." The song is said to have been taken to London by E. L. Davenport, and sung there under the title, Britannia, the Pride of the Ocean. Some authorities assert that the song was sung first by Shaw in England, and afterwards adapted by him to American use, but the second line, "the home of the brave and the free," is identical in both versions, and is so similar to a line in The Star-Spangled Banner that it would seem to indicate that the American version was the first, though it is difficult to understand why anyone should refer to a country the size of America as a "gem of the ocean," a phrase which would apply much more reasonably to an island like England. (See BANKS, Immortal Songs of Camp and Field, p. 77; Notes and Queries, 26 Aug., 1899.)

Columbia, Columbia, to glory arise,
The queen of the world and the child of the skies!
Thy genius commands thee; with rapture behold,
While ages on ages thy splendors unfold.
TIMOTHY DWIGHT, Columbia.

Hail, Columbia! happy land!
Hail, ye heroes! heaven-born band!
Who fought and bled in Freedom's cause,
Who fought and bled in Freedom's cause,
And when the storm of war was gone,
Enjoyed the peace your valor won.

Let independence be our boast,
Ever mindful what it cost;
Ever grateful for the prize,
Let its altar reach the skies!
JOSEPH HOPKINSON, Hail, Columbia. (May, 1798.)

The land of the free and the home of the brave.
FRANCIS SCOTT KEY, The Star-Spangled Banner.

See also FLAG: AMERICAN.

O Land, the measure of our prayers,
Hope of the world in grief and wrong!
Be thine the blessing of the years,
The gift of faith, the crown of song.
JULIA WARD HOWE, Our Country.

8
I do not know beneath what sky
Nor on what seas shall be thy fate;
I only know it shall be high,
I only know it shall be great.
RICHARD HOVEY, Unmanifest Destiny.

9
Long as thine Art shall love true love,
Long as thy Science truth shall know,
Long as thine Eagle harms no Dove,
Long as thy law by law shall grow,
Long as thy God is God above,
Thy brother every man below,
So long, dear Land of all my love,
Thy name shall shine, thy fame shall grow!
SIDNEY LANIER, The Centennial Meditation of Columbia.

10
O Beautiful! my Country! ours once more!
Smoothing thy gold of war-dishevelled hair
O'er such sweet brows as never others wore.
And letting thy set lips,
Freed from wrath's pale eclipse,
The rosy edges of thy smile lay bare,
What words divine of lover or of poet
Could tell our love and make thee know it,
Among the nations bright beyond compare?
J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode. Sec. 12.

America! America!
God shed His grace on thee
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!
KATHARINE LEE BATES, America the Beautiful.

11
The eagle's song:
To be stanch, and valiant, and free, and strong.
RICHARD MANSFIELD, The Eagle's Song.

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;

Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side

Let freedom ring.

SAMUEL FRANCIS SMITH, America.

O beautiful and grand,
My own, my Native Land!

Of thee I boast:

Great Empire of the West,

The dearest and the best,

Made up of all the rest,

I love thee most.

ABRAHAM COLES, My Native Land.

How sure the bolt that Justice wings;
How weak the arm a traitor brings;
How mighty they, who steadfast stand
For Freedom's Flag and Freedom's Land!

BAYARD TAYLOR, To the American People.

2
So it's home again, and home again, America for me!

My heart is turning home again, and 'here I long to be

In the land of youth and freedom beyond the ocean bars,

Where the air is full of sunlight, and the flag is full of stars.

HENRY VAN DYKE, America for Me.

But the glory of the Present is to make the Future free,—

We love our land for what she is and what she is to be.

HENRY VAN DYKE, America for Me.

Home from the lonely cities, time's wreck, and
the naked woe,

Home through the clean great waters where free-
men's pennants blow,

Home to the land men dream of, where all the nations go.

G. E. WOODBERRY, Homeward Bound.

3
And thou, America,
Thy offspring towering e'er so high, yet higher Thee above all towering,

With Victory on thy left, and at thy right hand Law;

Thou Union holding all, fusing, absorbing, tolerating all,

Thee, ever thee, I sing.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Exposition. Sec. 8.

A grand, sane, towering, seated Mother,
Chair'd in the adamant of Time.

WALT WHITMAN, America.

Thou, too, sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great!

Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,

Is hanging breathless on thy fate! . . .
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!

Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,

Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee,—are all with thee!

LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship.

Sail, sail thy best, ship of Democracy,
Of value is thy freight, 'tis not the Present only,
The Past is also stored in thee.

Thou holdest not the venture of thyself alone,
not of the Western continent alone.

Earth's résumé entire floats on thy keel O ship,
is steadied by thy spars, . . .

With all their ancient struggles, martyrs, heroes,
epics, wars, thou bear'st the other continents.

WALT WHITMAN, Thou Mother with Thy Equal
Brood. Sec. 4.

II—America: Ideals

5
Driven from every other corner of the earth, freedom of thought and the right of private judgment in matters of conscience direct their course to this happy country as their last asylum.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Speech, Philadelphia, 1 Aug., 1776.

Westward the course of empire takes its way;
The first four acts already past,
A fifth shall close the drama with the day;
Time's noblest offspring is the last.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, On the Prospect of Planting Arts and Learning in America.
Bishop Berkeley wrote these verses under the inspiration of a project formed in his youth
—the establishment of a college in Bermuda to train young Indians as missionaries to their fellow-tribesmen. The project was finally abandoned for lack of money. The first line is frequently misquoted, "Westward the star of empire takes its way," due probably to the fact that it was so given in the epigraph stamped on the back cover of the early editions of Bancroft's History of the United States.

Young man, there is America, which at this day serves for little more than to amuse you with stories of savage men and uncouth manners, yet shall, before you taste of death, show itself equal to the whole of that commerce which now attracts the envy of the world.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America.

The next Augustine Age will dawn on the other side of the Atlantic. There will perhaps be a Thucydides at Boston, a Xenophon at New York.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann,
24 Nov., 1774.

7
Here the free spirit of mankind, at length, Throws its last fetters off; and who shall place

A limit to the giant's unchained strength,
Or curb his swiftness in the forward race?

BRYANT, The Ages. St. 33.

8 England may as well dam up the waters of the Nile with bulrushes as to fetter the step of Freedom, more proud and firm in this youthful land than where she treads the sequestered glens of Scotland, or couches herself among the magnificent mountains of Switzerland.

LYDIA MARIA CHILD, The Rebels. Ch. 4. Mrs. Child puts this flamboyant speech into the mouth of James Otis, one of the historical characters in her romance.

Sad was the year, by proud oppression driven,
When Transatlantic Liberty arose.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. iii, st. 6.

1 We set out to Oppose Tyranny in all its Strides, and I hope we shall persevere.

ABRAHAM CLARK, Letter to John Hart, 8 Feb., 1777.

2 I feel that you are justified in looking into the future with true assurance, because you have a mode of living in which we find the joy of life and the joy of work harmoniously combined. Added to this is the spirit of ambition which pervades your very being, and seems to make the day's work like a happy child at play.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, New Year's Greeting, 1931. Looking forward beyond my stay on earth, I can see our country becoming richer and more powerful. But to make her prosperity more than superficial, her moral and intellectual development should keep pace with her material wealth.

GEORGE PEABODY. Inscribed on tablet beneath his bust, Hall of Fame, New York.

3 America means opportunity, freedom, power.
EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.

While European genius is symbolized by some majestic Corinne crowned in the capitol at Rome, American genius finds its true type in the poor negro soldier lying in the trenches by the Potomac with his spelling book in one hand and his musket in the other.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Books.

4 American life storms about us daily, and is slow to find a tongue.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

The reason American cities are prosperous is that there is no place to sit down.

ALFRED J. TALLEY, Interview, on returning from Europe.

5 America is a country of young men.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

A people who are still, as it were, but in the gristle, and not yet hardened into the bone of manhood.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America.

The youth of America is their oldest tradition. It has been going on now for three hundred years.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i.

6 Our country has liberty without license and authority without despotism.

JAMES, CARDINAL GIBBONS, Address, at Rome, 25 March, 1887.

7 America is the only place where man is full-grown!

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 4.

8 Equal and exact justice to all men, . . . freedom of religion, freedom of the press, freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus; and trial by juries impartially selected,—these principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1801.

Equal rights for all, special privileges for none.
THOMAS JEFFERSON.

9 The Americans equally detest the pageantry of a king, and the superstitious hypocrisy of a bishop.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 35, 19 Dec., 1769.

We grant no dukedoms to the few,

We hold like rights and shall;

Equal on Sunday in the pew,

On Monday in the mall.

For what avail the plough or sail,

Or land, or life, if freedom fail?

EMERSON, Boston. St. 5.

Titles are abolished; and the American Republic swarms with men claiming and bearing them.

THACKERAY, Round Head Papers: On Ribbons.

10 Intellectually I know that America is no better than any other country; emotionally I know she is better than every other country.

SINCLAIR LEWIS, Interview in Berlin, 29 Dec., 1930.

America is the last abode of romance and other medieval phenomena.

ERIC LINKLATER, Juan in America.

11 Earth's biggest country's gut her soul

An' risen up Earth's Greatest Nation.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 7.

The soil out of which such men as he are made is good to be born on, good to live on, good to die for and to be buried in.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Second Series: Garfield.

12 I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

WILLIAM TYLER PAGE, The American's Creed. Accepted by House of Representatives, on behalf of the American people, 3 April, 1918.

<sup>1</sup> Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair; the rest is in the hands of God.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Speech, to the Constitutional Convention. (1787)

<sup>2</sup> The preservation of the sacred fire of liberty, and the destiny of the republican model of government, are justly considered as deeply, perhaps as finally staked, on the experiment entrusted to the hands of the American people.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, First Inaugural, 1789. Liberty has still a continent to live in.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter, 17 Feb., 1779.

This great spectacle of human happiness.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: Waterton's Wanderings.

<sup>3</sup> Let our object be, our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country. And, by the blessing of God, may that country itself become a vast and splendid monument, not of oppression and terror, but of wisdom, of peace, and of liberty, upon which the world may gaze with admiration forever.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, Charlestown, Mass., 17 June, 1825, at laying of cornerstone of the Bunker Hill Monument.

When honored and decrepit age shall lean against the base of this monument, and troops of ingenuous youth shall be gathered round it, and when the one shall speak to the other of its objects, the purposes of its construction, and the great and glorious events with which it is connected, there shall rise from every youthful breast the ejaculation, "Thank God, I—I also—am an American!"

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, Charlestown, Mass., 17 June, 1843, at completion of the Bunker Hill Monument.

I shall know but one country. The ends I aim at shall be my country's, my God's, and Truth's. I was born an American; I live an American; I shall die an American.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, 17 July, 1850.

<sup>4</sup> The only thing that has ever distinguished America among the nations is that she has shown that all men are entitled to the benefits of the law.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, N. Y., 14 Dec., 1906.

America lives in the heart of every man everywhere who wishes to find a region where he will be free to work out his destiny as he chooses. WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Chicago, 6 April, 1912.

The interesting and inspiring thought about America, gentlemen, is that she asks nothing for herself except what she has a right to ask for humanity itself.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, New York, 17 May, 1915.

<sup>5</sup> Just what is it that America stands for? If she stands for one thing more than another, it is for the sovereignty of self-governing people. . . . She stands as an example of independence, as an example of free institutions, and as an example of disinterested international action in the main tenets of justice.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Pittsburgh, 29 Jan., 1916.

America is not anything if it consists of each of us. It is something only if it consists of all of us; and it can consist of all of us only as our spirits are banded together in a common enterprise. That common enterprise is the enterprise of liberty and justice and right.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Pittsburgh, 29 Jan., 1916.

America is a tune. It must be sung together.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Bk. v, pt. iii, ch. 12.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, West Point, 13 June, 1916.

WOODROW WILSON, Address to Congress, 2 Apr., 1917.

The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted upon the tested foundations of political liberty.

WOODROW WILSON, Address to Congress, 2 Apr., 1917.

<sup>8</sup> I tell you, fellow citizens, that the war was won by the American spirit. . . . You know what one of our American wits said, that it took only half as long to train an American army as any other, because you had only to train them to go one way.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Kansas City, Mo., 6 Sept., 1919.

<sup>9</sup> Sometimes people call me an idealist. Well, that is the way I know I am an American. America is the only idealistic nation in the world.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Sioux Falls, N. D., 8 Sept., 1919.

<sup>10</sup> O America because you build for mankind I build for you.

WALT WHITMAN, By Blue Ontario's Shore.

1 There is nothing the matter with Americans except their ideals. The real American is all right; it is the ideal American who is all wrong.

G. K. CHESTERTON, (New York Times, 1 Feb., 1931.)

2 Oh, America, the sun sets in you.
Are you the grave of our day?

D. H. LAWRENCE, The Evening Land.

III—America: The Melting-Pot

3 America is God's Crucible, the great Melting-Pot where all the races of Europe are melting and re-forming! . . . God is making the American.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, The Melting-Pot. Act i.
Produced in New York City, Oct., 1908.

There is here a great melting pot in which we must compound a precious metal. That metal is the metal of nationality.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Washington, 19 April, 1915.

We Americans are children of the crucible.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, 9 Sept., 1917.

4 America! half brother of the world!
With something good and bad of every land.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: The Surface, l. 340.

5 There's freedom at thy gates and rest
For Earth's down-trodden and oppressed,
A shelter for the hunted head,
For the starved laborer toil and bread.

BRYANT, Oh Mother of a Mighty Race.

Asylum of the oppressed of every nation.

UNKNOWN, Democratic Platform, 1856.

6 She of the open soul and open door,
With room about her hearth for all mankind!
J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

7 The hope of all who suffer,
The dread of all who wrong.

WHITTIER, The Mantle of St. John de Matha.

8 I do not think that you can do better than to fix here for a while, till you can become again Americanized.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Barlow, 20 April, 1802.

We go to Europe to be Americanized.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Culture.

9 We have room in this country for but one flag, the Stars and Stripes. . . . We have room for but one loyalty, loyalty to the United States. . . . We have room for but one language, the English language.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, The Great Adventure.
Also last message to the American Defense Society, 3 Jan., 1919, two days before his death.

America is not to be made a polyglot boarding-house for money hunters of twenty different nationalities who have changed their former country for this country only as farmyard beasts change one feeding-trough for another.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Bridgeport, Conn.

There can be no fifty-fifty Americanism in this country. There is room here for only 100 per cent Americanism, only for those who are Americans and nothing else.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Republican Convention, Saratoga. Also in Foes of Our Own Household.

10 I will put in my poems that with you is heroism upon land and sea,
And I will report all heroism from an American point of view.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanok.

11 Some Americans need hyphens in their names because only part of them has come over.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Washington, 16 May, 1914.

There are a great many hyphens left in America. For my part, I think the most un-American thing in the world is a hyphen.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, St. Paul, Minn., 9 Sept., 1919.

Hyphenated Americans.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Metropolitan Magazine, Oct., 1915.

When two flags are hoisted on the same pole, one is always hoisted undermost. The hyphenated American always hoists the American flag undermost.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Fear God and Take Your Own Part. Ch. v.

12 O Liberty, white Goddess! is it well
To leave the gates unguarded? On thy breast Fold Sorrow's children, soothe the hurts of Fate,

Lift the down-trodden, but with hand of steel
Stay those who to thy sacred portals come
To waste the gifts of Freedom.

T. B. ALDRICH, Unguarded Gates.

IV—America: The American

13 Most Americans are born drunk. . . . They have a sort of permanent intoxication from within, a sort of invisible champagne. . . . Americans do not need to drink to inspire them to do anything.

G. K. CHESTERTON, (N. Y. Times Magazine, 28 June, 1931.)

14 Lords of an empire wide as Shakespeare's soul,
Sublime as Milton's immemorial theme,
And rich as Chaucer's speech, and fair as Spenser's dream.

SYDNEY DOBELL, America.

1
In America, the geography is sublime, but the men are not; the inventions are excellent, but the inventors one is sometimes ashamed of.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

The Americans have many virtues, but they have not Faith and Hope.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Man the Reformer.

I hate this shallow Americanism which hopes to get rich by credit, to get knowledge by raps on midnight tables, to learn the economy of the mind by phrenology, or skill without study, or mastery without apprenticeship.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

I often think, when we are reproached with brag by the peoples of a small home-territory, like the English, that ours is only the gait and bearing of a tall boy by the side of small boys.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.

I esteem it a chief felicity of this country that it excels in women.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

She behaves as if she were beautiful. Most American women do. It is the secret of their charm.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 3.

Bring me men to match my mountains,
Bring me men to match my plains,
Men with empires in their purpose,
And new eras in their brains.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The Coming American.

4
Emerson says that the Englishman of all men stands most firmly on his feet. But it is not the whole of man's mission to be found standing, even at the most important post. Let him take one step forward,—and in that advancing figure you have the American.

T. W. HIGGINSON, Americanism in Literature.

This will never be a civilized country until we expend more money for books than we do for chewing-gum.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xxv, p. 1.

All Wrigley had was an idea. He was the first man to discover that American jaws must wag. So why not give them something to wag against?

WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest, p. 89.

Enslaved, illogical, elate,
He greets the embarrassed Gods, nor fears
To shake the iron hand of Fate
Or match with Destiny for beers.

RUDYARD KIPLING, An American.

7
First, the sweetheart of the nation, then her aunt, woman governs America because America is a land of boys who refuse to grow up.

SALVADOR DE MADARIAGA, Americans Are Boys.

In America . . . where law and custom alike are based upon the dreams of spinsters.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Marriage and Morals, p. 75.

8
We have exchanged the Washingtonian dignity for the Jeffersonian simplicity, which was in truth only another name for the Jacksonian vulgarity.

BISHOP HENRY C. POTTER, Address, Washington Centennial Service, New York, 30 April, 1889.

9
The first requisite of a good citizen in this republic of ours is that he shall be able and willing to pull his weight.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Address, New York, 11 Nov., 1902.

Our average fellow-citizen is a sane and healthy man, who believes in decency and has a wholesome mind.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Address, Syracuse, Labor Day, 1903.

10
The American people never carry an umbrella. They prepare to walk in eternal sunshine.

ALFRED E. SMITH, in syndicate article, 1931.

11
Be proud of those strong sons of thine
Who wrenched their rights from thee!

TENNYSON, England and America in 1782.

V—America: The Union

12
E Pluribus Unum. (One from many.)

Motto, used on the title page of the Gentleman's Journal, Jan., 1692. Motto for seal of the United States proposed originally on 10 Aug., 1776, by a committee composed of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. Adopted 20 June, 1782. The motto was added to certain coins in 1796. The actual selection of the motto has been claimed for Pierre Eugène du Simitière, a Swiss artist, who was employed by the committee, shortly after the Declaration of Independence, to submit a design for the seal—a design which was not accepted.

The many colors blend into one. (Color est e pluribus unus.)

VERGIL (attr.), Moretum, l. 104.

From many to make one. (Ex pluribus unum facere.)

St. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. iv, sec. 8.

13
Then join hand in hand, brave Americans
• all,—

By uniting we stand, by dividing we fall!

JOHN DICKINSON, Liberty Song. First published in the Boston Gazette, 18 July, 1768.

A song for our banner! The watchword recall

Which gave the Republic her station:

"United we stand, divided we fall!"

It made and preserves us a nation!

The union of lakes, the union of lands,

The union of States none can sever,

The union of hearts, the union of hands,
And the flag of our union forever!
GEORGE P. MORRIS, The Flag of Our Union.

1
I never use the word "Nation" in speaking of the United States; I always use the word "Union," or "Confederacy." We are not a Nation, but a Union, a confederacy of equal and sovereign States.

JOHN C. CALHOUN, Letter to Oliver Dyer, 1 Jan., 1849.

2
The Constitution, in all its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union composed of indestructible States.

SALMON P. CHASE, Decision, in Texas v. White, 7 Wallace, 725.

3
We join ourselves to no party that does not carry the flag and keep step to the music of the Union.

RUFUS CHOATE, Letter to Whig Convention, Worcester, Mass., 1 Oct., 1855.

4
I have heard something said about allegiance to the South. I know no South, no North, no East, no West, to which I owe any allegiance.

HENRY CLAY, Speech, in U. S. Senate, 1848.

The gentleman speaks of Virginia being my country. The Union, sir, is my country.

HENRY CLAY, on the same occasion.

I am not a Virginian, but an American.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Continental Congress, 5 Sept., 1774.

I have neither been false to the North nor to the South, to the East nor to the West.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Speech, in Congress, 21 Feb., 1850.

The North! the South! the West! the East!
No one the most and none the least,
But each with its own heart and mind,
Each of its own distinctive kind,
Yet each a part and none the whole,
But all together form one soul;
That soul Our Country at its best,
No North, no South, no East, no West,
No yours, no mine, but always Ours,
Merged in one Power our lesser powers,
For no one's favor, great or small,
But all for Each and each for All.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, Each for All.

6
This glorious Union shall not perish! Precious legacy of our fathers, it shall go down honored and cherished to our children. Generations unborn shall enjoy its privileges as we have done; and if we leave them poor in all besides, we will transmit to them the boundless wealth of its blessings!

EDWARD EVERETT, Speech, at Union Meeting in Faneuil Hall.

Our Union is river, lake, ocean and sky:

Man breaks not the medal when God cuts the die!

O. W. HOLMES, Brother Jonathan's Lament for Sister Caroline.

One flag, one land, one heart, one hand,
One nation, evermore!

O. W. HOLMES, Voyage of the Good Ship Union.

One heart, one hope, one destiny, one flag from sea to sea.

KATE BROWNLEE SHERWOOD, Albert Sidney Johnston.

8
Our federal Union, it must be preserved.

ANDREW JACKSON, Toast, at a banquet at Washington on Jefferson's birthday, 30 April, 1830. The preceding toasts had savored of nullification, and Jackson's, which came last, electrified the country. (BASSETT, Life, p. 555.)

9
The cement of this Union is the heart blood of every American.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 252.

When any one State in the American Union refuses obedience to the Confederation by which they have bound themselves, the rest have a natural right to compel obedience.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvii, p. 121.

10
This government, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, or their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow it.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, at first Republican State Convention in Illinois, 1856. Quoted by Theodore Roosevelt in address before Ohio Constitutional Convention, Columbus, Feb., 1912.

It [secession] is an issue which can only be tried by war and decided by victory.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Message to Congress, 1864.

11
The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be by the better angels of our nature.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Inaugural Address. 4 Mar., 1861.

The advice nearest to my heart and deepest in my convictions is, that the Union of the states be cherished and perpetuated. Let the open enemy of it be regarded as a Pandora with her box opened, and the disguised one as the serpent creeping with his deadly wiles into paradise.

JAMES MADISON, Advice to My Country: Conclusion. Found among his papers after his death. (Dictionary of American Biog., xii, 193.)

1 If this bill [for the admission of Orleans Territory as a State] passes, it is my deliberate opinion that it is virtually a dissolution of the Union; that it will free the States from their moral obligation; and, as it will be the right of all, so it will be the duty of some, definitely to prepare for a separation,—amicably if they can, violently if they must.

JOSIAH QUINCY, Speech, House of Representatives, 14 Jan., 1811.

The gentleman [Josiah Quincy] cannot have forgotten his own sentiment, uttered even on the floor of this House, "Peaceably if we can, forcibly if we must."

HENRY CLAY, Speech, in Congress, on the New Army Bill, 8 Jan., 1813.

2 Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, on Foote's Resolution, 26 Jan., 1830.

When my eyes shall be turned to behold, for the last time, the sun in heaven, may I not see him shining on the broken and dishonored fragments of a once glorious Union; on States dis-severed, discordant, belligerent; on a land rent with civil feuds, or drenched, it may be, in fraternal blood!

DANIEL WEBSTER, Second Speech on Foote's Resolution, 26 Jan., 1830.

Let us then stand by the constitution as it is, and by our country as it is, one, united, and entire; let it be a truth engraven on our hearts; let it be borne on the flag under which we rally in every exigency, that we have one country, one constitution, one destiny.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, New York, 15 March, 1837.

3 Till North and South together brought Shall own the same electric thought,
In peace a common flag salute,
And, side by side in labor's free
And unresentful rivalry,
Harvest the fields wherein they fought.

WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 504.

I accept your nomination in the confident trust that the masses of our countrymen, North and South, are eager to clasp hands across the bloody chasm which has so long divided them.

HORACE GREELEY, accepting the Liberal nomination for President, 1872.

4 It [the Civil War] created in this country what had never existed before—a national consciousness. It was not the salvation of the Union; it was the rebirth of the Union.

WOODROW WILSON, Memorial Day Address, 1915.

5 Let us keep our eyes and our hearts steadily fixed upon the old flag of our fathers. . . . It has a star for every State. Let us resolve that there shall be a State for every star!

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Speech, at mass meeting on Boston Common, 22 Aug., 1862.

VI—America and Europe

6 America, in the assembly of nations, since her admission among them, has invariably, though often fruitlessly, held forth to them the hand of honest friendship, of equal freedom, of generous reciprocity. She has uniformly spoken among them, though often to heedless and often to disdainful ears, the language of equal liberty, equal justice, and equal rights.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Address, 4 July, 1821.

Oh mother of a mighty race,
Yet lovely in thy youthful grace!
The elder dames, thy haughty peers,
Admire and hate thy blooming years.

With words of shame

And taunts of scorn they join thy name.

BRYANT, Oh Mother of a Mighty Race.

7 I called the New World into existence to redress the balance of the Old.

GEORGE CANNING, The King's Message, 12 Dec., 1826.

8 There is no calamity which a great nation can invite which equals that which follows a supine submission to wrong and injustice and the consequent loss of national self-respect and honor, beneath which are shielded and defended a people's safety and greatness.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Message to Congress, 17 Dec., 1895, referring to Great Britain's refusal to arbitrate the Venezuelan boundary dispute.

Three thousand miles of ocean make any permanent political union between an European and an American state unnatural and inexpedient.

RICHARD OLNEY, Draft of Venezuelan Message, 1895.

9 That is the point which decides the welfare of a people; which way does it look? If to any other people, it is not well with them. If occupied with their own affairs and thoughts and men . . . they are sublime.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

The less America looks abroad, the grander its promise.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Character.

One day we will cast out the passion for Europe, by the passion for America.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

There is much in the calamities we have suffered which is disinfecting. We have learned to forget foreign nations.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Books.

Amidst the calamities which war has brought on our country this one benefit has accrued—that our eyes are withdrawn from England, withdrawn from France, and look homeward. We have come to feel that "by ourselves our safety may be bought."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations,—entangling alliances with none.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1801.

We owe gratitude to France, justice to England, good will to all, and subservience to none.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. ix, p. 420.

The less we have to do with the enmities of Europe the better. Not in our day, but at no distant one, we may shake a rod over the heads of all, which may make the stoutest tremble. But I hope our wisdom will grow with our power, and teach us that the less we use our power the greater it will be.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 308.

I have ever deemed it fundamental for the United States never to take active part in the quarrels of Europe. Their political interests are entirely distinct from ours. . . . They are nations of eternal war. All their energies are expended in the destruction of the labor, property and lives of their people.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 436.

The day is not distant when we may formally require a meridian of partition through the ocean which separates the two hemispheres, on the hither side of which no European gun shall ever be heard, nor an American on the other.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 263.

We must meet our duty and convince the world that we are just friends and brave enemies.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 156.

Peace and friendship with all mankind is our wisest policy, and I wish we may be permitted to pursue it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to C. W. F. Dumas, 1786.

Our difficulties are indeed great . . . but when viewed in comparison to those of Europe, they are the joys of paradise. . . . Happily for us the Mammoth [Napoleon] cannot swim, nor the Leviathan [England] move on dry land; and if we will keep out of their way, they cannot get at us.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 372.

An American coming to Europe for his education, loses in his knowledge, in his morals, in his health, in his habits, and in his happiness. I had entertained only doubts on this head before I came to Europe; what I see and hear, since I came here, proves more than I had even suspected.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol v, p. 185.

At what point then is the approach of danger to be expected? I answer if it ever reach us it must spring up amongst us; it cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a nation of free men, we must live through all time or die by suicide.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Perpetuation of Our Political Institutions.

John Bull, looking o'er the Atlantic, in choler At your aptness for trade, says you worship the dollar;

But to scorn such eye-dollar-try's what very few do,

And John goes to that church as often as you do.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1075.

It don't seem hardly right, John,

When both my hands was full,

To stump me to a fight, John,—

Your cousin, tu, John Bull!

Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess

We know it now," sez he,

"The lion's paw is all the law,

According to J. B.,

Thet's fit for you an' me!"

J. R. LOWELL, Jonathan to John. St. 1.

In the wars of the European powers in matters relating to themselves we have never taken any part, nor does it comport with our policy so to do. It is only when our rights are invaded or seriously menaced that we resent injuries or make preparation for our defence.

JAMES MONROE, Message to Congress, 2 Dec., 1823.

We owe it, therefore, to candor, and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those [European] powers, to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere, as dangerous to our peace and safety.

JAMES MONROE, Message to Congress, 2 Dec., 1823, in which he enunciated what has come to be known as the "Monroe Doctrine."

Why is it, whenever a group of internationalists get together, they always decide that Uncle Sam must be the goat?

BERTRAND H. SNELL, Interview, 7 May, 1931.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humor or caprice?

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 17 Sept., 1796.

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, . . . the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government.

WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 17 Sept., 1796.

'Tis our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances, with any portion of the foreign world.

WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 17 Sept., 1796.

1 America can not be an ostrich with its head in the sand.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Des Moines, 1 Feb., 1916.

Every time Europe looks across the Atlantic to see the American eagle, it observes only the rear end of an ostrich.

H. G. WELLS, America.

2 The best way to help mankind is to begin at home and put our own house in order. . . . Internationalism, as it is practised, is another name for money juggling and the operations of bankers. . . . I am ready and eager for Uncle Sam to turn over the job of being cats-paw for the world to someone else.

W. E. WOODWARD, Money for Tomorrow, p. 218.

VII—America: Foreign Opinion

3 The capital defect of life in America: namely, that compared with life in England it is so uninteresting, so without savour and without depth.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Letter, written in 1886, during his second visit to America.

4 A dirty chimney on fire.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter, referring to the American Civil War.

He was probably fond of them, but he was always able to conceal it.

MARK TWAIN, My First Lie. Referring to Thomas Carlyle and Americans.

5 The American never imitates the Englishman in simply taking for granted both his own patriotism and his own superiority.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Generally Speaking, p. 234.

6 I cannot conclude without mentioning how sensibly I feel the dismemberment of America from this empire, and that I should be miserable indeed if I did not feel that no blame on that account can be laid at my door, and did I not also know that knavery seems to be so much the striking feature of its inhabitants that it may not in the end be an evil that they will become aliens to this kingdom.

GEORGE III OF ENGLAND, Letter to Shelburne, 10 November, 1782.

7 Thou, O my country, hast thy foolish ways, Too apt to purr at every stranger's praise.

O. W. HOLMES, An After-Dinner Poem.

8 The fact is that the Americans are not a thoughtful people; they are too busy to stop and question their values.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 217.)

9 I am willing to love all mankind, except an American.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 290.)

10 For some reason or other, the European has rarely been able to see America except in caricature. . . . We do not ask to be sprinkled with rosewater, but may perhaps fairly protest against being drenched with the rinsings of an unclean imagination.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

11 If I were an American as I am an Englishman while a foreign troop was landed in my country I never would lay down my arms,—never! never! never!

WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM, Speech, 18 Nov., 1777.

12 The desire for riches is their ruling passion.

DUC DE LA ROCHEFOUCAULT-LIANCOURT, Travels Throughout the United States of North America, 1798.

All the men in America make money their pursuit.

RICHARD PARKINSON, A Tour of America, 1805.

The most materialistic people in the world.

G. W. STEEVENS, The Land of the Dollar.

Huge American rattle of gold.

HENRY JAMES, The American Scene.

In hardness and materialism, exaggeration and boastfulness; in a false smartness, a false audacity, a want of soul and delicacy.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Discourses on America, 1884.

13 To rouse their [the Americans'] eager interest, their distinguished consideration and their undying devotion, all that is necessary is to hold them up to the ridicule of the rest of the universe. Dickens won them to him forever by merciless projections of typical Americans as windbags, swindlers and assassins.

BERNARD SHAW. Commenting on award of Nobel prize to Sinclair Lewis, 1931.

You are right in your impression that a number of persons are urging me to come to the United States. But why on earth do you call them my friends?

BERNARD SHAW, Letter to Oswald Garrison Villard, 4 August, 1921.

14 In the four quarters of the globe, who reads an American book? or goes to an American play? or looks at an American picture or statue? What does the world yet owe to American physicians or surgeons? What new substances have their chemists discovered?

or what old ones have they analyzed? What new constellations have been discovered by the telescopes of Americans? What have they done in mathematics? Who drinks out of American glasses? or eats from American plates? or wears American coats or gowns? or sleeps in American blankets? Finally, under which of the old tyrannical governments of Europe is every sixth man a slave, whom his fellow-creatures may buy, and sell, and torture?

SYDNEY SMITH, Review of Seybert's Annals of the United States. Edinburgh Review, Jan., 1820.

1 Gigantic daughter of the West
We drink to thee across the flood. . . .
For art not thou of English blood?

ALFRED TENNYSON, Hands All Round. First published in the London Examiner, 1862.

Yet, still, from either beach,
The voice of blood shall reach,
More audible than speech,
"We are one!"

WASHINGTON ALLSTON, America to Great Britain.

2 How frantically have the French acted, and how rationally the Americans! But Franklin and Washington were great men. None have appeared yet in France.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to H. S. Conway, 1 July, 1790.

3 Thou sit'st between thy oceans; but when Fate
Was at thy making, and endowed thy soul
With many gifts and costly, she forgot
To mix with these a genius for repose.

WILLIAM WATSON, To the Invincible Republic.

4 It looks to me to be narrow and pedantic to apply the ordinary ideas of criminal justice to this great public contest. I do not know the method of drawing up an indictment against a whole people.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America.

See also Politics: Familiar Phrases

5 No ill luck stirring but what lights upon Uncle Sam's shoulders.

UNKNOWN, Editorial, Troy, N. Y., Post, 7 Sept., 1813. The earliest known use of "Uncle Sam." There is a legend that the original Uncle Sam was Samuel Wilson, of Troy, N. Y., an army contractor, b. 1766, d. 1854.

Uncle Sam and John Bull.

UNKNOWN, Editorial, Columbia Centinel, Dec., 1814.

U. S. or Uncle Sam—a cant term in the army for the United States.

UNKNOWN, Niles' Register, 1815.

6 We must consult Brother Jonathan.

GEORGE WASHINGTON. Said to be a frequent remark of his, during the Revolution, referring to his secretary and aide-de-camp, Col. Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut. It is alleged to be the origin of "Brother Jonathan," as typifying America.

The Diverting History of John Bull and Brother Jonathan.

JAMES KIRKE PAULDING. Title of book, 1812.

John Bull christened this son of his by the name of Jonathan; but by and by when he became a man grown, his friends and neighbors gave him the nickname of Uncle Sam, a sure sign they liked him, for I never knew a respectable nickname given to a scurvy fellow in my life.

JAMES KIRKE PAULDING, John Bull in America.

7 Yankee Doodle, keep it up,
Yankee Doodle, dandy;
Mind the music and the step,
And with the girls be handy.

EDWARD BANGS, The Yankee's Return to Camp.

This is the chorus of the first version of Yankee Doodle, which is attributed to Bangs on the authority of Dr. Edward Everett Hale. Other authorities attribute it to Dr. Richard Shuckburg, an officer in the British army under Lord Amherst, stationed at Albany in 1758, during the French and Indian War. It is said to have been inspired by the rawness and ungainliness of the American recruits. The tune is an old one, perhaps of Dutch origin, and was well known in the time of Charles II, under the name of Lydia Fisher's Jig, with the following chorus:

Lucy Locket lost her pocket,
Kitty Fisher found it;
Nothing in it, nothing on it,
But the binding round it.

8 In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress.

ETHAN ALLEN, reputed answer to Captain de la Place, when the latter asked in whose name Allen demanded the surrender of Fort Ticonderoga, 10 May, 1775. Many authorities suspect the answer was far more profane.

9 Don't fire until you see the white of their eyes.

COLONEL WILLIAM PRESCOTT, at the battle of Bunker Hill, 17 June, 1775.

Boys, aim at their waistbands.

JOHN STARK, at the battle of Bunker Hill, 17 June, 1775.

10 I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country.

NATHAN HALE, Speech, upon the gallows just before being hanged as a spy by the British, New York, 22 Sept., 1775.

Every kind of service, necessary to the public good, becomes honorable by being necessary.

NATHAN HALE, 10 Sept., 1775, when his friend,

Captain William Hull, protested against his entering the British lines as a spy.

What pity is it

That we can die but once to serve our country!

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

Witness to the world that I die like a man.

MAJOR JOHN ANDRÉ, just before he was hanged as a spy, 2 Oct., 1780.

1
Don't give up the ship! You will beat them off!

CAPTAIN JAMES MUGFORD, of the schooner Franklin, 19 May, 1776, his dying words during a British attack in Boston Harbor.

Crying, with death-white lip,

"Boys, don't give up the ship!"

His soul struck out for heaven's peaceful shore.

J. W. CHADWICK, Mugford's Victory.

Keep the guns going! Fight her till she strikes or sinks! Don't give up the ship!

Attributed to CAPTAIN JAMES LAWRENCE, commander of the American frigate, Chesapeake, during her fight with the British ship, Shannon, 1 June, 1813. Fatally wounded early in the action, he is said to have kept crying these words from the cockpit until the last. They seem to rest on the testimony of Dr. John Dix, at the trial of Lieut. Cox, 14 April, 1814, that "Captain Lawrence ordered me to go on deck, and tell the men to fire faster and not give up the ship." A daughter of Benjamin Russell, editor of the Boston Centinel at the time, is authority for the statement that her father coined the phrase in his account of Lawrence's death. (BOMBAUGH, Facts and Fancies for the Curious, p. 388.)

Don't give up the ship!

Signal floated at the masthead of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry's flagship, the Lawrence, during the battle of Lake Erie, 10 Sept., 1813.

2
There, I guess King George will be able to read that.

JOHN HANCOCK, Remark, on signing the Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776. His was the first signature, and in so bold a hand that "John Hancock" became the synonym for a signature.

3
Don't tread on me.

Motto of the first flag of the Revolution, raised on Paul Jones's ship, the Alfred, in 1776. The flag showed a pine tree with a rattlesnake coiled at its foot.

4
These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their country; but he that stands it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis: Intro., Dec., 1776.

It is the object only of war that makes it honorable. And if there was ever a just war since the world began, it is this in which America is now engaged. . . . We fight not to enslave, but to set a country free, and to make room upon the earth for honest men to live in.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. (1776)

Put none but Americans on guard to-night.

GEORGE WASHINGTON. Based upon his circular letter to regimental commanders, dated 30 April, 1777, regarding recruits for his body-guard, "You will therefore send me none but natives." A short time before, a deserter from the British army, named Thomas Hickey, had tried to poison Washington, and had been convicted and hanged.

6
There, my boys, are your enemies, red-coats and Tories. You must beat them—or Molly Stark is a widow to-night.

Attributed to COL. JOHN STARK, at the battle of Bennington, 16 Aug., 1777.

See there the enemy, my boys!

Now strong in valor's might,

Beat them, or Molly Stark will sleep

In widowhood to-night.

THOMAS P. RODMAN, The Battle of Bennington.

7
I have not yet begun to fight.

JOHN PAUL JONES, when summoned to surrender as his ship, the Bonhomme Richard, was sinking under him in his fight with the British forty-four, Serapis, 23 Sept., 1779.

8
Now put Watts into 'em, boys! Give 'em Watts!

Attributed to REV. JAMES CALDWELL, when giving the American troops a pile of hymn-books to serve as wadding, 23 June, 1780. Caldwell's wife had been killed by a British soldier.

He ran to the church,
Broke the door, stripped the pews, and dashed out in the road
With his arms full of hymn-books, and threw down his load
At their feet! Then above all the shouting and shots, Rang his voice,—“Put Watts into 'em! Boys, give 'em Watts!”

BRET HARTE, Caldwell of Springfield.

9
He defeated the Americans with great slaughter.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on the tomb of Lord Cornwallis, in Westminster Abbey. The surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, 17 Oct., 1781, virtually ended the Revolution.

10
A National debt, if it is not excessive, will be to us a national blessing.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, Letter to Robert Morris, 30 April, 1781.

At the time we were funding our national debt, we heard much about “a public debt being a public blessing"; that the stock representing it was a creation of active capital for the aliment of commerce, manufactures, and agriculture.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John W. Epps, 6 Nov., 1813.

The gentleman has not seen how to reply to this, otherwise than by supposing me to have advanced the doctrine that a national debt is a national blessing.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Second Speech on Foote's Resolution, 26 Jan., 1830. (Works, iii, 303.)

1 The Government of the United States of America is not, in any sense, founded upon the Christian religion.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Treaty with Tripoli, 1795.

2 Millions for defense but not a cent for tribute.

ROBERT GOODLOE HARPER, Toast, at the dinner given by Congress at Philadelphia, 18 June, 1798, in honor of John Marshall upon his return from France. It was the thirteenth toast in a list of sixteen, as published in the American Daily Advertiser, 20 June, 1798. (See BEVERIDGE, Life of John Marshall, ii, 349.) Robert Goodloe Harper was a member of Congress from South Carolina, and the ascription to him is confirmed by Mr. A. S. Salley, Secretary of the Historical Commission of South Carolina. Many of the other toasts at the dinner were also defiance of France, the eleventh being, "The American eagle; may it regard with disdain the crowing of the Gallic cock."

No, no; not a penny!

CHARLES COTESWORTH PINCKNEY, American ambassador to France, in answer to a demand for a bribe of $250,000, made on behalf of Talleyrand, French foreign minister, by a secret agent named Hottenguer, 26 October, 1797. Pinckney, together with John Marshall and Elbridge Gerry, as envoys from the United States, were endeavoring to secure a cessation of French attacks on American shipping, and Hottenguer had informed them that the French Directory would not receive them until the bribe was paid. Pinckney has been credited with having said, "Millions for defense, but not a cent for tribute," but he denied it, saying, "No, my answer was not a flourish like that, but simply, 'Not a penny; not a penny.'" There can be no doubt that the more dramatic saying originated at the dinner to Marshall, and Harper afterwards explained that what he had in mind was not the demanded bribe, but that, instead of permitting France to plunder American merchant vessels of millions in tribute, he would spend them in defense.

3 We give up the fort when there's not a man left to attend it.

CAPTAIN GEORGE CROGHAN, to the British General Proctor, at Fort Stephenson, Lower Sandusky, 1 August, 1813. Proctor was preparing to attack the fort at the head of a large force, and was beaten off after two days' desperate fighting.

4 We have met the enemy and they are ours—two ships, two brigs, one schooner and one sloop.

OLIVER HAZARD PERRY, Dispatch, to Gen. William Henry Harrison, announcing his victory at the battle of Lake Erie, 10 Sept., 1813.

5 General Washington set the example of voluntary retirement after eight years. I shall follow it. And a few more precedents will oppose the obstacle of habit to any one who after a while shall endeavor to extend his term.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xi, p. 58.

6 Our country! in her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong!

STEPHEN DECATUR, Toast, at a dinner in his honor at Norfolk, Va., April, 1816. (MACKENZIE, Life of Decatur. Ch. 14.)

I hope to find my country in the right: however, I will stand by her, right or wrong.

JOHN J. CRITTENDEN, of Kentucky, Speech, in Congress, May, 1846, when President Polk sent a message relating to the War with Mexico.

Our country, right or wrong! When right, to be kept right; when wrong, to be put right!

CARL SCHURZ, Speech, U. S. Senate, 1872.

"My country, right or wrong," is a thing that no patriot would think of saying except in a desperate case. It is like saying, "My mother, drunk or sober."

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Defendant.

7 The Era of Good Feeling.

Title of an article on Monroe's administration in the Boston Centinel, 12 July, 1817.

8 This bill is an attempt to reduce the country south of Mason and Dixon's line to a state of worse than colonial bondage.

JOHN RANDOLPH of Roanoke, Speech, in Congress, 15 April, 1824, referring to the Missouri Compromise. Mason and Dixon's line was the boundary line between Pennsylvania and Maryland, as surveyed by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, two English surveyors, in 1763-7, to settle the disputes between the Penn family and Lord Baltimore. It lies in 39° 43' 26" north latitude, and as it originally separated the free state of Pennsylvania from the then slave states of Maryland and Virginia, it came to be regarded as the line north of which, as extended across the continent, slavery should not be permitted.

9 He who dallies is a dastard; he who doubts is damned.

Attributed to GEORGE MCDUFFLE, of South Carolina. It was quoted by James Hamilton, while governor of South Carolina, in 1831, during the excitement of the nullification period. Quoted in Congress by J. C. S. Blackburn, of Kentucky, Feb., 1877, during the Hayes-Tilden controversy, and used in the Louisville Courier-Journal by Col. Henry Watterson at the same time. Col. Watterson had proposed that a hundred thousand Kentuckians march on Washington and seat Mr. Tilden.

JOHN L. O'SULLIVAN, United States Magazine and Democratic Review, vol. xvii, p. 5-10, July-August, 1845. O'Sullivan was editor of the Review, and the above phrase appeared in an editorial article denouncing opposition to the annexation of Texas. It is the first known published use of "manifest destiny." (JULIUS W. PRATT, American Historical Review, xxxii, 795.)

There is one element of our title [to Oregon] . . . to which I may not have done entire justice. I mean that new revelation of right which has been designated as the right of our manifest destiny to spread over this whole continent. It has been openly avowed in a leading Administration journal that this, after all, is our best and strongest title.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Speech, House of Representatives, 3 Jan., 1846. The "leading Administration journal" referred to was undoubtedly the United States Magazine and Democratic Review, quoted above.

In the autumn of 1844 the question of annexation [of Texas] was one of the chief issues of the presidential campaign. The Democrats made "Manifest Destiny" the cornerstone of their political philosophy for the moment.

W. E. WOODWARD, Meet General Grant, p. 73.

That word, "manifest destiny," which is profanely used, signifies the sense all men have of the prodigious energy and opportunity lying idle here.

EMERSON, Journals, 1865.

Manifest destiny.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, remark to his secretary, George Cortelyou, referring to the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands. (STODDARD, As I Knew Them, p. 251.)

Unmanifest Destiny.

RICHARD HOVEY. Title of poem.

<sup>2</sup> Our country: whether bounded by the St. John's and the Sabine, or however otherwise bounded or described, and be the measurements more or less;—still our country, to be cherished in all our hearts, to be defended by all our hands!

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Toast, at dinner in Faneuil Hall, Boston, 4 July, 1846, referring to the annexation of Texas. Frequently quoted as: "Our country, however bounded."

Attributed to GENERAL ZACHARY TAYLOR, at the battle of Buena Vista, 22 Feb., 1847. It has been denied that Taylor ever said it, but that when Captain Braxton Bragg reported that he would have to fall back with his battery or lose it, Taylor replied, "Captain Bragg, it is better to lose a battery than a battle." Which is quite as good!

THOMAS L. CRITTENDEN, reply, on behalf of General Zachary Taylor, at the battle of Buena Vista, 22 Feb., 1847, when summoned to surrender by General Santa Ana, the Mexican commander. The phrase became the slogan of the presidential campaign of 1848, when General Taylor was elected president.

<sup>5</sup> I shall defer my visit to Faneuil Hall, the cradle of American liberty, until its doors shall fly open upon golden hinges to lovers of Union as well as lovers of liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Letter, April, 1851, in reply to an invitation to speak in Boston extended by his friends, who reported, however, that they had been refused the use of Faneuil Hall by the mayor and aldermen. This was just after Massachusetts had been exasperated by Webster's 7th of March speech.

<sup>6</sup> Cotton is King; or Slavery in the Light of Political Economy.

DAVID CHRISTY. Title of book, 1855.

You dare not make war on cotton. Cotton is king.

Cotton is King.

GOVERNOR MANNING, of South Carolina, Speech, at Columbia, S. C., 1858.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Speech, 25 Oct., 1858. Referring to the antagonism between freedom and slavery.

<sup>8</sup> Den I wish I was in Dixie! Hooray! Hooray! In Dixie's land we'll took our stand, To lib an' die in Dixie!

DANIEL DECATUR EMMETT, Dixie. (1859) There are many stories to explain the derivation of "Dixie" as a synonym for the South, but none of them is convincing. The compiler's guess is that it derives from Mason and Dixon's line.

To arms! To arms! To arms, in Dixie! . . . For Dixie's land we take our stand, And live or die for Dixie!

ALBERT PIKE, Dixie. (1861)

<sup>9</sup> If any one attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot.

GENERAL JOHN A. DIX, while Secretary of the Treasury, 29 Jan., 1861, in a telegram from Washington, to William Hemphill Jones, who had been sent to New Orleans as a treasury clerk, ordering the arrest of Captain Breshwood, commander of the revenue cutter McClelland, which it was feared he would turn over to the Confederates. The telegram sounds well, but considering that Jones was alone and unarmed, and perhaps never in his life had handled a gun, was merely silly.

3 All we ask is to be let alone.

JEFFERSON DAVIS, Inaugural Address, as President of the Confederate States of America, 18 Feb., 1861, stating that the attitude of the Southern States was purely one of self-defence.

"In a week or so I expects to come And turn you out of your 'ouse and 'ome;— I'm a quiet old cove," says he, with a groan: "All I axes is—Let me alone!"

UNKNOWN. Slogan of protest in Confederacy in 1861 against various laws favoring large slave-owners.

5 All quiet along the Potomac to-night.

ETHEL LYNN BEERS, All Quiet along the Potomac. A phrase supposed to have been originated by Gen. George B. McClellan, in command of the Army of the Potomac, and repeated so often that it exasperated the country, which was demanding action.

6 It would be superfluous in me to point out to your Lordship that this is war.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, U. S. Minister to England, Despatch, to Earl Russell, 5 Sept., 1863, protesting against permitting the Confederate ironclads, then building in England, to depart from Liverpool.

7 No terms except an unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works.

U. S. GRANT, reply to General Simon B. Buckner, at Fort Donelson, Ky., 16 Feb., 1862. (BADEAU, Military History of Ulysses S. Grant, p. 48.)

U. S. GRANT, to General Henry W. Halleck, 11 May, 1864.

9 Damn the torpedoes!

DAVID GLASGOW FARRAGUT, at the battle of Mobile Bay, 5 Aug., 1864.

10 Hold the fort, for I am coming!

What GENERAL WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN really signalled to General Corse from the top of Kenesaw Mountain, when Corse was attacked at Allatoona, 5 Oct., 1864, was "Hold out; relief is coming." But "Hold the fort, for I am coming" is the accepted version, and was made the refrain of a popular hymn by Dwight L. Moody.

11 Fellow-citizens: Clouds and darkness are around Him; His pavilion is dark waters and thick clouds; justice and judgment are the establishment of His throne; mercy and truth shall go before His face! Fellow-citizens! God reigns and the Government at Washington lives.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Address, April, 1865, from the balcony of the New York Custom House to a crowd, excited by the news of President Lincoln's assassination.

One of the noblest sentences ever uttered was uttered by Mr. Garfield before he became President. He was a Member of Congress, as I remember it, at the time of Mr. Lincoln's assassination. He was at the old Fifth Avenue Hotel and they begged him to go out and say something to the people. He went out and after he had attracted their attention, he said this beautiful thing: "My fellow citizens, the President is dead, but the Government lives and God Omnipotent reigns." America is the place where you cannot kill your government by killing the men who conduct it.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Helena, Mont., 11 Sept., 1919.

God lives and reigns! He built and lent The heights for Freedom's battlement, Where floats her flag in triumph still!

WILL HENRY THOMPSON, The High Tide at Gettysburg.

12 Waving the bloody shirt.

The phrase as applied to American politics is attributed to OLIVER P. MORTON, U. S. Senator from 1867–1879, and one of the presidential candidates at the Cincinnati convention of 1876. (See FARMER, Americanisms, p. 9.) For twenty years after the Civil War, Republican campaigns were based upon the record of the party in saving the Union, denunciation of the Democrats for bringing on the war. It was these tactics which were described as "waving the bloody shirt."

With a crutch by way of a pole,
With artistic flutter and flirt,
A Senator in the Senate sat
Waving a bloody shirt.

GEORGE THOMAS LANIGAN, The Bloody Shirt.

The reference is to Senator Oliver P. Morton, whose legs were crippled and who had a stationary crutch or bracket at the side of his desk upon which he could lean while speaking.

It is a relief to remember that this phrase [waving the bloody shirt] is no invention of our politicians. It dates back to Scotland three centuries ago. After a massacre in Glenfruin, not so savage as has stained our annals, two hundred and twenty widows rode on white palfreys to Stirling Tower, bearing each on a spear her husband's bloody shirt.

ROSCOE CONKLING, Speech, New York, 17 Sept., 1880.

Having no banners but bloody shirts hanged upon long staves.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEX, Arcadia. Bk. i.

The bloody shirt of the martyr was exposed in the mosch of Damascus.

GIBBON, Decline and Fall. Vol. vi, p. 277.

It is by spreading out the miseries of the workmen, the bloody shirt of some victim, that the people are excited to take arms.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, from sub-Treasury steps in Wall Street, 1 Jan., 1879, upon resumption of specie payments.

2 Well, isn't this a billion dollar country?

Attributed to CHARLES FOSTER, Secretary of the Treasury under Harrison, retorting to the Democratic gibe about a "billion dollar Congress."

The 51st was promptly dubbed "The Billion Dollar Congress." "This is a Billion Dollar Country" was the retort almost universally attributed to Reed [Thomas B. Reed] himself, although in an article in the North American Review for March, 1892, he lays no claim to its authorship and praises it as containing "both wit and wisdom" and "the best in kind ever evoked."

The slogan of the Spanish-American War. On 15 Feb., 1898, the American battleship Maine was destroyed by a mine in the harbor of Havana, Cuba.

In a Broadway bar an unknown man raised his glass and solemnly said: "Gentlemen, remember the Maine!" and furnished a slogan that was to ring around the world.

4 Lafayette, we are here.

COLONEL C. E. STANTON, Address, delivered at the grave of Lafayette in the Picpus Cemetery, Paris, 4 July, 1917. Often wrongly attributed to General John J. 5 Come on, you sons of bitches! Do you want to live forever?

GUNNERY SERGEANT DANIEL DALY, U. S. Marine Corps, at Lucy-le-Bocage, on the fringe of Belleau Wood, 4 June, 1918.

Gunnery Sergeant Daly, however, writes me that the exclamation he made was, "For Christ's sake, men, come on! Do you want to live forever?" Obviously he is very loath to admit, as most of us would be, in writing, that he used the sobriquet of sons of bitches.

It is said to have been used by a soldier of the Sixteenth Illinois during the attack on Missionary Ridge, 25 Nov., 1863.

8 Certain bounds must be observed in our amusements, and we must be careful not to carry things too far and, swept away by our passions, lapse into shameful excess. (Ludendi etiam est quidam modus retinendus, ut ne nimis omnia profundamus elatique voluptate in aliquam turpitudinem delabamur.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 141.

<sup>5</sup> Amusement is the happiness of those who cannot think.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

Behold the child, by Nature's kindly law,
Pleas'd with a rattle, tickled with a straw:
Some livelier plaything gives his youth delight,
A little louder, but as empty quite:
Scarfs, garters, gold, amuse his riper stage,
And beads and prayer-books are the toys of age:
Pleas'd with this bauble still, as that before,
Till tired he sleeps, and life's poor play is o'er.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 275.

<sup>6</sup> What revels are in hand? Is there no play
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. i, l. 35.

Sir Andrew: I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir Toby: Art thou good at these kickshawses, knight?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 3, l. 120.

<sup>7</sup> We cry for mercy to the next amusement;
The next amusement mortgages our fields.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 131.

O ye Lorenzos of our age! who deem
One moment unamused, a misery.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 245.

I—Ancestry: Apothegms

<sup>8</sup> There was a young man in Rome, that was very like Augustus Cæsar; Augustus took knowledge of it, and sent for the man, and asked him, "Was your mother never at Rome?" He answered, "No, sir; but my father was."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms, No. 87.

<sup>9</sup> Gentility is nothing else but ancient riches.

LORD BURGHLEY. (Peck, Desiderata Curiosæ, 48.)

Honour was but ancient riches.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Court and Country.

Nobility is nothing but ancient riches.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>10</sup> A branch of one of your antediluvian families, fellows that the flood could not wash away.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act v, sc. 1.

I am, in point of fact, a particularly haughty and exclusive person, of pre-Adamite ancestral descent. You will understand this when I tell you that I can trace my ancestry back to a protoplasmal primordial atomic globule.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

Look in the chronicles; we came in with Richard Conqueror.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 1, l. 4.

Such is the stock from which I spring. (Eo sum genere gnatus.)

<sup>11</sup> Earls that dated from early years.

HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Fancy Ball.

Nobles by the right of an earlier creation, and priests by the imposition of a mightier hand.

MACAULAY, Essays: Milton.

A penniless lass wi' a lang pedigree.

CAROLINA NAIRNE, The Laird of Cockpen.

<sup>12</sup> Hereditary nobility is due to the presumption that we shall do well because our fathers have done well. (La noblesse est une dignité due à la présomption que nous ferons bien, parce que nos pères ont bien fait.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 218.

<sup>13</sup> Who is well-born? He who is by nature well fitted for virtue. (Quis est generosus? Ad virtutem bene a natura compositus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Luciliūm. Epis. xlv, sec. 5.

For all that fair is, is by nature good;

That is a sign to know the gentle blood.

SPENSER, An Hymne in Honour of Beautie, l. 139.

<sup>14</sup> He who boasts of his descent, praises the deeds of another. (Qui genus jactat suum, Aliena laudat.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 340.

He stands for fame on his forefathers' feet,
By heraldry prov'd valiant or discreet.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 131.

<sup>1</sup> Our ancestors are very good kind of folks; but they are the last people I should choose to have a visiting acquaintance with.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iv, sc. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Who breaks his birth's invidious bar.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. lxiv.

<sup>3</sup> You should study the Peerage, Gerald. . . . It is the best thing in fiction the English have ever done.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

II—Ancestry: Heredity

<sup>4</sup> That they breed in and in, as might be shown, Marrying their cousins—nay, their aunts and nieces,

Which always spoils the breed, if it increases.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 57.

This heathenish cross restored the breed again, Ruined its blood, but much improved its flesh.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 58.

<sup>5</sup> How shall a man escape from his ancestors, or draw off from his veins the black drop which he drew from his father's or his mother's life? It often appears in a family, as if all the qualities of the progenitors were potted in several jars—some ruling quality in each son or daughter of the house,—and sometimes the unmixed temperament, the rank unmitigated elixir, the family vice, is drawn off in a separate individual, and the others are proportionally relieved.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

What can I do against the influence of Race, in my history? What can I do against heredity and constitutional habits; against scrofula, lymph, impotence?

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

<sup>6</sup> Men resemble their contemporaries even more than their progenitors.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

<sup>7</sup> It will not out of the flesh that is bred in the bone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8.

What is bred in the bone will never come out of the flesh.

PILPAY, Two Fishermen. Fable xiv.

It will never come out of the flesh that's bred in the bone.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>8</sup> This body in which we journey across the isthmus between the two oceans is not a private carriage, but an omnibus.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, The Guardian Angel. Ch. 3. Quoted as "from a work which will be repeatedly referred to in this narrative." Sometimes condensed to: "We are omnibuses in which our ancestors ride."

See also LIFE: AN ISTHMUS.

<sup>9</sup> What we have inherited from our fathers and mothers is not all that "walks" in us. There are all sorts of dead ideas and lifeless old beliefs. They have no tangibility but they haunt us all the same and we cannot get rid of them. Whenever I take up a newspaper I seem to see Ghosts gliding between the lines. Ghosts must be all over the country, as thick as the sands of the sea.

HENRIK IBSEN, Ghosts. Act ii.

Year by year, in pious patience, vengeful Mrs. Boffkin sits Waiting for the Sleary babies to develop Sleary's fits.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Post That Fitted.

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 213.

<sup>11</sup> One always retains the traces of one's origin. (On garde toujours la marque de ses origines.)

ERNEST RENAN, La Vie de Jésus.

<sup>12</sup> He's a chip o' the old block.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight, Act i. (1633)

How well dost thou now appear to be a chip of the old block?

MILTON, Apology for Smectymnuus. Sec. 7. (1642)

Not merely a chip of the old block, but the old block itself.

EDMUND BURKE, referring to Pitt on the occasion of his first speech, 26 Feb., 1781. (WRAXALL, Memoirs. Vol. ii, pt. ii, p. 78.)

I look upon you as a gem of the old rock.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia.

She's a chick of the old cock.

APHRA BEHN, Sir Patient Fancy. Act iv, sc. 4.

<sup>13</sup> Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low;

And some such strange bull leap'd your father's cow,

And got a calf in that same noble feat.

Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 4, l. 48.

But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,

They never do beget a coal-black calf.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1, l. 31.

Nor do fierce eagles produce the peaceful dove. (Neque imbellem feroces Progenerant aquilæ columbam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 31.

1
Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we!
For such as we are made of, such we be.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 32.

III—Ancestry: Its Worth

2
Nobility is a graceful ornament to the civil order. It is the Corinthian capital of polished society.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

His father's name was José—Don, of course,
A true Hidalgo, free from every stain
Of Moor or Hebrew blood, he traced his source

Through the most Gothic gentlemen of Spain.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 9.

4
A great distinction, and amongst mankind
The most conspicuous, is to spring from sires
Renowned for virtue.

(Δεινὸς χαρακτήρ καπῖσημος ἐν βροτοῖς ἐσθλῶν γενέσθαι, καπὶ μείζον ἔρχεται τῆς εὐγενείας ὄνομα τοῖσιν ἀξίοις.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 379. (Woodhull, tr.)

Spurn not the nobly born with love affected!
Nor treat with virtuous scorn the well-connected!

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act ii.

I think you ought to recollect
You cannot show too much respect
Towards the highly-titled few;
But nobody does, and why should you?

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

6
The fairest flower
That ever blossomed on ancestral timber.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

He combines the manners of a Marquis with the morals of a Methodist.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

7
No, my friends, I go (always other things being equal) for the man who inherits family traditions and the cumulative humanities of at least four or five generations.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-

8
O Damsel Dorothy! Dorothy Q!
Strange is the gift that I owe to you; . . .
What if, a hundred years ago,
Those close-shut lips had answered No,
When forth the tremulous question came
That cost the maiden her Norman name,
And under the folds that look so still
The bodice swelled with the bosom's thrill?
Should I be I, or would it be
One-tenth another, to nine-tenths me?

O. W. HOLMES, Dorothy Q. St. 5.

9
The brave are born from the brave and good.
(Fortes creantur fortibus et bonis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 29.

Nothing like blood, sir, in hosses, dawgs, and
men.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 35.

10
Let wealth and commerce, laws and learning
die,

But leave us still our old nobility.

LORD JOHN MANNERS, England's Trust. Bk.
iii, l. 227.

Be aristocracy the only joy:
Let commerce perish—let the world expire.

UNKNOWN, Modern Gulliver, p. 192.

11
'Tis a high virtue to tread in the steps of our ancestors, when they have gone before us in the right path. (Invenio autem apud sapientes honestissimum esse majorum vestigia sequi, si modo recto itinere præcesserint.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 8.

It is indeed a desirable thing to be well descended, but the glory belongs to our ancestors.

PLUTARCH, On the Training of Children.

Birth and ancestry, and that which we have not ourselves achieved, we can scarcely call our own.
(Nam genus et proavos et quæ non fecimus ipsi, Vix ea nostra voco.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xiii, l. 140.

12
Ancestral glory is, as it were, a lamp to posterity. (Majorum gloria posteris quasi lumen est.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 85, sec. 23.

13
Brave peers of England, pillars of the state.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 75.

14
Never unworthy my great ancestors. (Magnorum haud unquam indignus avorum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 649.

Do as your great progenitors have done,
And, by their virtues, prove yourself their son.

DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath, Her Tale, l. 398.

15
Bishop Warburton is reported to have said that high birth was a thing which he never knew any one to disparage except those who had it not, and he never knew any one make a boast of it who had anything else to be proud of.

RICHARD WHATELY, *Annotation on Bacon's
Essay, Of Humility*.

IV—Ancestry: Its Emptiness

16
Nobility of birth commonly abateth industry;
and he that is not industrious envieth him that is. Besides, noble persons cannot go much higher; and he that standeth at a stay when others rise can hardly avoid motions of envy.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Nobility.

Idleness is an appendix to nobility.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 6.

It becomes noblemen to do nothing well.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act i, sc. 1.

The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 12.

1 Most lords are feeble and forlorn.

WALTER BAGEHOT, English Constitution, p. 122.

Peers are not always gen'rous as well-bred.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 597.

All baronets are bad.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

When I'm a bad Bart, I will tell taradiddles.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

Good families are generally worse than any others.

ANTHONY HOPE, The Prisoner of Zenda. Ch. 1.

Earls as goes mad in their castles,

And females what settles their hash.

GEORGE ROBERT SIMS, Dagonet Ballads: Polly.

Mongrel beef-witted lord.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 14.

This lord . . . who wears his wit in his belly and his guts in his head.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 79.

Your lord is a leaden shilling, which you bend every way, and debases the stamp he bears.

WYCHERLEY, Plain-Dealer. Act i, sc. 1.

See also under TITLES.

2 Sorry pre-eminence of high descent,
Above the vulgar born, to rot in state!

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 154.

3 Almost in every kingdom the most ancient families have been at first princes' bastards; their worthiest captains, best wits, greatest scholars, bravest spirits in all our annals, have been base [born].

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 1.

Great families of yesterday we show,
And lords whose parents were the Lord knows who.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman. Pt. i, l. 374.

Who, fond of pedigree, derive
From the most noted whore alive.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 324.

4 So that the branch a goodly verdure flings,
I reckon not if an acorn gave it birth.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 59.

5 The pedigree of honey
Does not concern the bee;
A clover, any time, to him
Is aristocracy.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 56.

6 Then what can birth, or mortal men, bestow,
Since floods no higher than their fountains
flow?

DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath, Her Tale, l. 388.

They talk about their Pilgrim blood,
Their birthright high and holy!

A mountain-stream that ends in mud
Methinks is melancholy.

J. R. LOWELL, An Interview with Miles Standish. St. 11.

7 Nor stand so much on your gentility,
Which is an airy, and mere borrowed thing,
From dead men's dust, and bones, and none
of yours,
Unless you make, or hold it.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 1.

8 What do pedigrees avail? What boots it, Ponticus, to possess ancient blood, and show the painted features of ancestors? (Stemmata quid faciunt? Quid prodest, Pontice, longo Sanguine censer, pictos ostendere vultus Majorum?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 1.

"Your ancient house!" No more.—I cannot see
The wondrous merits of a pedigree:
No, Ponticus; nor of a proud display
Of smoky ancestors in wax or clay.

JUVENAL, Satires, viii, 1. (Gifford, tr.)

Be not deluded by ancient masks about the hall.
Take thy grandfathers and go. (Nec te decipiant veteres circum atria ceræ. Tolle tuos tecum avos!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 65.

A hall full of smoke-begrimed busts do not make a nobleman. (Non facit nobilem atrium plenum fumosis imaginibus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 5.

9 I don't know who my grandfather was; I am much more concerned to know what his grandson will be.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (GROSS, Lincoln's Own Stories, p. 12.)

10 Somehow I've always had a sort of sneakin'
Idea that peddies is purty much Like monkeys' tails—so long they're apt to weaken

The yap that drags 'em round.

ROBERTUS LOVE, The Boy from Hodgenville.

11 Fine B— observes no other rules
Than those the coterie prize;

She thinks, whilst lords continue fools,
'Tis vulgar to be wise.

EDWARD LOVIBOND, On a Very Fine Lady.

12 Sence I've ben here, I've hired a chap to look about for me

To git me a transplantable an' thrifty fem'ly-tree.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 3.

1 The man who has not anything to boast of but his illustrious ancestors is like a potato,—the only good belonging to him is under ground.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters. (1614)

A degenerate nobleman, or one that is proud of his birth, is like a turnip. There is nothing good of him but that which is underground.

SAMUEL BUTLER, "Characters": A Degenerate Nobleman. (c. 1660)

2 Aristocracy is always cruel.

3 A noble fool was never in a fault.

POPE, January and May, l. 165.

What woful stuff this madrigal would be
In some starv'd hackney sonnettee or me!
But let a Lord once own the happy lines,
How the wit brightens! how the style refines!

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 218.

'Tis from high life high characters are drawn;
A saint in crape is twice a saint in lawn; . . .
Wise if a minister; but if a king,
More wise, more learn'd, more just, more ev'ry-thing.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 135.

4 But by your fathers' worth if yours you rate,
Count me those only who were good and great.

Go! if your ancient but ignoble blood
Has crept thro' scoundrels ever since the flood,

Go! and pretend your family is young,
Nor own your fathers have been fools so long.
What can ennoble sots, or slaves, or cowards?
Alas! not all the blood of all the Howards.

8 Relationship compels. (Τὸ . . . συγγενὲς . . . ἐσσυγιάζει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 291.

9 If there be any good in nobility, I trow it to be only this, that it imposeth a necessity upon those which are noble, that they should not suffer their nobility to degenerate from the virtues of their ancestors. (Quod si quid est in nobilitate bonum, id esse arbitror solum, ut inposita nobilibus necessitudo videatur ne a majorum virtute degeneret.)

BOËTHIUS, De Consolatione Philosophæ. Bk. iii, ch. 6, sec. 25.

10 The nobly born must nobly meet their fate.

EURIPIDES, Alcmene. Frag. 100.

11 Superior worth your rank requires;
For that mankind reveres your sires:

If you degenerate from your race,
Their merits heighten your disgrace.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, No. 11, l. 43.

12 Noblesse oblige. (Birth compels it. Nobility constrains us. Noble birth imposes the obligation of noble actions.)

DUC DE LEVIS, Maxims. No. 73. (1808) Said by the Comte de Laborde to be the first occurrence of the phrase in this form. (Notice to French Historical Society, 1865.)

Noblesse oblige; or, superior advantages bind you to larger generosity.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

VI—Ancestry: Children of Adam

13 When Adam dalfe and Eve spane
So spire if thou may spede,

Whare was then the pride of man,
That now merres his mede?

RICHARD ROLLE DE HAMPOLE. (Early English Text Society Reprints, No. 26, p. 79. c. 1330.) The first line of this quatrain had been long in use as a proverb, but this is its first appearance in English literature.

1
When Adam dolve and Eve span,
Who was then the gentleman?

JOHN BALL, Text, used by him for his speech at Blackheath to the rebels in Wat Tyler's insurrection, 12 June, 1381. Ball was afterwards hanged. (WALSINGHAM, Historia Anglica; HUME, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 17, note.)

When Adam dolved and Eve span,
Who was then the gentleman?
Up start a churl, and gathered good,
And thence did spring our gentle blood.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1678)

2
Say, when the ground our father Adam tilled,
And mother Eve the humble distaff held,
Who then his pedigree presumed to trace,
Or challenged the prerogative of place?
(Primus Adamus duro cum verterat arva ligone,

Pensaque de vili deceret Eva colo:
Ecquis in hoc poterat vir nobilis orbe videri?
Et modo quisquam alios ante locandus erir?)
DEDEKIND, Grobianus. Bk. i, sec. 4.

3
That all from Adam first begun,
None but ungodly Woolston doubts,
And that his son, and his son's sons
Were all but ploughmen, clowns and louts.

Each when his rustic pains began,
To merit pleaded equal right,
'Twas only who left off at noon,
Or who went on to work till night.
(D'Adam nous sommes tous enfants,

La preuve en est connue,
Et que tous, nos première parents
Ont mené la charrue.

Mais, las de cultiver enfin

La terre labourée,
L'une a dételé le matin,
L'autre l'après-dinée.)

PHILIPPE DE COULANGES, L'Origine de la Noblesse. (Matthew Prior, tr.)

4
As he said in Machiavel, omnes eodem patre nati, Adam's sons, conceived all and born in sin, etc. "We are by nature all as one, all alike, if you see us naked; let us wear theirs and they our clothes, and what is the difference?"

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 2.

5
All blood is alike ancient.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 505.

6
Nobles and heralds, by your leave,
Here lies what once was Matthew Prior;
The son of Adam and of Eve:
Can Bourbon or Nassau claim higher?
MATTHEW PRIOR, Epitaph: Extempore.

John Carnegie lies here,
Descended from Adam and Eve.

If any can boast of a pedigree higher,
He will willingly give them leave.
UNKNOWN. An ancient Scottish epitaph.

7
Every king springs from a race of slaves, and every slave has had kings among his ancestors.
PLATO, Thæstetus. Sec. 174.

8
We have all had the same number of forefathers. (Omnibus nobis totidem ante nos sunt.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 4.

9
Each has his own tree of ancestors, but at the top of all sits Probably Arboreal.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Pastoral.

10
From yon blue heavens above us bent,
The gardener Adam and his wife
Smile at the claims of long descent.

Howe'er it be, it seems to me
'Tis only noble to be good.
Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood.

TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. St. 7.

VII—Ancestry: Its Beginning

11
My nobility begins in me, but yours ends in you.

IPHICRATES, a shoemaker's son, when reviled by Harmodius for his mean birth. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms.)

Very likely; my ancestry begins where yours ends.

Attributed to ALEXANDRE DUMAS, when asked if he were not descended from an ape, a covert sneer at his negro grandmother.

12
I am my own ancestor. (Moi je suis mon ancêtre.)

MARSEAL ANDOCHE JUNOT, when created by Napoleon Duke of Abrantès, and sneeringly asked by one of the old régime what was his ancestry. The whole reply was, "Ah, ma foi, je n'en sais rien; moi je suis mon ancêtre," Faith, I know nothing about it, I am my own ancestor.

Sire, I am my own Rudolph of Hapsburg.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, to his prospective father-in-law, the Emperor of Austria, when the latter wished to trace his ancestry to a prince. Rudolph was the founder of the Hapsburg family.

Friend, my patent of nobility comes from Montemotte.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, to a genealogist, referring to his first victory.

13
I have often noticed that ancestors never boast of the descendants who boast of ancestors I would rather start a family than finish one blood will tell but often it tells too much

DON MARQUIS, a roach of the taverns.

THOMAS WALSINGHAM, Historia Anglicana, p.
260. Quoted.

Three generations from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves.
Attributed to ANDREW CARNEGIE, but the nearest approach in his published writings is in a letter in which he says, "Even in Yorkshire the proverb is, 'Three generations from clogs to clogs.'" (HENDRICK, Life. Vol. ii, p. 175.)

There's nobbut three generations atween clog and

ANGEL

I—Angel: The Guardian Angel

9 Every man hath a good and a bad angel attending on him in particular, all his life long.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 2.

I guess one angel is another's hell:
The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

SHAKESPEARE, The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 26.

10 Was there no star that could be sent,
No watcher in the firmament,
No angel from the countless host
That loiters round the crystal coast,
Could stoop to heal that only child?

EMERSON, Threnody. St. 6.

11 How did he git thar? Angels.

He could never have walked in that storm.

They jest scooped down and toted him
To whar it was safe and warm.

And I think that saving a little child,
And fatching him to his own,

Is a derned sight better business
Than loafing around the Throne.

JOHN HAY, Little Breeches.

12 I am thy evil genius, Brutus, and thou shalt see me at Philippi. (Ὁ σός, ὦ βρούτε, δαίμον κακός· ὄψει δέ με περὶ Φιλίππους.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar. Ch. 69, sec. 7. The threat of the spectre which appeared to Brutus in his tent at Abydos, 42 B. C., an omen that Cæsar's murder was not pleasing to the gods. Brutus answered boldly, "I shall see thee there," and when the spectre reappeared at Philippi, Brutus, having been defeated,
"put his naked sword to his breast and so died."

1 A guardian angel o'er his life presiding,
Doubling his pleasures, and his cares dividing.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 353.

Dear and great Angel, wouldst thou only leave That child, when thou hast done with him, for me!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Guardian-Angel.

2 This sight would make him do a desperate turn,

Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 207.

3 How oft do they their silver bowers leave
To come to succour us, that succour want!
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto viii, st. 2.

4 Sweet souls around us watch us still,
Press nearer to our side;
Into our thoughts, into our prayers,

With gentle helpings glide.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, The Other World.

5 Some angel guide my pencil, while I draw,
What nothing less than angel can exceed.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1079.

II—Angel: The Recording Angel

6 A demon holds a book, in which are written the sins of a particular man; an Angel drops on it from a phial, a tear which the sinner had shed in doing a good action, and his sins are washed out.

ALBERIC, MONK OF MONTE-CASSINO. (Edinburgh Review, vol. i, p. 67.)

7 But, sad as angels for the good man's sin,
Weep to record, and blush to give it in.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 357.

8 When a man dies they who survive him ask what property he has left behind. The angel who bends over the dying man asks what good deeds he has sent before him.

The Koran.

9 There are two angels, that attend unseen
Each one of us, and in great books record
Our good and evil deeds. He who writes down
The good ones, after every action closes
His volume, and ascends with it to God.
The other keeps his dreadful day-book open
Till sunset, that we may repent; which doing,
The record of the action fades away,
And leaves a line of white across the page.

LONGFELLOW, Christus. Pt. ii, The School of Salerno.

10 There written, all,
Black as the damning drops that fall
From the denouncing Angel's pen

Ere Mercy weeps them out again.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, l. 426.

11 "He shall not die, by G—," cried my uncle Toby. The Accusing Spirit, which flew up to heaven's chancery with the oath, blushed as he gave it in; and the Recording Angel, as he wrote it down, dropped a tear upon the word and blotted it out for ever.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vi, ch. 8.

The accusing Byers* "flew up to Heaven's Chancery,"

Blushing like scarlet with shame and concern;
The Archangel took down his tale, and in answer
he

Wept—(See the works of the late Mr. Sterne).

Indeed, it is said, a less taking both were in
When, after a lapse of a great many years,
They book'd Uncle Toby five shillings for swear-
ing,

And blotted the fine out again with their tears.

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: A Lay of St. Nicholas. St. 27, 28. (*The Prince of Peripatetic Informers, and the terror of Stage Coachmen, when such things were. Alack! alack! the Railroads have ruined his "vested interest."—Barham's note.)

III—Angels: Their Visits

12 Once at the Angelus (Ere I was dead),
Angels all glorious came to my Bed;
Angels in blue and white crowned on the Head.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Good-night, Babette!

13 And he [the angel] said, Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he [Jacob] said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.

Old Testament: Genesis, xxxii, 26.

Hold the fleet angel fast until he bless thee.

NATHANIEL COTTON, To-morrow, l. 36.

Like the patriarch's angel hold it fast
Till it gives its blessing.

WHITTIER, My Soul and I.

14 Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares.

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 2.

Unbless'd thy hand, if, in this low disguise,
Wander, perhaps, some inmate of the skies.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 576. (Pope, tr.)

In this dim world of clouding cares,
We rarely know, till 'wildered eyes
See white wings lessening up the skies,
The angels with us unawares.

GERALD MASSEY, Ballad of Babe Christabel.

15 But all God's angels come to us disguised:
Sorrow and sickness, poverty and death,
One after other lift their frowning masks,
And we behold the Seraph's face beneath,

All radiant with the glory and the calm
Of having looked upon the front of God.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Death of a Friend's Child.

With silence only as their benediction,
God's angels come
Where, in the shadow of a great affliction,
The soul sits dumb!

WHITTIER, To My Friend on the Death of His Sister.

1
An angel stood and met my gaze,
Through the low doorway of my tent;
The tent is struck, the vision stays;—
I only know she came and went.
J. R. LOWELL, She Came and Went.

I have no angels left
Now, Sweet, to pray to:
Where you have made your shrine
They are away to.
They have struck Heaven's tent,
And gone to cover you:
Whereso you keep your state
Heaven is pitched over you!
FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Carrier Song.

2
For God will deign
To visit oft the dwellings of just men
Delighted, and with frequent intercourse
Thither will send his winged messengers
On errands of supernal grace.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 569.

3
Like angels' visits, short and bright.
JOHN NORRIS, The Parting. (c. 1700)
Angels, as 'tis but seldom they appear,
So neither do they make long stay;
They do but visit and away.
JOHN NORRIS, To the Memory of His Niece.

Visits
Like those of angels, short and far between.
ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave. Pt. ii, l. 586. (1743)
What though my winged hours of bliss have been Like angel-visits, few and far between?
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 377. (1799)

Mr. Campbell, in altering the expression has spoiled it. "Few" and "far between" are the same thing.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Poets. Hazlitt points out Campbell's indebtedness to Blair, and notes elsewhere that Campbell never forgave him for this bit of literary detective work.

4
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 371.

5
Around our pillows golden ladders rise,
And up and down the skies,
With winged sandals shod,
The angels come, and go, the Messengers of God!

R. H. STODDARD, Hymn to the Beautiful.

IV—Angels: In Heaven

6
I know that they are happy
With their angel-plumage on.

PARK BENJAMIN, The Departed.
See also DEATH: "THEY ARE ALL GONE."

7
'Tis only when they spring to Heaven that angels

Reveal themselves to you.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v.

8
This world has angels all too few,
And heaven is overflowing.

S. T. COLERIDGE, To a Young Lady.

In heaven an angel is nobody in particular.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

9
We trust, in plumed procession,
For such the angels go,
Rank after rank, with even feet
And uniforms of snow.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 16.

10
In merest prudence men should teach . . .
That science ranks as monstrous things
Two pairs of upper limbs; so wings—
E'en angels' wings!—are fictions.

AUSTIN DOBSON, A Fairy Tale.

11
Writ in the climate of heaven, in the language spoken by angels.

LONGFELLOW, The Children of the Lord's Supper, l. 262.

12
How sweetly did they float upon the wings
Of silence through the empty-vaulted night,
At every fall smoothing the raven down
Of darkness till it smiled!

MILTON, Comus, l. 249.

The helmed Cherubim,
The sworded Seraphim,
Are seen in glittering ranks with wings display'd.
MILTON, Hymn on the Nativity, l. 112.

Hear all ye Angels, progeny of light,
Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 600.

13
Look homeward, Angel, now, and melt with ruth.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 163.

As far as angels' ken.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 59.

14
Speak ye who best can tell, ye sons of light,
Angels, for ye behold him, and with songs
And choral symphonies, day without night,
Circle his throne rejoicing.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 160.

The angels all were singing out of tune,
And hoarse with having little else to do,
Excepting to wind up the sun and moon,
Or curb a runaway young star or two.
BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 2.

1 And with the morn those angel faces smile
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, The Pillar of the Cloud.

2 All angel now—yet little less than all,
While still a pilgrim in this world below!
SCOTT, Lord of the Isles: Conclusion, l. 10.
Referring to Harriet, Duchess of Buccleugh.

Sleep on in peace, await thy Maker's will,
Then rise unchanged, and be an Angell still.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on the tomb of Mary Angell, in St. Mary's church, Nottingham, England.

3 Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 22.

If angels fight,

Weak men must fall, for heaven still guards the right.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 62.

4 Angels from friendship gather half their joy.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 575.

Angels are men of a superior kind;
Angels are men in lighter habit clad.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 533.

V—Angels: On Earth

5 When one that holds communion with the skies

Has fill'd his urn where these pure waters
rise,

And once more mingles with us meaner things,
'Tis ev'n as if an angel shook his wings.

COWPER, Charity, l. 435.

6 We are ne'er like angels till our passion dies.
THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii,
act i, sc. 2.

7 Let old Timotheus yield the prize
Or both divide the crown:
He rais'd a mortal to the skies;
She drew an angel down.
DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 167.

8 An angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon!
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 43.

A ministering angel shall my sister be.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 264.

9 An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 1, l. 110.

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.
Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 43.

O, the more angel she,

And you the blacker devil!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 130.

10 Like outcast spirits, who wait,
And see, through heaven's gate,
Angels within it.
THACKERAY, The Church Porch. (Pendennis.
Ch. 31.)

11 When I see angels in pettycoats I'm always sorry they hain't got wings so they kin quietly fly off whare thay will be appreshiated.
ARTEMUS WARD, Piccolomini.

12 Not Angles, but Angels! (Non Angli, sed Angeli!)

Attributed to GREGORY THE GREAT, on seeing some handsome British captives offered for sale at Rome.

To equip a dull, respectable person with wings would be but to make a parody of an angel.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque:
Crabbed Age and Youth.

CORNEILLE, Héraclius. Act i, sc. 2.

8
Anger is one of the sinews of the soul; he that wants it hath a maimed mind.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, p. 160.

9
His nose should pant and his lip should curl,
His cheeks should flame and his brow should furl,

His bosom should heave and his heart should glow,

And his fist be ever ready for a knock-down blow.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

His energetic fist

Should be ready to resist

A dictatorial word.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

10
Anger, far sweeter than trickling honey, rises like smoke in the breasts of men.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 108.

11
Anger in its time and place
May assume a kind of grace.
It must have some reason in it,
And not last beyond a minute.

CHARLES AND MARY LAMB, Anger.

12
The flame of anger, bright and brief,
Sharpens the barb of love.

W. S. LANDOR, Miscellaneous Poems. No. 66.

13
Every normal man must be tempted, at times, to spit on his hands, hoist the black flag, and begin slitting throats.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. i, p. 90.

14
However weak the hand, anger gives it strength. (Quamlibet infirmas adjuvat ira manus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 7, l. 66.

Anger brings back his strength. (Ac vim suscitatur ira.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 454.

Their rage supplies them with weapons. (Furor arma ministrat.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 150.

15
Touch me with noble anger!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 279.

'Tis the noblest mood
That takes least hold on anger; those faint hearts

That hold least fire are fain to show it first.

SWINBURNE, Bothwell. Act ii, sc. 4.

Anger is a noble infirmity.

MARTIN F. TUPPER, Of Hatred and Anger.

III—Anger: Its Folly

16
The angry man always thinks he can do more than he can. (Iratus semper plus putat posse facere quam possit.)

ALBERTANO OF BRESCIA, Liber Consolationis.

He that asketh counsel of himself, certes he must be without ire, for many causes. The first is this: he that hath great ire and wrath in himself, he weeneth always that he may do things that he may not do. And secondly, he that is irate and wroth, he may not well deem, and he that may not well deem, may not well counsel.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 18.

17
The thing I pity most

In men is—action prompted by surprise
Of anger.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Forgiveness.

18
He that strives not to stem his anger's tide,
Does a wild horse without a bridle ride.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love's Last Shift. Act iii, sc. 7.

A man in a passion rides a mad horse.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

When a man grows angry, his reason rides out.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5533.

When anger rushes, unrestrained, to action,
Like a hot steed, it stumbles on its way.
RICHARD SAVAGE, Sir Thomas Overbury.

Anger is like
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 132.

1
Rage supplies all with arms. When an angry man thirsts for blood, anything will serve him as a spear. (Omnibus armatur rabies. Pro cuspidē ferri Cuncta volant, dum dextra ferox in vulnera sævit.)

CLAUDIAN, Rimanti Telum Ira Facit, l. 2.

Anger seeks its prey,— Something to tear with sharp-edged tooth and claw.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

2
Anger and folly walk cheek by jole; repentance treads on both their heels.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1741.

3
Act nothing in furious passion; it's putting to sea in a storm.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam.

Anger is a sworn enemy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 793.

4
He who curbs not his anger will wish undone that which vexation and wrath prompted.
(Qui non moderabitur iræ, Infectum volet esse, dolor quod suaserit et mens.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 59.

5 Anger is momentary madness. (Ira furor brevis est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. ii, l. 62.

Anger sets the house on fire; . . . it is a short madness, and an eternal enemy to discourse and sober counsels and fair conversation.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons.

Says he, "I reckon I'm a ding-dang fool
For gettin' het up when I might stay cool:
If you are a hoss—then I'm a mule,"
Under the Joshua tree.

HENRY H. KNIBBS, Under the Joshua Tree.

7
Every stroke our fury strikes is sure to hit ourselves at last.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude, 57.

Anger punishes itself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 799.

To be angry is to revenge the faults of others upon ourselves.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

8
"All this is madness," cries a sober sage:
But who, my friend, has reason in his rage?
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 151.

9
Anger and haste hinder good counsel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Angry men seldom want woe.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10
Anger is like those ruins which break themselves upon what they fall. (Ira ruinis simillima, quæ super id quod opprèssere, fran-guntur.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, sec. 1.

11
Never anger Made good guard for itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 9.

12
Give not reins to your inflamed passions;
take time and a little delay; impetuosity manages all things badly.

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. x, l. 703.

13
Fury and anger carry the mind away. (Furor iraque mentem præcipitant.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 316.

14
The elephant is never won with anger,
Nor must that man who would reclaim a lion
Take him by the teeth.

JOHN WILMOT, Valentinian. Act i, l. 1.

IV—Anger: Its Control

15
Anybody can become angry—that is easy;
but to be angry with the right person, and to the right degree, and at the right time, and for the right purpose, and in the right way—that is not within everybody's power and is not easy.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

16
Remember, when you are angry, to say or do nothing until you have repeated the four-and-twenty letters to yourself.

ATHENODORUS, to Cæsar Augustus. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar Augustus.)

Take a little time—count five-and-twenty, Tat-tycoram.

CHARLES DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Pt. i, ch. 14.

When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, an hundred.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 111.

While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 238.

When angry, count four; when very angry,
swear.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.
See also under SELF-CONTROL.

17
Truly to moderate your mind and speech when you are angry, or else to hold your peace, betokens no ordinary nature. (Moderari vero et animo tacere, . . . est non medi-ocris ingenii.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. i,
ch. 1, sec. 13.

1 A man should study ever to keep cool. He makes his inferiors his superiors by heat.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Social Aims.

2 Whenever you are angry, be assured, that it is not only a present evil, but that you have increased a habit, and added fuel to a fire. . . . If you would not be of an angry temper, then, do not feed the habit. Give it nothing to help its increase. Be quiet at first, and reckon the days in which you have not been angry. "I used to be angry every day; now every other day; then every third and fourth day." And if you miss it so long as thirty days, offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving to God.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 18.

3 Place a curb and drag on your wrath. (Pone iræ frena modumque.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 88.

4 When thou art above measure angry, bethink thee how momentary is man's life.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. xi, ch. 18, sec. 6.

Bethink thee how much more grievous are the consequences of our anger than the acts which arouse it.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. xi, ch. 18, sec. 8.

Let this truth be present to thee in the excitement of anger, that to be moved by passion is not manly, but that mildness and gentleness, as they are more human, so also are they more manly.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. xi, ch. 18, sec. 10.

5 Never to master one's anger is a mark of intemperance and lack of training; but always to do so is difficult, and for some impossible.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 21.

6 The greatest remedy for anger is delay. (Maximum remedium est iræ mora.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 28.

ANIMAL

7 God made all creatures and gave them our love and our fear,
To give sign, we and they are his children,
one family here.

ROBERT BROWNING, Saul. St. vi.

8 Animals are such agreeable friends—they ask no questions, they pass no criticisms.

GEORGE ELIOT, Scenes of Clerical Life: Mr. Gilfil's Love Story.

9 No flocks, that range the valley free,
To slaughter I condemn;

Taught by that Power that pities me,
I learn to pity them.

GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.)

10 Beasts of each kind their fellows spare,
Bear lives in amity with bear.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, No. 160. (After Juvenal.)

Beasts, urged by us, their fellow beasts pursue,
And learn of man each other to undo.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 123.

Who ever knew an honest brute
At law his neighbour prosecute? . . .
Brutes never meet in bloody fray,
Nor cut each others' throats, for pay.

GOLDSMITH, The Logicians Refuted.

11 Though I am far from denying that the counsels of Divine Goodness regarding dumb creatures are, for us, involved in deep obscurity, yet Scripture foretells for them a "glorious liberty," and we are assured that the compassion of Heaven will not be wanting to them.

JOHN KEEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 19.

12 The cattle upon a thousand hills.

Old Testament: Psalms, l. 10.

The cattle are grazing,
Their heads never raising:
There are forty feeding like one!

WORDSWORTH, Written in March.

13 The beasts, which nature has fashioned grovelling and slaves to the belly. (Quæ natura prona atque ventri obœdientia finxit.)

SALLUST, Catiline, sec. 1.

14 Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 6.

15 A beast, that wants discourse of reason.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 150.

He is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 27.

Like brute-beasts that have no understanding.
Book of Common Prayer: Solemnization of Matrimony.

16 Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1148.

17 The behaviour of men to the lower animals, and their behaviour to each other, bear a constant relationship.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30, sec. 2.

18 Even savage animals, if kept shut up, forget their courage. (Etiam fera animalia, si clausa teneas, virtutis obliviscuntur.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 64.

1
I envy not the beast that takes
His license in the field of time,
Unfetter'd by the sense of crime,
To whom a conscience never wakes.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxvii.

2
Hurt not animals.
TRIPTOLEMUS, Precepts. (PLUTARCH.)
A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xii, 10.

Physiological experiment on animals is justifiable for real investigation, but not for mere damnable and detestable curiosity.

DARWIN, Letter to E. Ray Lankester.

3
I think I could turn and live with animals,
they are so placid and self-contain'd,
I stand and look at them long and long.
They do not sweat and whine about their condition,
They do not lie awake in the dark and weep
for their sins,
They do not make me sick discussing their duty to God,
Not one is dissatisfied, not one is demented with the mania of owning things,
Not one kneels to another, nor to his kind that lived thousands of years ago,
Not one is respectable or unhappy over the whole earth.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 32.

4
Behold a beast of nature black;
When one attacks it, it fights back!
(Cet animal est très méchant:
Quand on l'attaque il se défend.)

UNKNOWN, La Ménagerie. A burlesque upon a passage in Walckenaer's Histoire Générale des Voyages: "Ces animaux sont si furieux, qu'ils se défendent contre ceux qui les attaquent."

I—Antiquity: Definitions

5
Antiquities are history defaced, or some remnants of history which have casually escaped the shipwrecks of time.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

6
And to speak truly, "Antiquitas sæculi juventus mundi," These times are the ancient times, when the world is ancient, and not those which we account ancient ordine retrogrado, by a computation backward from ourselves.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

As in the little, so in the great world, reason will tell you that old age or antiquity is to be accounted by the farther distance from the beginning and the nearer approach to the end,
—the times wherein we now live being in propiety of speech the most ancient since the world's creation.

GEORGE HAKEWILL, An Apologie or Declaration of the Power and Providence of God in the Government of the World. (1627)

For as old age is that period of life most remote from infancy, who does not see that old age in this universal man ought not to be sought in the times nearest his birth, but in those most remote from it?

PASCAL, Treatise on Vacuum: Preface.

All this cant about our ancestors is merely an abuse of words. . . . We are the only white-bearded, silver-headed ancients, who have treasured up, and are prepared to profit by, all the experience human life can supply.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 5.

It is worthy of remark that a thought which is often quoted from Francis Bacon occurs in [Giordano] Bruno's Cena di Cenere, published in 1564:
I mean the notion that the later times are more aged than the earlier.

WILLIAM WHEWELL, Philosophy of the Induc-tive Sciences. Vol. ii, p. 198.

We are Ancients of the earth,
And in the morning of the times.

TENNYSON, The Day Dream: Envoi.

7
In the morning of the world
When earth was nigher heaven than now.
ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. iii.

8
Age shakes Athena's tower, but spares grey Marathon.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 88.

9
An acute and experienced critic of antiques.
(Subtilis veterum judex et callidus.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 101.

Critics in rust.

ADDISON, Essays: Ancient Medals.

Because thou prizest things that are Curious and unfamiliar.

ROBERT HERRICK, Oberon's Feast.

With sharpen'd sight pale antiquaries pore,
Th' inscription value, but the rust adore.
This the blue varnish, that the green endears,
The sacred rust of twice ten hundred years!
POPE, Epistle to Mr. Addison, l. 35.

My copper-lamps, at any rate,
For being true antique, I bought;
Yet wisely melted down my plate,
On modern models to be wrought;
And trifles I alike pursue,
Because they're old, because they're new.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii.

10
The ancient and honourable.
Old Testament: Isaiah, ix, 15.

<sup>1</sup>
It was a mighty while ago.
BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 3.

<sup>2</sup>
It seems to me much harder to be a modern than an ancient. (Il me semble beaucoup plus difficile d'être un moderne que d'être un ancien.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 233.

<sup>3</sup>
Asleep in lap of legends old.
KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 15.
This—all this—was in the olden Time long ago.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Haunted Palace.

The spirit of antiquity.

WORDSWORTH, Bruges.

<sup>4</sup>
Antiquity! thou wondrous charm, what art thou? that, being nothing, art everything! When thou wert, thou wert not antiquity—then thou wert nothing, but hadst a remoter antiquity, as thou calledst it, to look back to with blind veneration; thou thyself being to thyself flat, jejune, modern!

LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation.

<sup>5</sup>
In ancient times all things were cheap.

MARTIN PARKER, Roxburghe Ballads: An Excellent New Medley.

<sup>6</sup>
Remove not the ancient landmark.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 28; xxiii, 10.

<sup>7</sup>
Antiquity is not always a mark of verity.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>8</sup>
Miniver loved the Medici,
Albeit he had never seen one;
He would have sinned incessantly
Could he have been one.
E. A. ROBINSON, Miniver Cheevy.

<sup>9</sup>
In the dark backward and abysm of time.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 50.

<sup>10</sup>
Thou wert dead, and buried and embalmed,
Ere Romulus and Remus had been suckled:
Antiquity appears to have begun
Long after that primeval race was run.
HORACE SMITH, Address to a Mummy.

<sup>11</sup>
For now I see the true old times are dead,
When every morning brought a noble chance,
And every chance brought out a noble knight.
TENNYSON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 397.

A goodly place, a goodly time,
For it was in the golden prime
Of good Haroun Alraschid.
TENNYSON, Recollections of the Arabian Nights.

<sup>12</sup>
Nor rough, nor barren, are the winding ways
Of hoar antiquity, but strewn with flowers.

THOMAS WARREN, Written on a Blank Leaf of Dugdale's Monasticon.

<sup>13</sup>
They that reverence too much old times are but a scorn to the new.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Innovations.

<sup>14</sup>
Veneration of antiquity is congenial to the human mind.

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws. Ch. iii, pt. 2.

Our admiration of the antique is not admiration of the old, but of the natural.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

<sup>15</sup>
Speak of the moderns without contempt, and of the ancients without idolatry; judge them all by their merits, and not by their age.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Feb., 1748.

O, to bring back the great Homeric time,
The simple manners and the deeds sublime:
When the wise Wanderer, often foiled by Fate,
Through the long furrow drove the ploughshare straight.

MORTIMER COLLINS, Letter to Benjamin Disraeli, 1869.

<sup>17</sup>
Be eloquent in praise of the very dull old days which have long since passed away,
And convince 'em, if you can, that the reign of good Queen Anne was Culture's palmiest day.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act i.

The idiot who praises, with enthusiastic tone,
All centuries but this and every country but his own.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

He disdaineth all things above his reach, and preferreth all countries before his own.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: An Affectate Traveler.

<sup>18</sup>
The fleets of Nineveh and Tyre
Are down with Davy Jones, Esquire,
And all the oligarchies, kings,
And potentates that ruled these things
Are gone! But cheer up; don't be sad;
Think what a lovely time they had!

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Elegy.

<sup>19</sup>
You praise the fortune and manners of the men of old, and yet, if on a sudden some god were for taking you back to those days, you would refuse every time.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 23.

To look back to antiquity is one thing; to go back to it is another.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 148.

<sup>20</sup>
With weeping and with laughter
Still is the story told,

How well Horatius kept the bridge

In the brave days of old.

MACAULAY, Horatius. St. 70.

<sup>1</sup> Whoever saw old age which did not praise the past time, and blame the present? (Qui veid jamais vieillesse qui ne louast le temps passé, et ne blamast le present?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 13.

<sup>2</sup> Let ancient times delight other folk; I rejoice that I was not born till now; this age suits my nature. (Prisca juvent alios: ego me nunc denique natum Gratulor: hæc ætas moribus apta meis.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 121.

The good of ancient times let others state;

I think it lucky I was born so late.

OVID, Ars Amatoria, iii, 121. (Sydney Smith, tr.)

We praise the past, but use our present years.
(Laudamus veteres, sed nostris utimur annis.)

OVID, Fastii. Bk. i, l. 225.

Praise they that will times past, I joy to see
My self now live: this age best pleaseth me.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Present Time Best Pleaseth.

<sup>3</sup> We extol ancient things, regardless of our own age. (Vetera extollimus, recentium in-curiosi.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 88.

The fault lies in the carping spirit of mankind, that we are always praising what is old and scorning what is new. (Vitio autem malignitatis humanae vetera semper in laude, præsentia in fastidio esse.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 18.

Antiquity surrenders, defeated by new things.
(Cedit rerum novitate extrusa vetustas.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 977.

ANVIL

<sup>4</sup> Men's hammers break, God's anvil stands.

SAMUEL V. COLE, The Unhwarped Plan.

<sup>5</sup> The noise of the hammer and the anvil is ever in his ears.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 28.

<sup>6</sup> When you are an anvil, hold you still;
When you are a hammer, strike your fill.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 101. (1696)

<sup>7</sup> The anvil fears no blows.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4398.

The anvil is not afraid of the hammer.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 21.

<sup>8</sup> Thou must (in commanding and winning, or serving and losing, suffering or triumphing) be either anvil or hammer.

GOETHE, Der Gross-Cophta. Act ii.

In this world a man must either be anvil or hammer.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iv, ch. 7.

In the struggle between nationalities, one nation is the hammer and the other the anvil: one is the victor and the other the vanquished.

BERNHARD VON BÜLOW, Imperial Germany.

<sup>9</sup> Every man who strikes blows for power, for influence, for institutions, for the right, must be just as good an anvil as he is a hammer.

HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Anvils and Hammers.

<sup>10</sup> For all your days prepare,
And meet them all alike:

When you are the anvil, bear—

When you are the hammer, strike.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Preparedness.

<sup>11</sup> Lay me on an anvil, O God.
Beat me and hammer me into a crowbar.

Let me pry loose old walls;

Let me lift and loosen old foundations.

CARL SANDBURG, Prayers of Steel.

<sup>12</sup> For a hard anvil, a hammer of feathers.

WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, 508. (1623)

APE

<sup>13</sup> He doth like the ape, that the higher he climbs the more he shows his ars.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 924.

The higher the ape goes, the more he shows his tail.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. This is a proverb in all languages: Italian, "Tu fai come la simia, chi più va in alto più mostra il culo"; French, "Plus le singe s'élève, plus il montre son cul pelé"; German, "Je höher der Affe steigt, je mehr er den Hintern zeigt."

'Tis not till the ape has mounted the tree that she shows her tail so plain.

READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 52.

As free as an ape is of his tail.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 205.

<sup>14</sup> An old ape has an old eye.

RICHARD BROME, Damoiselle. Act iii, sc. 2.

<sup>15</sup> The ape, vilest of beasts, how like to us!
(Simia, quam similis turpissuma bestia, nobis!)

ENNIUS. (CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i,
ch. 35.)

<sup>16</sup> It is a trite proverb that an ape will be an ape, though clad in purple.

ERASMUS, Praise of Folly, 23.

An ape's an ape, a varlet's a varlet,
Tho' they be clad in silk or scarlet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6391.

Howsoever clothed like an ape in purple.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Ulysses Upon Ajax, 18.

Apes are apes, though clothed in scarlet.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act v, sc. 3.
An ape's an ape though he wears a gold ring.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

1 Apes are never more beasts than when they wear men's clothes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 807.

An ape is ne'er so like an ape,
As when he wears a doctor's cap.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6382.

Though he endeavour all he can,
An ape will never be a man.

GEORGE WITHER, First Lottery. Emblem 14.

2 More new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 153.

3 I must dance barefoot on her wedding day,
And for your love to her, lead apes in hell.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 33. (1596)

'Tis an old proverb, and you know it well,
That women dying maids lead apes in hell.

UNKNOWN, The London Prodigal. Act i, sc. 2. (1605)

I'd rather die Maid, and lead apes in Hell,
Than wed an inmate of Silenus' cell.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, English Gentelman and Gentelwoman. (1640)

Miss, you may say what you please; but faith you'll never lead apes in hell.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 1.

I'm sadly afraid that she died an old maid, . . .
So they say she is now leading apes.

R. H. BARHAM, Bloudie Jacke.

APPEARANCE

I—Appearance: Its Value

4 Personal beauty is a greater recommendation than any letter of introduction. (Τὸ κάλλος παντὸς ἐπιστολίου συστατικώτερον.)

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle.
Bk. v, sec. 18.)

It was the saying of an ancient philosopher, which I find some of our writers have ascribed to Queen Elizabeth, that a good face is a letter of recommendation.

ADDISON, The Spectator, 13 Nov., 1711.

5 A beautiful face is a silent commendation.
(Formosa facies muta commendatio est.)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 12.

Whosoever hath a good presence and a good fashion, carries continual letters of recommendation.

ISABELLA OF SPAIN. (BACON, Apothegms. No.
99.)

Good looks are a great recommendation in the business of mankind. (La beauté est une pièce de grande recommandation au commerce des hommes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

A pleasing countenance is no slight advantage.
(Auxilium non leve vultus habet.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 8, l. 54.

A comely face is a silent recommendation. (Formosa facies muta commendatio est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 207.

Though you cannot know wine by the barrel, a good appearance is a letter of recommendation.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 3.

6 To be plain with you, friend, you don't carry in your countenance a letter of recommendation.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 2.

That there is falsehood in his looks,

I must and will deny;

They say their master is a knave—
And sure they do not lie.

BURNS, The Parson's Looks.

7 If a good face is a letter of recommendation,
a good heart is a letter of credit.

BULWER-LYTON, What Will He Do With It?
Bk. ii, ch. 11, title.

8 His was the lofty port, the distant mien,
That seems to shun the sight, and awes if seen.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 16.

9 There is a great deal in the first impressions.

CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 1.

10 For what is form, or what is face,
But the soul's index, or its case?

NATHANIEL COTTON, Pleasure.

The outward forms the inward man reveal,—
We guess the pulp before we cut the peel.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 418.

11 Appearance, Sir, bears away the bell, almost in everything.

JOHN GAY, Wife of Bath. Act iv, sc. 1.

12 Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 29.

13 Even virtue is fairer in a fair body. (Gratior et pulchro veniens in corpore virtus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 344.

14 All is not false which seems at first a lie.

ROBERT SOUTHNEY, St. Gualberto, l. 28.

15 It is only shallow people who do not judge by appearances.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2.

After all, you can't expect men not to judge by appearances.

ELLEN GLASGOW, The Sheltered Life, p. 15.

Hit look lak sparrer-grass, hit feel like sparrer-grass, hit tas'e lak sparrer-grass, en I bless ef 'taint sparrer-grass.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus. Ch. 27.

II—Appearance: Its Deceitfulness

1 We should look to the mind, and not to the outward appearance. (Ἀφορᾶν οὖν, δεῖ εἰς τὸν νοῦν, καὶ μὴ εἰς τὴν ὕψιν.)

ÆSOP, Fables.

2 Men are valued not for what they are, but for what they seem to be.

BULWER-LYTTON, Money. Act i, sc. 1.

Think not I am what I appear.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 12.

3 Habit maketh no monk, ne wearing of gilt spurs maketh no knight.

CHAUCER, Testament of Love. Bk. ii. (c. 1385)

A holy habit cleanseth not a foul soul.

*GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

See also under MONK.

4 Good and bad men are each less so than they seem.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 19 Apr., 1830.

5 And wanting the right rule, they take chalk for cheese, as the saying is.

NICHOLAS GRIMAUD, Three Books of Duties to Marcus His Son: Preface.

6 We are deceived by the appearance of right. (Decipimur specie recti.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 25.

7 Under this rough exterior lies hid a mighty genius. (Ingenium ingens Inculto latet hoc sub corpore.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 33.

It follows not, because

The hair is rough, the dog's a savage one.

SHERIDAN KNOWLES, The Daughter. Act i, sc. 1.

Mellow nuts have hardest rind.

SCOTT, Lord of the Isles. Canto iii, st. 21.

8 Judge not according to the appearance.

New Testament: John, vii, 24.

Beware, as long as you live, of judging people by appearances. (Garde-toi, tant que tu vivras, De juger des gens sur la mine.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 5.

There is no trusting to appearances.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act v, sc. 2.

Appearances are very deceitful.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. iii, ch. 7. (Smollett, tr.)

Don't rely too much on labels,
For too often they are fables.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars.

9 He seem'd
For dignity compos'd and high exploit:

But all was false and hollow.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 110.

10

O that such an imposing appearance should have no brain! (O quanta species cerebrum non habet!)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 7, l. 2.

You look wise. Pray correct that error.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: All Fools' Dav.

Boobies have looked as wise and bright

As Plato or the Stagyrte;

And many a sage and learned skull

Has peeped through windows dark and dull!

THOMAS MOORE, Nature's Labels.

11

I have often found persons of handsome appearance to be the worst, and those of evil appearance the best. (Formosos sæpe inveni pessimos, Et turpi facie multos cognovi optimos.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 46.

12

Things are not always what they seem. (Non semper ea sunt quæ videntur.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 2, l. 5.

Things are seldom what they seem.

Skim milk masquerades as cream.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

And things are not what they seem.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

13

We should strip the mask not only from men, but from things, and restore to each object its own aspect. (Non hominibus tantum, sed rebus persona demenda est et reddenda facies sua.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxiv, 13.

Black Tragedy lets slip her grim disguise

And shows you laughing lips and roguish eyes;

But when, unmasked, gay Comedy appears,

How wan her cheeks are, and what heavy tears!

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Masks.

Hast ever thought that beneath a gay and frivolous exterior there may lurk a cankerworm which is slowly but surely eating its way into one's very heart?

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

14

We'll have a swashing and a martial outside,

As many other mannish cowards have

That do outface it with their semblances.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 3, l. 122.

15

Mine eyes

Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;

Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,

That thought her like her seeming.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 63.

16

Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not "seems."

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 76.

1
Look how we can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 12.

2
O what a goodly outside falsehood hath!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 3, l. 103.

Oh, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes,
And with a virtuous vizard hide foul guile!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 27.

O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face!
Did ever a dragon keep so fair a cave?
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 73.

Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 83.

3
So may the outward shows be least themselves:
The world is still deceived with ornament. . . .
Thus ornament is but the guiled shore
To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scarf
Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning time puts on
To entrap the wisest.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 73.

Nor more can you distinguish of a man
Than of his outward show; which, God he knows,
Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 9.

When devils will the blackest sin put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 357.

4
She began to ask herself whether she had not over-rated white beards and old age and nightshirts as divine credentials.
BERNARD SHAW, *The Adventures of the Black
Girl in Her Search for God*.

5
We must see if he is worth rearing, or is only a wind-bag and a sham.
SOPHOCLES. (PLATO, Theætetus. Sec. 160.)

6
Ain't he the damndest simulacrum!
WALT WHITMAN, commenting on Swinburne, when the latter had turned viciously against him.

7
All things are less dreadful than they seem.
WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. i,
No. 7.

It is only by a wide comparison of facts that the wisest full-grown man can distinguish well-rolled barrels from more supernal thunder.
GEORGE ELIOT.

III—Appearance: All is not Gold that Glisters

8
Do not hold everything as gold which shines like gold. (Non teneas aurum totum quod splendet ut aurum.)
ALANUS DE INSULIS, Parobelæ. (Winchester College Hall-book, 1401.)

9
It is not all gold that glareth.
CHAUCER, House of Fame. Bk. i, l. 272. (1383)

But all thing which that shineth as the gold
Is not gold, as that I have heard it told.
CHAUCER, The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l.
962. (c. 1390)

10
Everything is not gold that one sees shining.
(Que tout n'est pas or qu'on voit luire.)
UNKNOWN, Li Diz de Freire Denise, Cordelier.
(c. 1300)

All is not gold that outward sheweth bright.
JOHN LYDGATE, On the Mutability of Human Affairs. (1440)

All is not gold that sheweth goldish hue.
JOHN LYDGATE, Chorle and Byrde.

11
All that glitters is not gold. (No es Oro todo que reluce.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33.

All, as they say, that glitters is not gold.
DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. ii, l.
215. (1687)

12
Black sheep dwell in every fold,
All that glitters is not gold;
Storks turn out to be but logs;
Bulls are but inflated frogs.
W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

13
Dirt glitters as long as the sun shines.
GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

14
Not all that tempts your wandering eyes
And heedless hearts is lawful prize,
Nor all that glisters gold.
THOMAS GRAY, On a Favourite Cat.

15
All is not gold that glisters.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. i, ch. 10
(1546); BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act ii, sc. 1; THOMAS MIDDLETON, Fair Quarrel.
Act v, sc. 1.

All that glisters is not gold;
Often have you heard that told.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 7, l. 65.

16
Yet gold all is not, that doth golden seem.
SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto viii, st. 14. (1539)

17
Not everything that gives
A gleam and glittering show
Is to be counted gold, indeed,

This proverb well you know.

GEORGE TURBERVILLE, The Answer of a Woman to Her Lover.

IV—Appearance: Appearances

1 Keep up appearances; there lies the test;
The world will give thee credit for the rest.
Outward be fair, however foul within;
Sin, if thou wilt, but then in secret sin.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 311.

Appearances to save, his only care;
So things seem right, no matter what they are.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 299.

See also SIN: THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT.

2 The final good and the supreme duty of the wise man is to resist appearances. (Extremum bonorum et summus munus esse sapientis obstistere visis.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, ch. 9, sec. 31.

3 Always scorn appearances and you always may.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

4 Appearances to the mind are of four kinds:
Things either are what they appear to be;
or they neither are, nor appear to be; or they are, and do not appear to be; or they are not, and yet appear to be. Rightly to aim in all these cases is the wise man's task.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 27, sec. 1.

5 We see the sun, the moon and the stars revolving, as it seems to us, round us. That is false. We feel that the earth is motionless. That is false, too. We see the sun rise above the horizon. It is beneath us. We touch what we think is a solid body. There is no such thing.

CAMILLE FLAMMARION, The Unknown. Ch. 1.

6 Those awful goddesses, Appearances, are to us what the Fates were to the Greeks.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. i, ch. 5.

7 Unduly concerned for outward appearances.
(In cute curanda plus æquo operata.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 29.

8 If Nature be a phantasm, as thou say'st,
A splendid figment and prodigious dream,
To reach the real and true I'll make no
haste,
More than content with worlds that only seem.

WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

9 Of the terrible doubt of appearances,
Of the uncertainty after all, that we may be deluded,

That may-be reliance and hope are but speculations after all,

That may-be identity beyond the grave is a beautiful fable only,

May-be the things I perceive, the animals, plants, men, hills, shining and flowing waters,

The skies of day and night, colors, densities, forms, may-be these are (as doubtless they are) only apparitions, and the real something has yet to be known.

WALT WHITMAN, Of the Terrible Doubt of Appearances.

APPETITE

13 And gazed around them to the left and right

With the prophetic eye of appetite.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 50.

14 There's no stomach a hand's breadth bigger than another.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33.

15 Short are his meals, and homely is his fare;
His thirst he slakes at some pure neighbouring brook,

Nor asks for sauce where appetite stands cook.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. iii, l. 132.

16 Poor men want meat for their stomachs, rich men stomachs for their meat.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fits, etc., p. 105.

Some people have food, but no appetite; others have an appetite, but no food. I have both. The Lord be praised.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Grace. (Attr.)

Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it;
But we hae meat and we can eat,
And sae the Lord be thankit.

ROBERT BURNS, The Selkirk Grace.

Some have meat but cannot eat;
Some could eat but have no meat;
We have meat and can all eat;
Blest, therefore, be God for our meat.

UNKNOWN, The Selkirk Grace. (From MS. of about 1650.)

That which is not good is not delicious
To a well-governed and wise appetite.

MILTON, Comus, l. 704.

11
The Receipts of Cookery are swelled to a Volume, but a good Stomach excels them all.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

12
The full stomach turns from the honey of Hybla. (Hyblæum refugit satur liquorem.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 120.

What is nourishment to a hungry man becomes a burden to a full stomach. (Quæ desiderantibus alimenta erant, onera sunt plenis.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, sec. 16.

The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in its own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 11.

13
Appetite comes with eating, says Angeston, but thirst departs with drinking. (L'appétit vient en mangeant, disoit Angeston, mais la soif, s'en va en buvant.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 5. By "Angeston"

Rabelais referred to Jerome de Hangeste, a scholar who died in 1538.

I have made this paction and covenant with my appetite, that it always lieth down and goes to bed with myself, then the next morning it also riseth with me, and gets up when I am awake.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 41.

14
It is the sign of an over-nice appetite to toy with many dishes. (Fastidientis stomachi est multa degustare.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 4.

15
Poor wretches, do you not know that your appetites are bigger than your bellies? (Infelices, ecquid intellegitis majorem vos famem habere quam ventrem?)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxix, sec. 22.

16
A sick man's appetite, who desires most that Which would increase his evil.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 183.

Why, she would hang on him
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on.

17
A good digestion to you all.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 62.

Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 38.

Keen appetite and quick digestion wait on you and yours.

DRYDEN, Cleomenes. Act iv, sc. 1.

18
Doth not the appetite alter? a man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 247.

To make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palates urge.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxviii.

1 And through the Hall there walked to and fro

A jolly Yeoman, marshall of the same,
Whose name was Appetite.

9 How we apples swim!
JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 32. (1639)
SWIFT, Brother Protestants. (1710)
While tumbling down the turbid stream,
Lord love us, how we apples swim!
DAVID MALLEY, Tyburn.

10 Apples are thought to quench the flame of Venus, according to that old English saying,
He that will not a wife wed, Must eat a cold apple when he goeth to bed, though some turn it to a contrary purpose.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, p. 88.
(1588)

Ait a happle avore gwain to bed,
An' you'll make the doctor beg his bread.
or, as the more popular version runs: An apple a day keeps the doctor away.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 238. The couplet is from Devonshire.

Eat an apple on going to bed,
And you'll keep the doctor from earning his bread.

winds blow.

WILLIAM WALLACE HARNEY, Adonais.

13 What is more melancholy than the old apple-trees that linger about the spot where once stood a homestead, but where there is now only a ruined chimney rising out of a grassy and weed-grown cellar? They offer their fruit to every wayfarer—apples that are bittersweet with the moral of time's vicissitude.

To satisfy the sharp desire I had
Of tasting those fair apples, I resolv'd
Not to defer; hunger and thirst at once,
Powerful persuaders, quicken'd at the scent
Of that alluring fruit, urg'd me so keen.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 584.

The apples that grew on the fruit-tree of knowledge

By woman were pluck'd, and she still wears
the prize

To tempt us in theatre, senate, or college—

I mean the love-apples that bloom in the eyes.

5
I often wished that all my causes were applepie causes.

JOHN SCOTT, LORD ELDON, referring to a complaint made to him when he was resident fellow of University College. Some of the undergraduates complained that the cooks had sent to table an apple-pie which could not be eaten. Lord Eldon ordered the cook to bring the pie before him, but the cook informed him that the pie was eaten, whereupon Lord Eldon gave judgment for the defendant, saying to complainants: "You complain that the pie could not be eaten, but the pie has been eaten, and therefore could be eaten."

But I, when I undress me
Each night, upon my knees

Will ask the Lord to bless me
With apple pie and cheese!

ARCADIA

2
Arcadia.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY. Title of a medley of prose romance and pastoral eclogues written for the amusement of his sister, the Countess of Pembroke, first published in 1590. Vergil had sung Arcadia, a district of the Peloponnesus, as the home of pastoral simplicity and happiness, and the word was soon generally adopted into English.

Those golden times,
And those Arcadian scenes that Maro sings,
And Sidney, warbler of poetic prose.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 515.

Feign'd Arcadian scenes.

13 It is a reverend thing to see an ancient castle or building, not in decay

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Nobility.

How reverend is the face of this tall pile, . . .
Looking tranquillity!

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act ii, sc. 1.

14 Earth proudly wears the Parthenon,
As the best gem upon her zone,
And Morning opes with haste her lids
To gaze upon the Pyramids;
O'er England's abbeys bends the sky,
As on its friends, with kindred eye;
For out of Thought's interior sphere
These wonders rose to upper air;
And Nature gladly gave them place,
Adopted them into her race,
And granted them an equal date
With Andes and with Ararat.

EMERSON, The Problem.

The hand that rounded Peter's dome,
And groined the aisles of Christian Rome,
Wrought in a sad sincerity;
Himself from God he could not free;
He builded better than he knew;—
The conscious stone to beauty grew.

Gloom lends solemnity. (Σεμνότητ' ἔχει σκότος.)
EURIPIDES, Bacchides, l. 486.

In dim cathedrals, dark with vaulted gloom,
What holy awe invests the saintly tomb!
O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 207.

Thus when we view some well-proportion'd dome . . .
No single parts unequally surprise,
All comes united to th' admiring eyes.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 47.

2
When I lately stood with a friend before [the cathedral of] Amiens, . . . he asked me how it happens that we can no longer build such piles? I replied: "Dear Alphonse, men in those days had convictions (Ueberzeugun-gen), we moderns have opinions (Meinungen) and it requires something more than an opinion to build a Gothic cathedral."

HEINRICH HEINE, *Confidential Letters to

3
And the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building.
Old Testament: I Kings, vi, 7.

No hammers fell, no ponderous axes rung,
Like some tall palm the mystic fabric sprung.
REGINALD HEBER, Palestine, l. 163. Bishop Heber is describing the building of Solomon's temple, as above.

Silently as a dream the fabric rose;
No sound of hammer or of saw was there.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. 5, l. 144. Cowper is describing the ice palace reared for Catherine of Russia.

No man saw the building of the New Jerusalem,
the workmen crowded together, the unfinished walls and unpaved streets; no man heard the clink of trowel and pickaxe; it descended out of heaven from God.

JOHN ROBERT SEELEY, Ecce Homo. Ch. xxiv.

Anon out of the earth a fabric huge
Rose like an exhalation, with the sound
Of dulcet symphonies and voices sweet.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 710.

4
Ah, to build, to build!
That is the noblest art of all the arts.
Painting and sculpture are but images,
Are merely shadows cast by outward things
On stone or canvas, having in themselves
No separate existence. Architecture,
Existing in itself, and not in seeming
A something it is not, surpasses them
As substance shadow.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. i, sec. 2, l. 54.

5
The architect
Built his great heart into these sculptured
stones,

And with him toiled his children, and their

I—Argument: Apothegms

4 Testimony is like the shot of a long-bow, which owes its efficacy to the force of the shooter; argument is like the shot of the cross-bow, equally forcible whether discharged by a giant or a dwarf.

FRANCIS BACON. (As quoted by Samuel Johnson, Dictionary: Cross-bow, taken from Robert Boyle, and credited to Bacon. See TWISTLETON, Handwriting of Junius: Preface, xiv.)

5 Where we desire to be informed, 'tis good to contest with men above ourselves; but to confirm and establish our opinions, 'tis best to argue with judgements below our own, that the frequent spoils and victories over their reasons may settle in ourselves an esteem and confirmed opinion of our own.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 6.

6 So soon as the man overtook me, he was but a word and a blow.

BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

A knock-down argument; 'tis but a word and a blow.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act i, sc. 1. (1690)

This is manhood to make thee bold,
Let there be but a word and a blow.

WILLIAM WAGER, The Longer Thou Livest. (c. 1568)

And but one word with one of us? couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 43. (1595)

7 I've heard old sunning stagers
Say, fools for arguments use wagers.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

9 Never maintain an argument with heat and clamour, though you think or know yourself to be in the right.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747.

Be calm in arguing: for fierceness makes Error a fault and truth discourtesy. . . . Calmness is great advantage: he that lets Another chafe, may warm him at his fire.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 52.

A modesty in delivering our sentiments leaves us a liberty of changing them without blushing.

14 The noble Lord is the Prince Rupert of parliamentary discussion.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, April, 1844, referring to Edward Geoffrey, Earl of Derby, then Lord Stanley. Prince Rupert, the nephew of Charles I, was distinguished for his rash pursuit of a part of Cromwell's army at Naseby, which gave the victory to the Parliamentarians. So Disraeli added, "His charge is resistless; but when he returns from the pursuit, he always finds his camp in possession of the enemy."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons.

"Very well," cried the Squire, speaking very quick, "the premises being thus settled, I proceed to observe that the concatenation of self-existences, proceeding in a reciprocal duplicate

I—Art: Definitions

The art which is grand and yet simple is that which presupposes the greatest elevation both in artist and in public.

AMIEL, Journal, 9 Dec., 1877.

Art, unless quickened from above and from within, has in it nothing beyond itself which is visible beauty.

JOHN BROWN, Horæ Subsecivæ: Notes on Art.

The beautiful is the most useful in art; but the sublime is the most helpful to morals, for it elevates the mind.

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 326.

It is the treating of the commonplace with the feeling of the sublime that gives to art its true power.

J. F. MILLET, MS. Note, accompanying unpublished sketches.

What is art

But life upon the larger scale, the higher,
When, graduating up in a spiral line
Of still expanding and ascending gyres,
It pushes toward the intense significance
Of all things, hungry for the Infinite?
Art's life,—and where we live, we suffer and toil.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 1151.

The secret of life is in art.

OSCAR WILDE, The English Renaissance.

It is the glory and good of Art,
That Art remains the one way possible
Of speaking truth, to mouths like mine at least.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. xii, l. 842.

All the arts relating to human life are linked together by a subtle bond of mutual relationship. (Omnes artes, quæ ad humanitatem pertinent, habent quoddam commune vinculum et quasi cognatione quadam inter se continentur.)

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. i, sec. 2.

Art is science in the flesh.

JEAN COCTEAU, Le Rappel à l'Ordre, p. 7.

Art is an absolute mistress; she will not be coquetted with or slighted; she requires the most entire self-devotion, and she repays with grand triumphs.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN. (American Actors. Ch. 10.)

Art is a jealous mistress, and if a man have a genius for painting, poetry, music, architecture, or philosophy, he makes a bad husband and an ill provider.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

'Tis the privilege of Art
Thus to play its cheerful part,
Man on earth to acclimate
And bend the exile to his fate.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Art.

Art is the path of the creator to his work.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

Classic art was the art of necessity: modern romantic art bears the stamp of caprice and chance.

EMERSON, Journals, 1856.

Perpetual modernness is the measure of merit in every work of art.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

The conscious utterance of thought, by speech or action, to any end, is Art. . . . From its first to its last works, Art is the spirit's voluntary use and combination of things to serve its end.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Art.

The highest problem of every art is, by means of appearances, to produce the illusion of a loftier reality.

GOETHE, Truth and Poetry. Bk. xi.

The temple of art is built of words. Painting and sculpture and music are but the blazon of its windows, borrowing all their significance from the light, and suggestive only of the temple's uses.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talks on Familiar Subjects: Art and Life.

Great art is an instant arrested in eternity.

JAMES HUNKEK, Pathos of Distance, p. 120.

Art is not a thing: it is a way.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

An art is a handicraft in flower.

GEORGE ILES, Jottings.

Art is nothing more than the shadow of humanity.

HENRY JAMES, Lectures: University in Arts.

Art is power.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. v.

Art is the gift of God, and must be used
Unto His glory.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. i, sec. 2.

1 Art is the desire of a man to express himself, to record the reactions of his personality to the world he lives in.

AMY LOWELL, Tendencies in Modern American Poetry, p. 7.

2 Art is the conveyance of spirit by means of matter.

SALVADOR DE MADARIAGA, Americans Are Boys.

3 And now too late, we see these things are one:

That art is sacrifice and self-control,
And who loves beauty must be stern of soul.

ALICE DUER MILLER, An American to France.

4 Art is a reaching out into the ugliness of the world for vagrant beauty and the imprisoning of it in a tangible dream.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Critic and the Drama.

Great art is as irrational as great music. It is mad with its own loveliness.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, House of Satan, p. 18.

5 Art is a form of catharsis.

DOROTHY PARKER, Art.

6 Art does not represent things falsely, but truly as they appear to mankind.

RUSKIN, Stones of Venice: The Fall. Ch. 2.

Fine art is that in which the hand, the head and the heart go together.

RUSKIN, The Two Paths. Lecture ii.

7 That which takes effect by chance is not an art. (Non est ars, quæ ad effectum casu venit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix, sec. 3.

8 Art has been maligned. . . . She is a goddess of dainty thought—reticent of habit, abjuring all obtrusiveness, purposing in no way to better others.

J. McNEILL WHISTLER, "Ten O'Clock."

Art happens—no hovel is safe from it, no Prince may depend upon it, the vastest intelligence cannot bring it about.

J. McNEILL WHISTLER, "Ten O'Clock."

9 The moral life of a man forms part of the subject-matter of the artist, but the morality of art consists in the perfect use of an imperfect medium.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray:
Preface.

II—Art: Apothegms

10 Art is far feebler than necessity. (Τέχνη δ' ἀνάγκης ἀσθενέστερα μικρῶς.)

12 The history of art is the history of revivals.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books,
p. 130.

13 The fine arts once divorcing themselves from truth, are quite certain to fall mad, if they do not die.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 8.

May the Devil fly away with the fine arts!

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 8. Quoted as the exclamation of "one of our most distinguished public men."

14 Art for art's sake. (L'art pour l'art.)

VICTOR COUSSIN, Lecture xxii, Sorbonne, 1818.

Venerate art as art.

The arts and inventions of each period are only its costume, and do not invigorate men.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Life too near paralyses art.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 292.

18 Painting was called "silent poetry," and poetry "speaking painting." The laws of each art are convertible into the laws of any other.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Art.

19 Art is either a plagiarist or a revolutionist.

PAUL GAUGUIN. (HUNEKER, Pathos of Distance, p. 128.)

20 All passes. Art alone
Enduring stays to us:

Art hath no enemy but ignorance.

JOHN TAYLOR, To John Booker.

7 We have learned to whittle the Eden Tree to the shape of a surplice-peg,

We have learned to bottle our parents twain in the yelk of an addled egg,

We know that the tail must wag the dog, for the horse is drawn by the cart;

But the Devil whoops, as he whooped of old: "It's clever, but is it Art?"

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Conundrum of the Workshops.

8 As the sun colours flowers so does art colour life.

III—Art is Long

1 Life is short, the art long, opportunity fleeting, experience treacherous, judgment difficult. ('O βίος βραχύς, ἡ δὲ τέχνη μακρὴ, ὁ δὲ καιρὸς ὀξύς, ἡ δὲ πείρα σφαλερή, ἡ δὲ κρίσις χαλεπή.)

HIPPOCRATES, Aphorisms. Sec. i, No. 1. Hippocrates is writing of the art of healing.

This is the utterance of the greatest of physicians, that life is short and art long. (Illa maximi medicorum exclamatio est, Vitam brevem est, longam artem.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitæ. Sec. 1.

Art is long, life short, experience deceiving.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, English Gentleman, 74. (1630)

Art is long, life short; judgment difficult, opportunity transient.

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister. Bk. vii, ch. ix.

Art is long, and Time is fleeting.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

2 The life so short, the craft so long to learn, Th' assay so hard, so sharp the conquering.

7 So many worlds, so much to do, So little done, such things to be.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. lxxiii.

So much to do; so little done.

CECIL RHODES, Last words.

IV—Art and Nature

8 It is the fashion to talk as if art were a sort of addition to nature, with power to perfect what nature has begun or correct her when going aside. . . . In truth man has no power over nature except that of motion,—the power of putting natural bodies together or separating them; nature performs all the rest within herself.

FRANCIS BACON, Description of the Intellectual Globe. Ch. 2.

9 That hunger of the heart Which comes when Nature man deserts for Art.

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. i, sec. iv, l. 69.

Nature I loved, and, next to Nature, Art.

W. S. LANDOR, The Last Fruit of an Old Tree: Dedication.

10 No work of art can be great but as it deceives; to be otherwise, is the prerogative of nature only.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful. Pt. ii, sec. 11.

11 Not without art, but yet to Nature true.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 699.

12 Things perfected by nature are better than those finished by art. (Meliora sunt ea quæ natura quam illa quæ arte perfecta sunt.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 34, sec. 87.

13 By viewing nature, nature's handmaid, art, Makes mighty things from small beginnings grow;

Thus fishes first to shipping did impart, Their tail the rudder, and their head the prow.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 155.

14 Art may err, but nature cannot miss.

DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 452.

Nothing but Nature can give a sincere pleasure; where that is not imitated, 'tis grotesque painting; the fine woman ends in a fish's tail.

DRYDEN, Essays. Vol. ii, p. 161.

Men at first produce effect by studying nature, and afterwards look at nature only to produce effect.

HAZLITT, Lectures on Dramatic Literature, 139.

15 Nature paints the best part of the picture, carves the best part of the statue, builds the best part of the house, speaks the best part of the oration.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Art.

And in their vaunted works of Art, The master-stroke is still her part.

EMERSON, Nature. Pt. ii.

These temples grew as grows the grass; Art might obey, but not surpass.

EMERSON, The Problem.

16 To me nature is everything that man is born to, and art is the difference he makes in it.

JOHN ERSKINE, Gentle Reader, Dec., 1931.

17 As all Nature's thousand changes But one changeless God proclaim;

So in Art's wide kingdom ranges
 One sole meaning still the same:
 This is Truth, eternal Reason,
 Which from Beauty takes its dress,
 And serene through time and season
 Stands for aye in loveliness.

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister's Travels. Ch. 14.

1
 Art may make a suit of clothes: but Nature must produce a man.

DAVID HUME, Essays: No. xv, The Epicurean.

2
 Nature is a revelation of God;
 Art a revelation of man.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Art is the child of Nature; yes,
 Her darling child, in whom we trace
 The features of the mother's face,
 Her aspect and her attitude;
 All her majestic loveliness
 Chastened and softened and subdued
 Into a more attractive grace,
 And with a human sense imbued.
 He is the greatest artist, then,
 Whether of pencil or of pen,
 Who follows Nature. Never man,
 As artist or as artisan,
 Pursuing his own fantasies,
 Can touch the human heart, or please,
 Or satisfy our nobler needs,
 As he who sets his willing feet
 In Nature's footprints, light and fleet,
 And follows fearless where she leads.

LONGFELLOW, Kéramos, l. 382.

3
 Art is consummate when it seems to be nature.
 (Ἡ τέχνη τέλειος, ἥνικ' ἂν φύσις εἶναι δοκῇ.)

LONGINUS, De Sublimitate. Ch. xxii, sec. 2.

4
 Nature in no case cometh short of art, for the arts are copiers of natural forms. (Οὐκ ἔστι χείρων οὐδεμία φύσις τέχνης.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. xi, sec. 10.

The first phrase is quoted, apparently, from some unknown poet.

All art is but imitation of nature. (Omnis ars naturæ imitatio est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxv, sec. 3.

Whoe'er from Nature takes a view,
 Must copy and improve it too.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto ii.

Art, as far as it can, follows nature, as a pupil imitates his master; thus your art must be, as it were, God's grandchild.

(L'arte vostra quella, quanto potete,
 Segue, come il maestro fa il discente,
 Sì che vostr' arte a Dio quasi è nipote.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xi, l. 103.

Art imitates nature.

RICHARD FRANCK, Northern Memoirs, p. 52.

Wherein the Graver had a strife
 With Nature, to out-do the life.

BEN JONSON, Shakespeare's Portrait.

5
 Art is Nature made by Man
 To Man the interpreter of God.

OWEN MEREDITH, The Artist. St. 26.

6
 Nature is God's, Art is man's instrument.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife. St. 8. (1614)

Nature is not at variance with Art, nor Art with Nature. . . . Art is the perfection of Nature. . . . Nature hath made one world and Art another. In brief, all things are artificial; for Nature is the Art of God.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 16. (1642) Thomas Hobbes quotes the last sentence without acknowledgment at the beginning of his introduction to Leviathan.

Art is man's nature; nature is God's art.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem.

Nature is the art of God. (Deus æternus, arte sua, quæ natura est.)

DANTE, De Monarchia. Pt. i, l. 3.

7
 All nature is but art.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 289.

8
 Art is the right hand of nature. The latter only gave us being, but 'twas the former made us men.

SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act ii, sc. 17.

When naturè conquers, Art must then give way.
 (Und siegt Natur, so muss die Kunst entweichen.)

SCHILLER, to Goethe when he staged Voltaire's
Mahomet.

9
 New Art would better Nature's best,
 But Nature knows a thing or two.

OWEN SEAMAN, Ars Postera.

10
 Nature's above art in that respect.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 86.

In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 197.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
 In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
 His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
 As if the dead the living should exceed.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 289.

Over that art

Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art
 That nature makes. . . . The art itself is nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 90.

11
 When Love owes to Nature his charms,
 How vain are the lessons of Art!

HORACE SMITH, Horace in London. Bk. i, 19.

12
 But who can paint
 Like Nature? Can Imagination boast,
 Amid its gay creation, hues like hers?
 Or can it mix them with that matchless skill?

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 468.

13
 Nature is usually wrong.

J. MCNEILL WHISTLER, "Ten O'Clock."

1 Nature contains the elements, in colour and form, of all pictures, as the keyboard contains the notes of all music. But the artist is born to pick, and choose, and group with science, these elements, that the result may be beautiful.

J. MCNEILL WHISTLER. Inscribed beneath his bust in the Hall of Fame.

V—Art: The Artist

2 What is the Artist's duty? . . .

To praise and celebrate,
Because his love is great,
The lively miracle
Of Universal Beauty.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, The Artist's Duty.

3 The great artist is the simplifier.

AMIEL, Journal, 25 Nov., 1861.

4 Who of the gods first taught the artist's craft
Laid on the human race their greatest curse.
("Ὅστις τέχνην κατέδειξε πρῶτος τῶν θεῶν, οὗτος μέγιστον εὔρεν ἀνθρώποις κακόν.")

ANTIPHANES, Knapheus, Frag., l. 1.

5 Let each man exercise the art he knows.
("Ἐρδοι τις ἦν ἕκαστος εἰδὲν τέχνην.")

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 1431. CICERO (Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 41) puts this into Latin: "Quam quisque norit artem, in hac se exerceat."

6 To be an artist is a great thing, but to be an artist and not know it is the most glorious plight in the world.

J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy, p. 436.

An artist without sentiment is a painter without colours.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 24.

7 The study of the beautiful is a duel in which the artist cries out with terror before he is vanquished.

CHARLES BAUDELAIRE, An Artist's Confession.

8 Every artist dips his brush in his own soul, and paints his own nature into his pictures.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

Every artist writes his own autobiography.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, The New Spirit, p. 178.

9 The man who never in his mind and thought travelled to heaven, is no artist. . . . Mere enthusiasm is the all in all. . . . Passion and expression are beauty itself.

WILLIAM BLAKE. (GILCHRIST, Life, i, 310.)

10 None but blockheads copy each other.

WILLIAM BLAKE. (GILCHRIST, Life, ii, 174.)

To admire on principle is the only way to imitate without loss of originality.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. iv.

11 And you, great sculptor—so, you gave
A score of years to Art, her slave,
And that's your Venus, whence we turn
To yonder girl that fords the burn!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Last Ride Together.

Artists! Margaret's smile receive,
And on canvas show it;
But for perfect worship leave
Dora to her poet.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Margaret and Dora.

12 Does he paint? he fain would write a poem—
Does he write? he fain would paint a picture,
Put to proof art alien to the artist's,
Once, and only once, and for one only,
So to be the man and leave the artist,
Gain the man's joy, miss the artist's sorrow.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. St. 8.

13 An artist has liberty, if he is free to create any image in any material that he chooses.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Generally Speaking, p. 125.

14 Work thou for pleasure! Sing or paint or carve

The thing thou lovest, though the body starve.
Who works for glory misses oft the goal;
Who works for money coins his very soul.
Work for the work's sake, then, and it may be
That these things shall be added unto thee.

KENYON COX, The Gospel of Art. (Century Magazine, Feb., 1895.)

There is no way to success in art but to take off your coat, grind paint, and work like a digger on the railroad, all day and every day.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life; Power. Quoted as having been said by "a brave painter."

He that seeks popularity in art closes the door on his own genius: as he must needs paint for other minds, and not for his own.

ANNA JAMESON, Memoirs and Essays: Washington Allston.

Art should never try to be popular.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of Man under Socialism.

15 The torpid artist seeks inspiration at any cost, by virtue or by vice, by friend or by fiend, by prayer or by wine.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

You cannot hide any secret. If the artist succor his flagging spirits by opium or wine, his work will characterize itself as the effect of opium or wine.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

16 Artists must be sacrificed to their art. Like bees, they must put their lives into the sting they give.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration.

Every artist was first an amateur.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

1 The true artist has the planet for his pedestal; the adventurer, after years of strife, has nothing broader than his shoes.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

2 A man may be an artist though he have not his tools about him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 288.

3 And I thought, like Dr. Faustus, of the emptiness of art,

How we take a fragment for the whole, and call the whole a part.

O. W. HOLMES, Nux Postcænatica. St. 2.

4 The artist needs no religion beyond his work.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 136.

5 Scratch an artist and you surprise a child.

JAMES HUNEKER, Chopin, p. 25.

6 To draw a moral, to preach a doctrine, is like shouting at the north star. Life is a vast and awful business. The great artist sets down his vision of it and is silent.

LUDWIG LEWISOHN, The Modern Drama, p. 109.

7 Emigravit is the inscription on the tombstone where he lies;

Dead he is not, but departed,—for the artist never dies.

LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg. St. 13.

And it came to pass that after a time the artist was forgotten, but the work lived.

OLIVE SCHREINER, The Artist's Secret.

But he is dust; we may not know

His happy or unhappy story:

Nameless, and dead these centuries,

His work outlives him,—there's his glory!

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, On an Intaglio Head of Minerva.

8 Nothing can come out of an artist that is not in the man.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. v, p. 90.

9 The learned understand the theory of art, the unlearned its pleasure. (Docti rationem artis, intelligent, indocti voluptatem.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 42.

10 Back of the canvas that throbs the painter is hinted and hidden;

Into the statue that breathes the soul of the sculptor is bidden.

RICHARD REALF, Indirection.

Behind the poem is the poet's soul;

Behind the canvas throbs the artist's heart.

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE, Manhattan.

11 People always confuse the man and the artist because chance has united them in the same body. (On confound toujours l'homme et l'artiste sous prétexte que le hasard les a réunis dans le même corps.)

JULES RENARD, Journal. Referring to Verlaine.

The artist and censor differ in this wise: that the first is a decent mind in an indecent body and that the second is an indecent mind in a decent body.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, The Autobiography of an Attitude.

12 It is futile to assign the place an artist is likely to take in the future. There are fashions in immortality as there are trivial fashions. . . . Books and pictures read differently to different generations.

WILLIAM ROTHENSTEIN, Men and Memories. Vol. i, p. 66.

13 He is the greatest artist who has embodied in the sum of his works, the greatest number of the greatest ideas.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Vol. i, pt. i, ch. 2, sec. 9.

If it is the love of that which your work represents—if, being a landscape painter, it is love of hills and trees that moves you—if, being a figure painter, it is love of human beauty, and human soul that moves you—if, being a flower or animal painter, it is love, and wonder, and delight in petal and in limb that move you, then the Spirit is upon you, and the earth is yours, and the fullness thereof.

RUSKIN, The Two Paths. Lect. i.

14 An artist is a dreamer consenting to dream of the actual world.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Life of Reason, p. 39.

15 Good material often stands idle for want of an artist. (Sæpe bona materia cessat sine artifice.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xlvii, 16.

16 In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed, To make some good, but others to exceed.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 15.

17 The true artist will let his wife starve, his children go barefoot, his mother drudge for his living at seventy, sooner than work at anything but his art.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i.

18 In fields of air he writes his name,

And treads the chambers of the sky;

He reads the stars, and grasps the flame

That quivers round the throne on high.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Art.

19 There is no such thing as a dumb poet or a handless painter. The essence of an artist is that he should be articulate.

Enough that he heard it once: we shall hear it by and by.

ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler.

Burrow awhile and build, broad on the roots of things.

ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler. St. 2.

Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,
Or what's a heaven for?

ROBERT BROWNING, Andrea del Sarto.

Like plants in mines, which never saw the sun,
But dream of him, and guess where he may be,
And do their best to climb, and get to him.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v.

1
What I aspired to be,
And was not, comforts me:
A brute I might have been, but would not sink
i' the scale.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 7.

3
Strong souls
Live like fire-hearted suns; to spend their strength
In furthest striving action.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iv.

4 Everything good in man leans on what is higher. All our strength and success in the work of our hands depend on our borrowing the aid of the elements. You have seen a carpenter on a ladder with a broad-axe chopping upward chips from a beam. How awkward!
But see him on the ground, dressing his timber under him. Now, not his feeble muscles but the force of gravity brings down the axe; that is to say, the planet itself splits his stick. . . .
I admire the skill which, on the sea-shore,
makes the tides drive wheels and grind corn, and which thus engages the assistance of the moon, like a hired hand. Now that is the wisdom of a man, in every instance of his labor, to hitch his wagon to a star, and see his chore done by the gods themselves.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

Hitch your wagon to a star. Let us not fag in paltry works which serve our pot and bag alone.
Let us not lie and steal. No god will help. We shall find all their teams going the other way:
every god will leave us. Work rather for those interests which the divinities honor and promote,
—justice, love, freedom, knowledge, utility.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

Raise thy head; Take stars for money.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 29.

I should delight to have my curls half drowned
In Tyrian dews, and head with roses crowned;
And once more yet, ere I am laid out dead,
Knock at a star with my exalted head.

ROBERT HERRICK, *The Bad Season Makes the

None is more severe than he of humble birth when raised to high estate. (Aspersius nihil est humili, cum surgit in altum.)

<sup>4</sup>
Authority intoxicates,
And makes mere sots of magistrates;
The fumes of it invade the brain,
And make men giddy, proud, and vain.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 282.

<sup>5</sup>
He who is firmly seated in authority soon learns to think security, and not progress, the highest lesson of statecraft.

I—Autumn: Its Beauty

<sup>13</sup>
O Autumn, laden with fruit, and stained
With the blood of the grape, pass not, but sit Beneath my shady roof; there thou may'st rest
And tune thy jolly voice to my fresh pipe,
And all the daughters of the year shall dance!
Sing now the lusty song of fruits and flowers.

Led yellow Autumn, wreath'd with nodding corn.

BURNS, The Brigs of Ayr, l. 221.

<sup>17</sup>
There is something in the autumn that is native to my blood—
Touch of manner, hint of mood;
And my heart is like a rhyme,
With the yellow and the purple and the crimson keeping time.

BLISS CARMAN, A Vagabond Song.
The scarlet of the maples can shake me like a cry

Of bugles going by.
And my lonely spirit thrills
To see the frosty asters like a smoke upon the hills.

BLISS CARMAN, A Vagabond Song.

1
A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite, tender sky,
The ripe, rich tint of the cornfields,
And the wild geese sailing high,—
And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the goldenrod,—
Some of us call it Autumn,
And others call it God.

WILLIAM HERBERT CARRUTH, Each in His Own Tongue.

The red upon the hill

II—Autumn: Its Sadness

3 Now Autumn's fire burns slowly along the woods,

And day by day the dead leaves fall and melt,
And night by night the monitory blast
Wails in the key-hole, telling how it pass'd
O'er empty fields, or upland solitudes,
Or grim wide wave; and now the power is felt
Of melancholy, tenderer in its moods
Than any joy indulgent Summer dealt.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Autumnal Sonnet.

4 The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year,

Of wailing winds, and naked woods, and meadows brown and sear.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, 198.

He would have flayed a louse to save the skin of it.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 117. (1591)

He would have flayed a louse for her skin, he was so covetous.

WODROEPHEE, Spared Houres, 285. (1623)

Thrifty! Man, she'd skin a flea for his hide.

DUFFY, The Coiner. Sc. 7.

9 You cannot flay a stone.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

To skin a stone for a penny, and break a knife of twelve-pence.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 11.

He would skin a flint.

BERTHELSON, Eng.-Danish Dict., s.v. "skin."

10 Never was scraper brave man. Get to live; Then live, and use it. . . . Surely use alone Makes money not a contemptible stone. . . . Gold thou mayst safely touch; but if it stick Unto thy hands, it woundeth to the quick.

DAVID HUME, Of Civil Liberty.

15 Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place!

Old Testament: Isaiah, v. 8.

16 Some men make fortunes, but not to enjoy them;

Blinded by avarice, they live to make fortunes. (Non propter vitam faciunt patrimonia quidam, Sed vitio cæci propter patrimonia vivunt.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 50.

17 It is plain madness to live in want that you may die rich. (Manifesta phrenesis, Ut locuples moriaris, egentis vivere facto.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 136.

To famish in plenty, and live poorly to die rich, were a multiplying improvement in madness, and use upon use in folly.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 7.

A mere madness, to live like a wretch, and die rich.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 12.

Some men choose to be miserable that they may be rich, rather than be happy with the expense of money and doing noble things.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. iv, sec. 8.

He was always ready to pick a halfpenny out of the dirt with his teeth. (Paratus fuit quadrantem de stercore mordicus tollere.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43.

7
True it is that avarice is rich, modesty starves.
(Verum est aviditas dives, et pauper pudor.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 1, l. 12.

8
Since you will go where all have gone before, why torment your disgraceful life with such mean ambitions? Tell me, O miser. (Abiturus illuc priores abierunt, Quid mente cæca torques spiritum? Tibi dico, avarè.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 19, l. 16.

9
You might as well seek water from a pumice stone, that's thirsty itself. (Nam tu aquam a pumice nunc postulas, qui ipsius sitiati.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 41. (Act i, sc. 1.)

For who'll wrest water from a flinty stone?

JOHN WEEVER, Epigrammes, 17.

There's no getting blood out of a turnip.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet. Ch. 4.

10
Which is the happier or the wiser,
A man of merit, or a miser?

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 147.

11
The miser is as much in want of what he has as of what he has not. (Tam deest avaro quod habet, quam quod non habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 440.

Poverty wants much, but avarice everything.
(Desunt inopiæ multa, avaritiæ omnia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 441.

The avaricious man is good to no one, but he is worst of all to himself. (In nullam avarus bonus est, in se pessimus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 442.

12
His money comes from him like drops of blood.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 90. (1678)

13
Covetous of the property of others and prodigal of his own. (Alieni appetens, sui profusus.)

14
To greed, all nature is insufficient. (Avidis natura parum est.)

SENECA, Hercules Cætus, l. 631.

15
How quickly nature falls into revolt
When gold becomes her object!
For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep with thoughts, their brains with care,
Their bones with industry.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 66.

Doth, like a miser, spoil his coat with scanting
A little cloth.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 47.

16
Happy always was it for that son
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 45.

17
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts:
Dash him to pieces!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 79.

This avarice
Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 84.

18
An old miser kept a tame jackdaw, that used to steal pieces of money, and hide them in a hole, which a cat observing, asked, "Why he would hoard up those round shining things that he could make no use of?" "Why," said the jackdaw, "my master has a whole chest-full, and makes no more use of them than I do."

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

<sup>1</sup> Covetousness has such a blinding power that all the arguments in the world will not convince a man that he is covetous.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah Sight of Palestine.
He smiles, and sleeps!—sleep on
And smile, thou little, young inheritor
Of a world scarce less young: sleep on and smile!

BYRON, Cain. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 18.

Her beads while she numbered,
The baby still slumbered,
And smiled in her face, as she bended her knee;
Oh! bless'd be that warning,
My child's sleep adorning,
For I know that the angels are whispering with thee.

SAMUEL LOVER, The Angel's Whisper.

The smile that flickers on baby's lips when he sleeps—does anybody know where it was born?
Yes, there is a rumor that a young pale beam of a crescent moon touched the edge of a vanishing autumn cloud, and there the smile was first born in the dream of a dew-washed morning.

BACON, SIR FRANCIS

8
In Bacon see the culminating prime

Of British intellect and British crime.
He died, and Nature, settling his affairs,
Parted his powers among us, his heirs:
To each a pinch of common-sense for seed,
And, to develop it, a pinch of greed.
Each frugal heir, to make the gift suffice,
Buries the talent to manure the vice.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Sir Francis Bacon. The Lantern, 15 July, 1874.

9
Let Bacon speak and wise men would rather listen, though the revolution of kingdoms was on foot.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.

The reputations that were great and inaccessible change and tarnish. How great were once Lord Bacon's dimensions! he is now reduced almost to the middle height; and many another star has turned out to be a planet or an asteroid.

2 I knew a very wise man who believed that . . . if a man were permitted to make all the ballads, he need not care who should make the laws of a nation. And we find that most of the ancient legislators thought they could not well reform the manners of any city without the help of a lyric, and sometimes of a dramatic poet.

6 Though some make light of libels, yet you may see by them how the wind sits: as, take a straw and throw it up into the air, you shall see by that which way the wind is, which you shall not do by casting up a stone. More solid things do not show the complexion of the time as well as ballads and libels.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Libels. By libels, Selden means lampoons.

7 An I have not ballads made on you all and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 48.

10 Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song,
That old and antique song we heard last night:
Methought it did relieve my passion much,
More than light airs and recollected terms
Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times. . . .

Mark it, Cesario, it is old and plain;

The spinsters and the knitters in the sun

And the free maids that weave their thread with bones

Do use to chant it: it is silly sooth,

And dallies with the innocence of love,

Like the old age.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 2.

It hath been sung at festivals,

On ember eves and holy ales;

And lords and ladies of their lives

Have read it for restoratives.

SHAKESPEARE [?], Pericles. Act i, prol., l. 5.

11 He sings several times faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 184.

In chords that tenderest be,
He played an ancient ditty, long since mute,
In Provence called, "La belle dame sans merci."
KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 33.

1
I love a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 187.
I love a ballad in print o' life, for then we are sure they are true.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 263.

2
I never heard the old song of Percy and Douglass, that I found not my heart moved more than with a trumpet.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Defence of Poesy.

The grand old ballad of Sir Patrick Spence.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Dejection. St. 1.

They'll cry "What expression is in it!"

Don't sing English ballads to me!

T. H. BAYLY, Don't Sing English Ballads to Me!

3
Build, build, but never monument of stone shall last as long
As one old soldier's ballad borne on breath of battle-song.

MAURICE THOMPSON, The Ballad of Chickamauga.

4
Yesterday I was walking under the fence; and I heard the peasant boys here, instead of some old ballad, bawling a street-song. That's what progress is.

BARBER

5
And thou, son of man, take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, and cause it to pass upon thine head, and upon thy beard.

Old Testament: Ezekiel, v, 1.

6
Since I have dealt in suds, I could never discover more than two reasons for shaving; the one is to get a beard, the other is to get rid of one.

HENRY FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. viii, ch. 4.

7
And the barber kept on shaving.

JAMES T. FIELDS, The Owl-Critic.

8
One barber shaves not so close but another finds work.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3737.

Of a thousand shavers, two do not shave so much alike as not to be distinguished.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1777.)

9
Well lathered is half shaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5472.

"A good lather is half the shave," is a very old remark among the trade [barbers].

HONE, Every-Day Book, i, 1269.

10
Every barber knows that. (Omnibus notum tonsoribus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 7, l. 3.

11
But he shaved with a shell when he chose,
'Twas the manner of primitive man.

ANDREW LANG, Double Ballad of Primitive Man.

12
How wonderful it is to have a perfectly safe place to throw worn-out safety razor blades.

ROSS W. LYNN, Letter to F. P. A., from Hotel

El Tovar, Grand Canyon of the Colorado,
5 Oct., 1916.

13
With odorous oil thy head and hair are sleek;
And then thou kemb'st the tuzzes on thy cheek:

Of these, my barbers take a costly care.

PERSIUS, Satires, iv, 89. (Dryden, tr.)

14
The first [barbers] that entered Italy came out of Sicily and it was in the 454 year after the foundation of Rome. . . . The first that was shaven every day was Scipio Africanus, and after him cometh Augustus the Emperor,
who evermore used the rasor.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii,
sec. 59.

15
Like a barber's chair, that fits all buttocks.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 2, l. 17. See also under VENUS.

16
Our courteous Antony . . .
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 227.

Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin new reap'd
Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 34.

17
My master preaches patience to him and the while

His man with scissors nicks him like a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v, sc.
1, l. 174.

Accept a proverb out of Wisdom's schools—
"Barbers first learn to shave by shaving fools."

JOHN WOLCOT, Works. Vol. ii, p. 446. The proverb appears in Cotgrave's French-English Dictionary, 1611.

18
I must to the barber's, monsieur; for methinks I am marvellous hairy about the face.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 25.

19
A Fellow in a market town,

Most musical, cried Razors up and down.

JOHN WOLCOT, Farewell Odes. Ode iii.

1 The fellow will get a dry shave.
JOHN WOLCOT, Great Cry and Little Wool.

I'll shave her, like a punished soldier, dry.
JOHN WOLCOT, The Louisad. Canto ii.

2 When your razor is dull
And you need to shave
Think of the man
That lays in this grave,
For there was a time
It might have been whet,
You was afraid of a dime
And now its too late.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on tombstone of August Hefner, in cemetery at Waverly, Ohio. Hefner died 17 Sept., 1856, and the tombstone states, "The deceased being asked on his arrival in Waverly, O., where he was going, answered, Here and no farther."

BARGAIN

3 He who buys and lies feels it in his purse.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25.

4 Here's the rule for bargains: "Do other men, for they would do you." That's the true business precept.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 11.

5 A man loseth his time that comes early to a bad bargain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 286.

It is a silly bargain where nobody gains.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2878.

6 On a good bargain think twice.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A good bargain is a pick-purse.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 For Diomed's brass arms, of mean device,
For which nine oxen paid (a vulgar price),
He gave his own, of gold divinely wrought;
An hundred beeves the shining purchase bought.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 292. (Pope, tr.)
Hence, "Diomedian swap," an exchange in which all the benefit is on one side.

Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy;
But we in silence hold this virtue well,
We'll not commend what we intend to sell.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 75.

8 I . . . therefore am resolved to make the best of a bad market.

PEPYS, Diary, 14 Aug., 1663.

Her aunt seemed determined to make the best of a bad bargain.

SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 36.

9 The bargain is not a bargain, or what was not a bargain is a bargain, just as you please. (Pactum non pactum est, non pactum pactum est, quod vobis lubet.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 260. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

'Tis ill luck to go back upon a bargain.

READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 36.

A bargain is a bargain, and must stand without all exception.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, 34. (1560)

10 A dear bargain is always disagreeable, because it is a reflection upon the judgment of the buyer. (Nam mala emptio semper ingrata est eo maxime, quod exprobrare stultitiam domino videtur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 24.

11 Make every bargain clear and plain,
That none may afterwards complain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12 Lest the bargain should catch cold and starve.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 4, l. 179.

13 But in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 139.

To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 104.

14 And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 6.

15 There never was a better bargain driven.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, My True Love Hath My Heart.

16 There's two words to that bargain.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

17 The timely buyer Hath cheaper his fire.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: January's Abstract.

18 A blind bargain.

UNKNOWN, Merrie Tales of the Mad Men of Gttingham. No. 13. (1630)

BATHING

19 Do you think that I, then, am taking pleasure in my bath?

GAUTEMOZIN, successor of Montezuma, to his companion, the cacique of Tacuba, while being tortured by Cortez. (PRESCOTT, Conquest of Mexico, bk. vii, ch. 1.) Usually quoted, "Am I, then, lying on a bed of roses?"

Hercules! How cold is this bath of yours!

JUGURTHA, when thrown into a subterranean dungeon half full of water, 104 B. C. (SALUST, Jugurtha.)

<sup>1</sup> They who bathe in May will soon be laid in clay;

They who bathe in June will sing a merry tune;

They who bathe in July will dance like a fly.

WILLIAM HONE, Table-Book, p. 315.

<sup>2</sup> Many recite their writings in the bath. How pleasantly the vaulted space echoes the voice!
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 75.

I fly to the hot baths, there you din my ears;
I seek the cold bath, there I cannot swim for your noise.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, ep. 44.

The man who always likes to hear his own voice in the bathroom. (Illum cui vox sua in balieno placet.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lvi, sec. 2.

<sup>3</sup> If you wish, Faustinus, that a bath, so hot that even Julianus could scarcely get into it, should be cooled, ask the rhetorician Sabineus to bathe in it. He makes icy the warm baths of Nero.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, epig. 25.

<sup>4</sup> In the height of this bath, where I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 120.

Perspiration should flow only after toil. (Omnis sudor per laborem exeat.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 6.

<sup>5</sup> A seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure . . .

And healthful remedy For men diseased.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cliii, cliv.

BATTLE, see War

BEAR

<sup>6</sup> One thing thinketh the bear, but another thinketh his leader.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1453.

<sup>7</sup> I am as loath to go to it, as a bear is to go to the stake.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 89.

If he goes, yet it is as a bear to the stake.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman. Sig. D5.

<sup>8</sup> He must have iron nails that scratcheth with a bear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1991.

Tho' the bear be gentle, don't bite him by the nose.

THOMAS D'URFEX, Quixote. Pt. iii, act i, sc. 1.

<sup>9</sup> The bear wants a tail and cannot be a lion.
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. iii, p. 271.

<sup>10</sup> He is not worthy to carry guts to a bear.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs. No. 17.

George thinks us scarcely fit ('tis very clear)
To carry guts, my brethren, to a bear.

<sup>11</sup> We roar all like bears.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lix, 11.

<sup>12</sup> Make ye no truce with Adam-zad—the Bear that walks like a Man!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Truce of the Bear. Referring to Russia.

The rugged Russian bear.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 100.

<sup>13</sup> I trusted so much that I sold the skin before the bear was taken.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 273.

He bade me have a care for the future, to make sure of the bear before I sell his skin.

L'ESTRANGE, Æsop, p. 270.

Indeed the devil may be said to sell the bear-skin, whatever he buys.

DANIEL DEFOE, History of the Devil. Pt. ii, ch. 8.

<sup>14</sup> Are you there with your bears?

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act ii, sc. 3. (1592)

<sup>15</sup> As savage as a bear with a sore head.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 26.

<sup>16</sup> Bears when first born are little shapeless masses of white flesh a little larger than mice, their claws alone being prominent. Their mother then gradually licks them into proper shape.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. viii, sec. 36.

Bears leisurely lick their cubs into form.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

Like to the bear which bringeth forth
In the end of thirty days a shapeless birth;
But after licking, it in shape she draws,
And by degrees she fashions out the paws,
The head, and neck, and finally doth bring
To a perfect beast that first deformed thing.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weeks and Works. Week i, day 1.

Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp,
That carries no impression like the dam.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 161.

So watchful Bruin forms, with plastic care,
Each growing lump and brings it to a bear.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 101.

See also WRITING: CAREFUL WRITING.

<sup>1</sup> He hath as many tricks as a dancing bear.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. No. 163.

You have more tricks than a dancing bear.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

<sup>2</sup> If it had been a bear it would have bit you!
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

BEARD

<sup>3</sup> Like the goat, you'll mourn for your beard.
(Τράγος γένειον ἄρα πενήσεις σύ γε.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus the Fire-Kindler.
Frag. 117.

<sup>4</sup> A beard creates lice, not brains. (Ὁ πάγων φθειρῶν ποιητής, οὐχὶ φρενῶν γέγονεν.)
AMMIANUS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig.
156.)

'Tis not the beard that makes the philosopher.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5102.

If you think that to grow a beard is to acquire wisdom, a goat is at once a complete Plato.
LUCIAN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 430.)

If the beard were all, a goat might preach.
UNKNOWN. A Danish proverb.

Wise as far as the beard. (Barbæ tenus sapientes.)
UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

<sup>5</sup> Men for their sins
Have shaving, too, entailed upon their chins,—
A daily plague.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 23.

<sup>6</sup> The soft down of manhood was just springing on his cheek. (Ἀρμῶι που κάκελιν φέπτερχεν ἄβρῶς τοῦλος.)
CALLIMACHUS, Hecale. Frag. 4.

Ere on thy chin the springing beard began
To spread a doubtful down, and promise man.
MATTHEW PRIOR, An Ode to the Memory of the Honourable Colonel George Villiers, l. 5.

Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phoenix down began but to appear.
SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 92.

pascere barbam*.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 35.

<sup>8</sup> There was an old man with a beard,
Who said: "It is just as I feared—
Two Owls and a Hen,
Four Larks and a Wren
Have all built their nests in my beard."
EDWARD LEAR, Book of Nonsense.

<sup>9</sup> He has singed the beard of the king of Spain.
LONGFELLOW, A Dutch Picture.

Sir Francis Drake entered the harbour of Cadiz, April 19, 1587, and destroyed shipping to the amount of ten thousand tons lading. To use his own expressive phrase, he had "singed the Spanish king's beard."

KNIGHT, Pictorial History of England. Vol. iii,
p. 215.

<sup>10</sup> Does he offer you his foolish beard to pluck at? (Stolidam præbet tibi vellere barbam?)
PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 28.

Pulling his beard because he had no heir.
THOMAS HOOD, The Stag-Eyed Lady.

<sup>11</sup> Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown.
Old Testament: II Samuel, x, 5. This was King David's advice to his servants, who had been mistaken for spies by Hanun and sent back from the land of Ammon with one half of their beards shaved off.

<sup>12</sup> Beard of formal cut.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l.
155.

Hoary whiskers and a forked beard.
POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 38.
And slight Sir Robert with his watery smile
And educated whisker.
TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 128.

<sup>13</sup> Hamlet. His beard was grizzled,—no?
Horatio. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 240.
His beard was as white as snow,
All flaxen was his poll.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 195.
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 43.
Thy father's beard is turned white with the news.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 393.
A black beard will turn white.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 1, l. 168.

<sup>14</sup> Thy face is valanced since I saw thee last;
comest thou to beard me?
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 442.

<sup>15</sup> You must not think
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull
That we can let our beard be shook with danger

And think it pastime.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 30.

<sup>16</sup> You should be women,
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 45.
What a beard hast thou got! thou hast got more hair on thy chin than Dobbin my fill-horse has on his tail.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 99.

<sup>17</sup> How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false

As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars,
Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 83.

1 A little yellow beard, a Cain-coloured beard.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 4, l. 23.

Bottom: What beard were I best to play it in?
Quince: Why, what you will.

Bottom: I will discharge it in either your straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-colour beard, your perfect yellow.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 2, l. 92.

2 Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face: I had rather lie in the woollen.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 32.

He that hath a beard is more than a youth, and he that hath no beard is less than a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 38.

Claudio. The old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leonato. Indeed, he looks younger than he did by the loss of a beard.

I—Beauty: Definitions

5 Beauty is the gift of God. (Θεοῦ δῶρον.)

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 19.)

Beauty is heaven's gift, and how few can boast of beauty! (Forma dei munus: forma quota quæque superbit!)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 103.

6 There is no excellent beauty that hath not some strangeness in the proportion.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty.

The best part of beauty is that which a picture cannot express.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 64.

7 The beautiful is as useful as the useful, and sometimes more so. (Ici-bas le joli c'est le nécessaire.)

MATILDA BETHAM-EDWARDS, Heart of the Vosges.

Beauty rests on necessities. The line of beauty is the line of perfect economy.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

The beautiful rests on the foundations of the necessary.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

8 Beauty is another's good. (Τὸ κάλλος ἀλλότριον ἀγαθόν.)

BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv., sec. 48.)

9 Exuberance is Beauty.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

10 For beauty being the best of all we know
Sums up the unsearchable and secret aims
Of nature.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Growth of Love.

11 Too much beauty, I reckon, is nothing but too much sun.

E. B. BROWNING, Lord Walter's Wife.

12 Beauty is like the surf that never ceases,
Beauty is like the night that never dies,
Beauty is like a forest pool where peace is
And a recurrent waning planet lies.

STRUTHERS BURT, I Know a Lovely Lady Who is Dead.

13 Beauty has no relation to price, rarity, or age.

JOHN COTTON DANA, Libraries.

14 Beauty is not caused,
It is.

EMILY DICKINSON, Further Poems. No. xlix.

15 Beauty, what is that? There are phalanxes of beauty in every comic show. Beauty neither buys food nor keeps up a home.

MAXINE ELLIOTT, Newspaper Interview, 1908.

16 The absence of flaw in beauty is itself a flaw.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. i, p. 217. See also under FAULT.

1 Beauty—what is it? A perfume without name:

A sudden hush where clamor was before:
Across the darkness a faint ghost of flame:
A far sail, seen from a deserted shore.

ARTHUR D. FICKE, Epitaph for the Poet V.

2 Wisdom is the abstract of the past, but beauty is the promise of the future.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 2.

Beauty is the index of a larger fact than wisdom.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 2.

3 A ship under sail, a man in complete armour, and a woman with a big belly, are the three handsomest sights in the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 2.

A ship under sail and a big-bellied woman
Are the handsomest two things that can be seen common.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1735.

Man nor king can see unmoved the coming of a wind-filled sail, the coming of a lovely lady, the coming of a horse in speed.

JAMES STEPHENS, In the Land of Youth.

4 Beauty, the smile of God, Music, His voice.

R. U. JOHNSON, Goethals of Panama.

5 Beauty from order springs.

WILLIAM KING, Art of Cookery, l. 55.

6 Beauty is something wonderful and strange that the artist fashions out of the chaos of the world in the torment of his soul.

W. S. MAUGHAM, The Moon and Sixpence.

It is in rare and scattered instants that beauty smiles even on her adorers, who are reduced for habitual comfort to remembering her past favours.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 117.

7 Beauty is the purgation of superfluities.

MICHELANGELO. (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.)

We ascribe beauty to that which is simple; which has no superfluous parts; which exactly answers its end.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

8 Beauty stands
In the admiration only of weak minds
Led captive; cease to admire, and all her plumes

Fall flat and shrink into a trivial toy,
At every sudden slighting quite abash'd.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 220.

9 Three of these points are white: the skin,
the teeth, the hands. Three black: the eyes,
the eyelashes, the eyebrows. Three red: lips, cheeks, nails. Three long: body, hair, hands.

Three short: ears, teeth, chin. Three wide:
the breast, the forehead, the space between the eyes. Three narrow: the waist, the hands, the feet. Three thin: the fingers, the ankles, the nostrils. Three plump: the lips, the arms,
the hips.

MORESCO, Twenty-seven Canons of Beauty.

10 Beauty is ever to the lonely mind
A shadow fleeting; she is never plain.
She is a visitor who leaves behind
The gift of grief, the souvenir of pain.

ROBERT NATHAN, Beauty is Ever.

11 Beauty is a natural superiority. (Προτέρημα φύσεως.)

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 19.)

The beautiful consists in utility and the power to produce some good.

PLATO, Hippias Major.

12 In wit, as nature, what affects our hearts
Is not th' exactness of peculiar parts;
'Tis not a lip or eye we beauty call,
But the joint force and full result of all.

POPE, Essay on Criticism, Pt. ii, l. 43.

13 Beauty comes, we scarce know how, as an emanation from sources deeper than itself.

SHARP, Studies in Poetry and Philosophy: Moral Motive Power.

14 Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye,
Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 15.

Beauty is altogether in the eye of the beholder.

LEW WALLACE, Prince of India.

15 Beauty is a mute deception. (Σιωπῶσαν ἀπατην.)

THEOPHRASTUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 19.)

Yet is beauty the pleasing trickery that cheateth half the world.

MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Immortality.

16 Beauty is an evil in an ivory setting.
(Ἐλεφαντίνην ζημίαν.)

THEOCRITUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 19.)

17 The only beautiful things are the things that do not concern us.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

18 Beauty is a form of Genius—is higher, indeed, than Genius, as it needs no explanation.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray, Ch. 2.

1 Beauty is the flower of chastity. (Τὸ κάλλος εἶπε τῆς σωφροσύνης ἄνθος εἶναι.)

ZENO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 23.)

2 Ask of thyself what beauty is.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Party.

Who hath not proved how feebly words essay
To fix one spark of Beauty's heavenly ray?

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 6.

To draw true beauty shows a master's hand.

DRYDEN, Epistles: To Mr. Lee, l. 54.

II—Beauty: Its Praise

3 Too late I loved Thee, O Beauty of ancient days, yet ever new! too late I loved thee! And lo! Thou wert within, and I abroad searching for Thee. Thou wert with me, but I was not with Thee.

St. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. x, sec. 38.

The Beauty which old Greece or Rome
Sung, painted, wrought, lies close at home.

WHITTIER, To —.

4 If you get simple beauty and naught else,
You get about the best thing God invents.

ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

5 And behold there was a very stately palace before him, the name of which was Beautiful.

BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

The Beautiful! it is beauty seen with the eye of the soul. (Le Beau! c'est la beauté vue avec les yeux de l'âme.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 273.

6 Everything has its beauty but not everyone sees it.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

He hath made every thing beautiful in his time.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iii, 11.

I have then with pleasure concluded with Solomon,

"Everything is beautiful in his season."

ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler: The Angler's Wish.

7 Beauty crowds me till I die,
Beauty, mercy have on me!
Yet if I expire to-day
Let it be in sight of thee!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 43.

8 Rhodora! if the sages ask thee why
This charm is wasted on the earth and sky,
Tell them, dear, that if eyes were made for seeing,

Then Beauty is its own excuse for being.

EMERSON, The Rhodora.

Art's perfect forms no moral need,

And beauty is its own excuse.

WHITTIER, Songs of Labor: Dedication. (For the idea of this line, I am indebted to Emerson.—Whittier's note.)

9 My faith in beauty shall not fail
Because I fail to understand.

EDMUND GOSSE, Epilogue.

10 Who walks with beauty holds inviolate
The guarded secrets of the years to come,
Sees unborn Aprils crowding at the gate
Of living gardens white with petaled plum.

DANIEL WHITEHEAD HICKY, Who Walks With Beauty.

Who walks with Beauty has no need of fear;
The sun and moon and stars keep pace with him,
Invisible hands restore the ruined year,
And time, itself, grows beautifully dim.

ROBERT NATHAN, Who Walks With Beauty.

11 In beauty's cause illustriously he fails.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 358. (Pope, tr.)

He thought it happier to be dead,
To die for Beauty, than live for bread.

EMERSON, Beauty, l. 25.

12 Does not beauty confer a benefit upon us, even by the simple fact of being beautiful?

VICTOR HUGO, Toilers of the Sea. Pt. i, bk. iii, ch. 1.

13 Beauty, you lifted up my sleeping eyes
And filled my heart with longing with a look.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sonnets. No. i.

If I could come again to that dear place Where once I came, where Beauty lived and moved,

Where, by the sea, I saw her face to face,
That soul alive by which the world has loved; . . .

Joy with its searing-iron would burn me wise,
I should know all; all powers, all mysteries.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sonnets. No. iv.

14 Euclid alone
Has looked on Beauty bare. Fortunate they Who, though once only and then but far
away,

Have heard her massive sandal set on stone.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnets.

Such sights as youthful poets dream
On summer eves by haunted stream.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 129.

15 Praised be the gods that made my spirit
mad;

Kept me aflame and raw to beauty's touch.

ANGELA MORGAN, June Rapture.

16 Take from our hearts the love of the beautiful, and you take away all the charm of life. (Ôtez de nos cœurs cet amour du beau, vous ôtez tout le charme de la vie.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iv.

1 Our hearts were drunk with a beauty
Our eyes could never see.
GEORGE WILLIAM RUSSELL (A. E.), The Unknown God.

2 All things of beauty are not theirs alone
Who hold the fee; but unto him no less
Who can enjoy, than unto them who own,
Are sweetest uses given to possess.
J. G. SAXE, The Beautiful.

3 Spirit of Beauty, whose sweet impulses,
Flung like the rose of dawn across the sea,
Alone can flush the exalted consciousness
With shafts of sensible divinity—
Light of the world, essential loveliness.
ALAN SEEGER, Ode to Natural Beauty.

4 And beauty, making beautiful old rhyme.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cvi.

5 Grave is all beauty, Solemn is joy.
WILLIAM WATSON, England My Mother. Pt. iv.

6 O Beauty, old yet ever new!
Eternal Voice and Inward Word.
WHITTIER, The Shadow and the Light.

Elysian beauty, melancholy grace,
Brought from a pensive though a happy place.
WORDSWORTH, Laodamia, l. 95.

7 Doth perfect beauty stand in need of praise?
Nay; no more than law, no more than truth, no more than loving kindness, nor than modesty.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv., sec. 20.

III—Beauty and Goodness: A Reality

8 Beautiful faces are those that wear
Whole-souled honesty printed there.
ELLEN P. ALLERTON, Beautiful Things.

9 In beauty, that of favour is more than that of colour, and that of decent and gracious motion more than that of favour.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty.

10 The beautiful seems right
By force of beauty, and the feeble wrong
Because of weakness.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i., l. 753.

11 Beauty, alone, may please, not captivate; -
If lacking grace, 'tis but a hookless bait.
CAPITO, Epigrams. Bk. v, l. 67. (Lilla Cabot Perry, tr., Garden of Hellas, p. 105.)

Beauty without grace is the hook without the bait. Beauty, without expression, tires.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

12 Beauty is part of the finished language by which goodness speaks.
GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Ch. 19.

13 Any extraordinary degree of beauty in man or woman involves a moral charm.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

14 Beauty is the virtue of the body, as virtue is the beauty of the soul.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Michael Angelo.

Beauty is the mark God sets upon virtue.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Beauty.

Chant the beauty of the good.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

15 Nothing in human life, least of all in religion, is ever right until it is beautiful.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, As I See Religion.

16 Beauty without grace is a violet without smell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

17 How near to good is what is fair!

BEN JONSON, Love Freed from Ignorance and Folly.

18 Beauté sans bonté, blessed were it never.
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman, xviii, 162.
(1362.)

Kindness is worth more than beauty. (Bonté vaut mieux que beauté.)

JEAN D'ARRAS, Melusine. (c. 1393.)

Beautiful enough if good enough. (Sat pulchra si sat bona.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

19 But a celestial brightness—a more ethereal beauty—

Shone on her face and encircled her form
when, after confession,
Homeward serenely she walked with God's benediction upon her.

When she had passed, it seemed like the ceasing of exquisite music.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i.

The beauty of a lovely woman is like music; what can one say more?

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede.

When Nature's happiest touch could add no
more,

Heaven lent an angel's beauty to her face.

W. S. MICKLE, Mary, Queen of Scots.

A form so fair, that, like the air,

'Tis less of earth than heaven.

EDWARD COATE PINKNEY, A Health.

20 I want to help you to grow as beautiful as God meant you to be when he thought of you first.

GEORGE MACDONALD, The Marquis of Lossie.
Ch. 22.

21 An' fair was her sweet bodie,
Yet fairer was her mind.

ROBERT NICOLL, Menie.

1 Beauty is certainly a soft, smooth, slippery thing, and, therefore, of a nature which easily slips in and permeates our souls. And I further add that the good is the beautiful.

PLATO, Lysis, sec. 216. (Jowett, tr.)

2 When a beautiful soul harmonizes with a beautiful form, and the two are cast in one mould, that will be the fairest of sights to him who has the eye to contemplate the vision.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 402.

For, when with beauty we can virtue join,
We paint the semblance of a form divine.

MATTHEW PRIOR, To the Countess of Oxford.

3 Beauty is the flower of virtue.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The ancients called beauty the flowering of virtue.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love.

4 She was good as she was fair,
None, none on earth above her!
As pure in thought as angels are:
To know her was to love her.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. St. 1.

5 I have always believed that good is only beauty put into practice. (J'ai toujours cru que le bon n'était que le beau mis en action)

ROUSSEAU, Julie. Pt. i, letter 12.

6 What is beautiful is good, and who is good will soon also be beautiful.

SAPPHO, Fragment. No. 101.

7 Physical beauty is the sign of an interior beauty, a spiritual and moral beauty which is the basis, the principle, and the unity of the beautiful.

SCHILLER, Essays, Esthetical and Philosophical: Introduction.

8 The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 184.

9 He hath a daily beauty in his life.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 1, l. 19.

10 There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple:
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with 't.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 457.

It becomes possible to admit that plainness may coexist with nobility of nature, and fine features with baseness; and yet to hold that mental and physical perfection are fundamentally connected, and will, when the present causes of incongruity have worked themselves out, be ever found united.

HERBERT SPENCER, Essays: Personal Beauty.

11 Beauty is not, as fond men misdeem,
An outward show of things that only seem.
SPENCER, Hymne in Honour of Beautie, l. 90.

12 Virtue lives when Beauty dies.

H. K. WHITE, Additional Stanza to Waller's "Go, Lovely Rose."

13 What's female beauty, but an air divine,
Thro' which the mind's all gentle graces shine?

They, like the sun, irradiate all between;
The body charms because the soul is seen.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 150.

14 Not that which is great is beautiful, but that which is beautiful is great. (Non id quod magnum est, pulchrum est, sed id quod pulchrum, magnum.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

IV—Beauty and Goodness: An Illusion

15 Too dear I prized a fair enchanting face:
Beauty unchaste is beauty in disgrace.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 359. (Pope, tr.)

16 Christian endeavor is notoriously hard on female puchritude.

H. L. MENCKEN, The Aesthetic Recoil. (American Mercury, July, 1931.)

17 Would you were either less beautiful or less base;

Beauty so fair mates not with evil ways.
(Aut formosa fores minus, aut minus improba, vellem;

Non facit ad mores tam bona forma malos.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 41.

As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 22.

18 O Hero, what a Hero hadst thou been
If half thy outward graces had been placed
About thy thoughts and counsels of thy heart!

But fare thee well, most foul, most fair! fare-well,

Thou pure impiety and impious purity!

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. i, l. 101.

The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxx.

19 What a strange illusion it is to suppose that beauty is goodness.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 5.

1 It is better to be beautiful than to be good,
but it is better to be good than to be ugly.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray.

2 Say not of Beauty she is good,
Or aught but beautiful.

ELINOR WYLIE, Beauty.

V—Beauty and Truth

3 I must not say that thou wert true,
Yet let me say that thou wert fair;
And they that lovely face who view,
They will not ask if truth be there.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Indifference. St. 1.

4 Beauty and Truth, tho' never found, are worthy to be sought.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, To David in Heaven.

5 If I were called upon to choose between beauty and truth, I should not hesitate; I should hold to beauty, being confident that it bears within it a truth both higher and deeper than truth itself. I will go so far as to say there is nothing true in the world save beauty.

ANATOLE FRANCE. (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch,
p. 25.)

6 "Beauty is truth, truth beauty,"—that is all
Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know.

JOHN KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn.

7 Goodness is a special kind of truth and beauty. It is truth and beauty in human behavior.

H. A. OVERSTREET, The Enduring Quest, p. 163.

8 Truth exists for the wise, beauty for the feeling heart.

(Die Wahrheit ist vorhanden für den Weisen.
Die Schönheit für ein fühlend Herz.)

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act iv, sc. 21, l. 186.

9 O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem

By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. liv.

10 If thou art beautiful, and youth
And thought endue thee with all truth—
Be strong;—be worthy of the grace
Of God.

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone.
Canto ii, l. 581.

11 The identification of the true and good is but a pious wish.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Tragic Sense of Life,
p. 93.

VI—Beauty and Love

12 The essence of all beauty, I call love.
The attribute, the evidence, and end,
The consummation to the inward sense
Of beauty apprehended from without,
I still call love.

E. B. BROWNING, A Drama of Exile, l. 777.

13 All kinds of beauty do not inspire love; there is a kind which only pleases the sight, but does not captivate the affections.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 6.

14 Beauty is the lover's gift.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act ii, sc. 2.

15 Love, built on beauty, soon as beauty, dies.

JOHN DONNE, Elegies: No. 2, The Anagram, l. 27.

16 When beauty fires the blood, how love exalts
the mind!

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 41.

17 Beauty is the child of love.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, The New Spirit, p. 280.

18 Beauty brings its own fancy price, for all that a man hath will he give for his love.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Social Aims.

19 Fair is my love for April's in her face,
Her lovely breasts September claims his part,

And lordly July in her eyes takes place,
But cold December dwelleth in her heart;

ROBERT GREENE, Perimedes.

Tender—but her hands can
Tear a soul apart!

He who follows Beauty
Breaks his foolish heart.

B. Y. WILLIAMS, Song Against Beauty.

20 Where beauty is, there will be love.

Nature, that wisely nothing made in vain,
Did make you lovely to be loved again.

ROBERT HEATH, To Clarastella.

21 Yet beauty, tho' injurious, hath strange power,

After offence returning, to regain
Love once possess'd.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1003.

22 Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all
at last.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 575.

23 Love is a flame, and therefore we say beauty is attractive; because physicians observe that fire is a great drawer.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

1
O beauty, are you not enough?
Why am I crying after love?

SARA TEASDALE, Spring Night.

Be she fairer than the day,
Or the flowery meads in May,
If she be not so to me,
What care I how fair she be?

GEORGE WITHER, The Shepherd's Resolution.

3
True beauty dwells in deep retreats,
Whose veil is unremoved
Till heart with heart in concord beats,
And the lover is beloved.

WORDSWORTH, To —.

4
And beauty, for confiding youth,
Those shocks of passion can prepare
That kill the bloom before its time,
And blanch, without the owner's crime,
The most resplendent hair.

WORDSWORTH, Lament of Mary Queen of Scots.

Oh gracious, why wasn't I born old and ugly?
DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 70.

VII—Beauty and Riches

6
A beautiful girl, though she be poor indeed, is yet abundantly dowered. (Virgo formosa etsi sit oppido pauper, tamen abunde dotata
est.)

APULEIUS, De Magia. Sec. 92.

She that is fair hath half her portion.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca Schol. Instr., 15.

7
Beauty carries its dower in its face.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A good face needs no band and a pretty wench
no land.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

"What is your fortune, my pretty maid?"

"My face is my fortune, sir," she said.

UNKNOWN. Old nursery rhyme.

8
A poor beauty finds more lovers than husbands.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Beauty without bounty avails not.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, 295.

Beauty is potent, but money is omnipotent.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. No. 122.

9
All heiresses are beautiful.

DRYDEN, King Arthur. Act i, sc. 1.

No woman can be a beauty without a fortune.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act ii, sc. 2.

VIII—Beauty: Its Power

10
There's nothing that allays an angry mind
So soon as a sweet beauty.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Elder Brother.
Act iii, sc. 5.

11
Such man, being but mere man ('twas all she knew),

Must be made sure by beauty's silken bond,
The weakness that subdues the strong, and bows

Wisdom alike and folly.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. ix, l. 440.

12
Beauty in distress is much the most affecting beauty.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful.
Pt. iii, sec. 9.

Nor be, what man should ever be,
The friend of Beauty in distress?

BYRON, To Florence.

13
Who doth not feel, until his failing sight
Faints into dimness with its own delight,
His changing cheek, his sinking heart confess,
The might, the majesty of Loveliness?

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 6.

Who hath not paused while Beauty's pensive eye
Asked from his heart the homage of a sigh?

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 3.

14
I pour into the world the eternal streams
Wan prophets tent beside, and dream their dreams.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Beauty.

15
Beauties are tyrants, and if they can reign
They have no feeling for their subjects'
pain;

Their victim's anguish gives their charms applause,

And their chief glory is the woe they cause.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Patron, l. 199.

16
Ah, Beauty! Syren, fair enchanting Good,
Sweet silent Rhetoric of persuading eyes;
Dumb Eloquence, whose power doth move
the Blood,

More than the Words or Wisdom of the Wise;

Still Harmony, whose Diapason lies

Within a Brow; the Key which Passions
move

To ravish Sense, and play a World in love.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Complaint of Rosamund.
St. 19.

17
Beauty hath created been
T' undo or be undone.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Ulysses and the Syren, l. 71.

18
Things that, are lovely
Can tear my heart in two—
Moonlight on still pools,
You.
DOROTHY DOW, Things.

Old as I am, for ladies' love unfit,
The power of beauty I remember yet,
Which once inflam'd my soul, and still inspires my wit.

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 1.

2
Who gave thee, O Beauty,
The keys of this breast,—
Too credulous lover
Of blest and unblest?
Say, when in lapsed ages
Thee knew I of old?
Or what was the service
For which I was sold?
EMERSON, Ode to Beauty.

3
'Tis true, gold can do much,
But beauty more.

MASSINGER, The Unnatural Combat. Act i, sc. 1.

Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 3, l. 111.

4
Beauty makes idiots sad and wise men merry.
Men laugh with the things and persons that are closest to their hearts.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, The House of Satan,
p. 82.

5
Beauty draws more than oxen.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

6
Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc.
3, l. 244.

Beauty is a witch,
Against whose charms faith melteth into blood.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 186.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 29.

All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 268.

7
Men have no sense now but for the worthless flower of beauty.
SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3.

8
O how can beauty master the most strong!
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto iii, st. 6.

Sacharissa's beauty's wine,
Which to madness doth incline:
Such a liquor as no brain
That is mortal can sustain.

EDMUND WALLER, Amoret, l. 43.

10
Beauty with a bloodless conquest finds
A welcome sovereignty in rudest minds.
EDMUND WALLER, Upon Her Majesty's Repairing of St. Paul's, l. 41.

IX—Beauty Draws With a Single Hair

11
And from that luckless hour my tyrant fair
Has led and turned me by a single hair.

ROBERT BLAND, Anthology, p. 20. (1813)

12
No cord nor cable can so forcibly draw, or hold so fast, as love can do with a twined thread.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 2.

13
Ten teams of oxen draw much less
Than doth one hair of Helen's tress.
JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, l. 183. (1603)

14
'Tis a powerful sex; they were too strong for the first, the strongest and wisest man that was; they must needs be strong, when one hair of a woman can draw more than a hundred pair of oxen.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, letter
4. (1655)

Not ten yoke of oxen
Have the power to draw us
Like a woman's hair!

LONGFELLOW, The Saga of King Olaf. Pt. xvi,
st. 23.

15
She knows her man, and when you rant and
swear,
Can draw you to her with a single hair.
(Ne trepidare velis atque artos rodere casses.)
PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 170. (Dryden, tr.,
l. 246.)

16
Fair tresses man's imperial race ensnare,
And beauty draws us with a single hair.
POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 27. (1712)

X—Beauty: Its Permanence

17
What is lovely never dies,
But passes into other loveliness,
Star-dust, or sea-foam, flower or winged air.
T. B. ALDRICH, A Shadow of the Night.
And Beauty immortal awakes from the tomb.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Hermit. St. 6.

18
All that is beautiful shall abide,
All that is base shall die.
ROBERT BUCHANAN, Balder the Beautiful.

19
When death hath poured oblivion through my veins,
And brought me home, as all are brought,
to lie

In that vast house, common to serfs and thanes,—

I shall not die, I shall not utterly die,
For beauty born of beauty—that remains.

MADISON CAWEIN, Beauty.

20
A thing of beauty is a joy for ever:
Its loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness; but still will keep

A bower quiet for us, and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing.

JOHN KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 1.

Wherever beauty has been quick in clay
Some effluence of it lives, a spirit dwells,
Beauty that death can never take away,
Mixed with the air that shakes the flower bells.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sonnets. No. xxxv.

Beauty is momentary in the mind—
The fitful tracing of a portal;
But in the flesh it is immortal.

WALLACE STEVENS, Peter Quince at the Clavier.

Beauty remains, but we are transitory.
Ten thousand years from now will fall the
dew,
And high in heaven still hang that arch of blue;

The rose will still repeat its perfect story.

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE, Enigma.

Beauty seen is never lost.

WHITTIER, Sunset on the Bearcamp.

Beauty is the only thing that time cannot harm.

OSCAR WILDE, The English Renaissance.

Beauty abides, nor suffers mortal change,
Eternal refuge of the orphaned mind.

G. E. WOODBERRY, The North Shore Watch.

Who dreamed that beauty passes like a dream?

W. B. YEATS, The Rose of the World.

XI—Beauty: Its Impermanence

Beauty soon grows familiar to the lover,
Fades in his eye, and palls upon the sense.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4.

Beauty is all very well at first sight; but who ever looks at it when it has been in the house three days?

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iv.

Beauty is as summer-fruits, which are easy to corrupt, and cannot last.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty.

Too bright, too beautiful to last.

BRYANT, The Rivulet.

Beauty,—thou pretty plaything, death, deceit!

That steals so softly o'er the stripling's heart,
And gives it a new pulse, unknown before,
The grave discredits thee.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 337.

Beauty's of a fading nature—
Has a season, and is gone!

BURNS, Will Ye Go and Marry Katie?

Decay's effacing fingers
Have swept the lines where beauty lingers.
BYRON, The Giaour, l. 72.

Beauty's witching sway
Is now to me a star that's fallen—a dream
that's passed away.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Forewell to Love.

Beauty, sweet Love, is like the morning dew,
Whose short refresh upon the tender green
Cheers for a time, but till the sun doth show:

And straight 'tis gone, as it had never been.

SAMUEL DANIEL, To Delia.

Art quickens nature; care will make a face;
Neglected beauty perisheth apace.

ROBERT HERRICK, Neglect.

Ah, lovely boy, trust not too much to your bloom!

The white privets fall, the dark hyacinths are culled.

(O formose puer, numium ne crede colori:
Alba ligustra cadunt, vaccina nigra leguntur.)

HORACE, Eclogues, No. ii, l. 17.

Trust not too much to that enchanting face:
Beauty's a charm; but soon the charm will pass.

HORACE, Eclogues, ii, 17. (Dryden, tr.)

Brittle beauty, that nature made so frail,
Whereof the gift is small, and short the season;

Flowering to-day, to-morrow apt to fail;
Fickle treasure, abhorred of reason.

THOMAS HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY, The Frailty and Hurtfulness of Beauty.

Beauty is a fading flower.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 1.

Beauty is but a flower,
Which wrinkles will devour.

THOMAS NASHE, Summer's Last Will and Testament, l. 600.

Beauty's a flower.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 57.

She that a clinquant outside doth adore,
Dotes on a gilded statue and no more.

SIR RICHARD LOVELACE, Song.

What's beauty but a corse?

What but fair sand-dust are earth's purest
forms?

Queens' bodies are but trunks to put in worms.

MIDDLETON AND DEKKER, The Honest Whore,
Pt. i, act i, sc. 1.

Beauty has wings, and too hastily flies.

EDWARD MOORE, Song.

A frail gift is beauty, which grows less as time draws on, and is devoured by its own years. (Forma bonum fragile est, quantumque accedit ad annos, Fit minor, et spatio carpitur ipsa suo.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 113.

Trust little to treacherous beauty. (Fallaci
timide confide figuræ.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 143.

That comely face will be marred by the long years; and the wrinkles of old age will be upon your brow.

(Ista decens facies longis vitiabitur annis;
Rugaque in antiqua fronte senilis erit.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 7, l. 33.

The flowers anew returning seasons bring
But beauty faded has no second spring.

AMBROSE PHILIPS, Pastoral.

2
To bring your beauty back to you
Would be to lift so soft a thing
As only on a day of blue
Only a thrush could sing.

EDWIN QUARLES, Prelude.

3
Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;
A shining gloss that vadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud;

A brittle glass that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.
SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim, l. 169.

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,

But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxxv.

For he being dead, with him is beauty slain;
And beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1019.

4
Beauty is a short-lived reign. (Ὀλιγοχρόνιον Τυραννίδα.)

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk.
v, sec. 19.)

5
Beauty vanishes like a vapor,
Preach the men of musty morals.

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, Evanescence.

6
Beauty is not immortal. In a day
Blossom and June and rapture pass away.
ARTHUR STRINGER, A Fragile Thing is Beauty.

7
Though one were fair as roses
His beauty clouds and closes.

SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine.

8
In the body itself what is beauty save a little skin, well colored? (In corpore ipso quid forma est, nempe cuticula bene colorata?)

LUDOVICUS VIVES, Works: Introduction. Vol.
ii, p. 61. (1555)

Beauty's but skin deep.

JOHN DAVIES, *A Select Second Husband for
Sir Thomas Overburie's Wife*, vi. (1606)

And all the carnal beauty of my wife

Is but skin deep.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife. St. 16. (1614)

All the beauty in the world 'tis but skin-deep, a sunblast defaceth it.

RALPH VENNING, Orthodoxe Paradoxes, p. 41.
(1650)

Beauty of face is a frail ornament,
A passing flower, a brightness momentary—
A thing belonging only to the skin.
(La beauté du visage est un frêle ornement,
Une fleur passagère, un éclat d'un moment,
Et qui n'est attaché qu'à la simple épiderme.)
MOLIÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act iii, sc. 4,
l. 19. (1672)

Beauty's only skin deep, but ugly goes to the bone.

A. B. EVANS, Leicestershire Words, p. 101.

The saying that beauty is but skin deep is but a skin-deep saying.

HERBERT SPENCER, Personal Beauty.

XII—Beauty: Its Penalties

9
Women's beauty, like men's wit, is generally fatal to the owners.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Miscellaneous Works.
Vol. ii, p. 101.

Thou who hast The fatal gift of beauty.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 42.

10
Beauty buys no beef.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 956.

Beauty is no inheritance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 2.

11
In beauty, faults conspicuous grow;
The smallest speck is seen on snow.

JOHN GAY, The Peacock, Turkey and Goose.

Would it were I had been false, not you!

I that am nothing, not you that are all;

I, never the worse for a touch or two

On my speckled hide; not you, the pride

Of the day, my swan, that a first fleck's fall

On her wonder of white might unswan, undo!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Worst of It.

12
What ills from beauty spring.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, *The Vanity of Human
Wishes*, l. 319.

13
Rare is the union of beauty and modesty.
(Rara est adeo concordia formæ Atque pudicitia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 297.

Great is the strife between beauty and modesty.
(Lis est cum forma magna pudicitia.)

OVID, Heroides. No. xvi, l. 290.

Rarely do great beauty and great virtue dwell together. (Raro admodum forma, insignis, honestasque uno sub lare habitant.)

PETRARCH, De Remediis. Bk. ii.

1 It is worth nothing to be young without being beautiful, nor to be beautiful without being young. (Il ne sert de rien d'être jeune sans être belle, ni d'être belle sans être jeune.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 497.

2 Beauty and sadness always go together. Nature thought Beauty too rich to go forth Upon the earth without a meet alloy.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Within and Without. Pt. iv, sc. 3.

Beauty and anguish walking hand in hand
The downward slope to death.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women. St. 4.

3 Beauty, like the fair Hesperian tree
Laden with blooming gold had need the guard

Of dragon-watch with unenchanted eye,
To save her blossoms and defend her fruit.

MILTON, Comus, l. 393.

4 Trust not to the treacherous lamp; darkness and drink impair your judgment of beauty.
(Hic tu fallaci nimum ne crede luceræ:
Judicio formæ noxque merumque nocent.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 245.

When the candles are out all women are fair.

PLUTARCH, Conjugal Precepts.

5 Beauty, if you do not open your doors, takes age from lack of use. (Forma, nisi admittas, nullo exercente senescit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 53.

What is hidden is unknown; what is unknown none desires; naught is gained when a lovely face has none to see it. (Quod latet, ignotum est; ignoti nulla cupido: Fructus abest, facies cum bona teste caret.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 397.

Where none admire, 'tis useless to excel;
Where none are beaux, 'tis vain to be a belle.
Beauty, like wit, to judges should be shown;
Both most are valued where they best are known.

GEORGE LYTTELTON, Soliloquy of a Beauty in the Country, l. 11.

Beauty is Nature's coin, must not be hoarded,
But must be current, and the good thereof
Consists in mutual and partaken bliss. . . .
Beauty is Nature's brag, and must be shown
In courts, at feasts, and high solemnities,
Where most may wonder at the workmanship;
It is for homely features to keep home,
They had their name hence.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 739.

Small is the worth
Of beauty from the light retired;
Bid her come forth,

Suffer herself to be desired,
And not blush so to be admired.
EDMUND WALLER, Go, Lovely Rose.

6 Beauty's elixir vitæ, praise.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House:
Bk. ii, Prologue.

7 Beauty and wisdom are rarely conjoined.
(Raram fecit mixturam cum sapientia forma.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 94, l. 2.

O that such beauty should be so brainless! (O quanta species cerebrum non habet!)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 7, l. 2.

Beauty and folly are old companions.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

8 Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 30.

9 She never yet was foolish that was fair,
For even her folly helped her to an heir.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 137.

10 No hollow wiles, nor honeyed smiles,
Of ladies fair I follow;

For beauty sweet still hides deceit,
'Tis hollow, hollow, hollow.

UNKNOWN, Deceitful Beauty. (McGUFFEY,
Third Reader, p. 84.)

11 Let it be given to the more beautiful. (Detur pulchriori.)

Inscription on the Apple of Discord.

XIII—Beauty in Women

12 Not more the rose, the queen of flowers,
Outblushes all the bloom of bowers,
Than she unrivall'd grace discloses,
The sweetest rose, where all are roses.

ANACREON, Odes. No. 66. (Moore, tr.)

A lovely being, scarcely formed or moulded,
A rose with all its sweetest leaves yet folded.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 43.

And she was fair as is the rose in May.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women:
Cleopatra, l. 34.

Proserpine gathering flowers
Herself a fairer flower.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 269.

Of Nature's gifts thou may'st with lilies boast
And with the half-blown rose.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 53.

She wears a rose in her hair,
At the twilight's dreamy close:
Her face is fair,—how fair
Under the rose!

R. H. STODDARD, Under the Rose.

13 No gems, no gold she needs to wear;
She shines intrinsically fair.

THOMAS BEDINGFIELD, The Lover's Choice.

1 So fair,
She takes the breath of men away
Who gaze upon her unaware.

E. B. BROWNING, Bianca Among the Nightingales. St. 12.

Beauty's chiefest maid of honour,
You may break Lent with looking on her.

JOHN CLEVELAND, To the State of Love.

Beauty enough to make a world to dote.

JAMES I OF SCOTLAND, The King's Quair. St. 28.

We cannot choose; our faces madden men!
STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Paolo and Francesca. Act
ii, sc. 1.

2 Fair, as the first that fell of womankind.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 6.

Her glossy hair was cluster'd o'er a brow
Bright with intelligence, and fair and smooth;
Her eyebrow's shape was like the ærial bow,
Her cheek all purple with the beam of youth,
Mounting, at times, to a transparent glow,
As if her veins ran lightning.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 61.

And beauteous, even where beauties most abound.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 2.

She was a form of life and light
That, seen, became a part of sight;
And rose, where'er I turned mine eye,
The Morning-star of Memory!

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1127.

3 She walks in beauty, like the night
Of cloudless climes and starry skies;
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes:
Thus mellow'd to that tender light
Which heaven to gaudy day denies.

BYRON, She Walks in Beauty.

4 Exceeding fair she was not; and yet fair
In that she never studied to be fairer Than Nature made her; beauty cost her nothing,

Her virtues were so rare.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act i, sc. 1.

She is not fair to outward view

As many maidens be;

Her loveliness I never knew

Until she smiled on me:

Oh! then I saw her eye was bright,

A well of love, a spring of light. . . .

Her very frowns are fairer far

Than smiles of other maidens are.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

She was not fair,
Nor beautiful;—those words express her not.
But, oh, her looks had something excellent,
That wants a name!

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. iv.

5 A beautiful woman is a practical poet, taming her savage mate, planting tenderness, hope, and eloquence in all whom she approaches.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

6 Beauty to no complexion is confined,

Is of all colours, and by none defined.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Progress of Beauty, l. 77.

7 Beauty should be kind, as well as charm.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, To Myra.

Beauty and beauteous words should go together.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Forerunners.

8 Beauty's the thing that counts

In women; red lips

And black eyes are better than brains.

MARY J. ELMENDORF, Beauty's the Thing.

9 And matchless Ganymede, divinely ' fair.
(Ἀντίθεος Γανυμήδης, ὃς δὴ κάλλιστος γένετο θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 232. (Pope, tr., l. 278.)

She fair, divinely fair, fit love for gods.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 489.

At length I saw a lady within call,
Still than chisell'd marble, standing there;
A daughter of the gods, divinely tall
And most divinely fair.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women. St. 22.

10 Beautiful in form and feature,

Lovely as the day,

Can there be so fair a creature

Formed of common clay?

LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. i.

11 What is your sex's earliest, latest care,
Your heart's supreme ambition? To be fair.

GEORGE LYTTELTON, Advice to a Lady.

Every woman would rather be beautiful than good. (Jedes Weib will lieber schön als fromm sein.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

12 The most beautiful object in the world, it will be allowed, is a beautiful woman.

MACAULAY, Criticisms on Italian Writers:
Dante.

13 O thou art fairer than the evening air,
Clad in the beauty of a thousand stars.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Faustus. Act v, sc. 2.

14 But the loveliest things of beauty God ever has showed to me

Are her voice, and her hair, and eyes, and the dear red curve of her lips.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Beauty.

15 She's all my fancy painted her;

She's lovely, she's divine.

WILLIAM MEE, Alice Gray.

Whate'er is lovely or divine.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: The Author's Abstract.

<sup>1</sup> Hung over her enamour'd, and beheld
Beauty, which, whether waking or asleep,
Shot forth peculiar graces.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 13.

Grace was in all her steps, heav'n in her eye,
In every gesture dignity and love.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 488.

<sup>2</sup> To weave a garland for the rose,
And think thus crown'd 'twould lovelier
be,

Were far less vain than to suppose
That silks and gems add grace to thee.

THOMAS MOORE, Songs from the Greek Anthology: To Weave a Garland.

<sup>3</sup> Even honest maids love to hear their charms extolled; even to the chaste their beauty is a care and a delight. (Delectant etiam castas præconia formæ; Virginibus curæ grataque forma sua est.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 623.

Dear to the heart of girls is their own beauty.
(Virginibus cordi grataque forma sua est.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 32.

<sup>4</sup> Here is all the beauty of the world. (Hæc habet quicquid in orbe fuit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 56.

All the eminent and canonised beauties,
By truth recorded, or by poets feigned.

MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act iv, sc. 1.

<sup>5</sup> Outward beauty is not enough. . . . Words, wit, play, sweet talk and laughter, surpass the work of too simple nature. For all device of art seasons beauty.

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 89.

The beauty that addresses itself to the eyes is only the spell of the moment; the eye of the body is not always that of the soul.

GEORGE SAND, Handsome Lawrence. Ch. 1.

Beauty, madam, pleases the eyes only; sweetness of disposition charms the soul. (La beauté, madame, Ne plaît qu'aux yeux; la douceur charme l'âme.)

VOLTAIRE, Nanine. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>6</sup> Helen, thy beauty is to me
Like those Nicæan barks of yore,
That gently, o'er a perfumed sea,
The weary, wayworn wanderer bore
To his own native shore.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To Helen.

On desperate seas long wont to roam,
Thy hyacinth hair, thy classic face,
Thy naiad airs have brought me home
To the glory that was Greece
And the grandeur that was Rome.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To Helen.

<sup>7</sup> God made my lady lovely to behold.

D. G. ROSSETTI, How My Songs of Her Began.

<sup>8</sup> Is she not more than painting can express,
Or youthful poets fancy when they love?
NICHOLAS ROWE, Fair Penitent. Act iii, sc. 1.

<sup>9</sup> And ne'er did Grecian chisel trace
A Nymph, a Naiad, or a Grace
Of finer form or lovelier face. . . .
A foot more light, a step more true,
Ne'er from the heath-flower dash'd the dew.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 18.

There was a soft and pensive grace,
A cast of thought upon her face,
That suited well the forehead high,
The eyelash dark, and downcast eye.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iv, st. 5.

<sup>10</sup> For her own person,
It beggar'd all description.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 202.

Is she not passing fair?

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iv, sc. 4, l. 153.

The most peerless piece of earth, I think,
That e'er the sun shone bright on.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act v, sc. 1, l. 94.

<sup>11</sup> O, she is rich in beauty, only poor,
That when she dies with beauty dies her store.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1, l.
221.

O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright!

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night

Like a rich jewel in an Ethiope's ear:

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5,
l. 46.

Her beauty makes

This vault a feasting presence full of light.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3,
l. 85.

<sup>12</sup> If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, "This poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces."

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xvii.

<sup>13</sup> It is one of the mysterious ways of Allah to make women troublesome when he makes them beautiful.

BERNARD SHAW, *The Adventures of the Black
Girl in Her Search for God*.

<sup>14</sup> A lovely Lady garmented in light
From her own beauty.

SHELLEY, The Witch of Atlas. St. 5.

For she was beautiful: her beauty made
The bright world dim, and everything beside Seemed like the fleeting image of a shade.

SHELLEY, The Witch of Atlas. St. 12.

1 As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 2.

2 Her face so fair as flesh it seemed not,
But heavenly portrait of bright angels' hue,
Clear as the sky, withouten blame or blot,
Through goodly mixture of complexion's dew;
And in her cheeks the vermeil red did shew
Like roses in a bed of lilies shed,
The which ambrosial odours from them threw,
And gazers' sense with double pleasure fed,
Able to heal the sick, and to revive the dead.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto iii, st. 22.

3 But there has never been a woman born
Who was so beautiful, not one so beautiful
Of all the women born.

JAMES STEPHENS, Deirdre.

4 Thy cradled brows and loveliest loving lips,
The floral hair, the little lightening eyes,

The first step is as good as half over.

JOHN CLARKE, Par. Anglo-Latina, 171. (1639)

The hardest step is that over the threshold.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs. No. 7. (1659)

It is only the first step that costs. (Il n'y a que le premier pas que coûte.)

MADAME DU DEFFAND, Letter to Horace Walpole, 6 June, 1767; also Letter to d'Alembert, 7 July, 1763. Voltaire tells the story in a note to the first canto of La Pucelle: The Cardinal de Polignac was relating the history of St. Denis, who, it will be remembered, after being decapitated on Montmartre, is said to have picked up his head and carried it two leagues to the spot north of Paris where the cathedral dedicated to him now stands, and added that it was only at first that Denis found the journey difficult, to which Madame du Deffand replied, "Je le crois bien, il n'y a dans de telles affaires que le premier pas que coûte."

It is only the first obstacle which counts to conquer modesty. (Il n'y a que le premier obstacle qui coûte à vaincre la pudeur.)

Il faut partir à point.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 10.

Resist beginnings. (Principiis obsta.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 91.

We shut our eyes to the beginnings of evil because they are small, and in this weakness lies the germ of our defeat. Principiis obsta: this maxim closely followed would preserve us from almost all our misfortunes.

AMIEL, Journal, 23 Feb., 1870.

We must be watchful, especially in the beginning of temptation, because then the enemy is more easily overcome, if he is not suffered to come in at all at the door of the soul, but is kept out and resisted at his first knock. Whence a certain man said, "Withstand the beginning: after remedies come too late."

Whatever begins, also ends. (Quidquid cœpit, et desinit.)

SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Sec. 1.

18 The end may be inferred from the beginning; as in the common saying, I cannot expect a toga prætexta when I see the commencement of the web black; or the beginning may be argued from the end.

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. v, ch. 10, sec. 71.

What begins with tow won't end with silk.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

19 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord.

New Testament: Revelation, i, 8.

You, my origin and ender.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 222.

20 That is the true beginning of our end.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 111.

It seems to me, sire, to be the beginning of the end.

TALLEYRAND, to Napoleon, after the battle of Leipsig. (LOCKHART, Life of Napoleon, ii, 205.) Fournier asserts, on the authority of Talleyrand's brother, that Talleyrand was an assiduous reader of a collection of anecdotes in twenty-one volumes called L'Improvisateur Français, and that he quickly adopted any bon mot which he found wandering about in search of a parent. "C'est le commencement de la fin" seems to have been one of these.

21 Keen in commencing, negligent in concluding. (Acribus initiis, incurioso fine.)

I—Behavior: Definitions

- 3
Conduct is three-fourths of our life and its largest concern.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma. Ch. 1.
- 4
The sum of behaviour is to retain a man's own dignity, without intruding upon the liberty of others.
FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 3.
- 5
Behaviour seemeth to me as a garment of the mind, and to have the conditions of a garment. For it ought to be made in fashion; it ought not to be too curious; it ought to be shaped so as to set forth any good making of the mind, and hide any deformity; and above all, it ought not to be too strait, or restrained for exercise or motion.
FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 3.
- Men's behaviour should be like their apparel, not too strait, or point device, but free for exercise or motion.
BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies and Respects.
- 6
For behaviour, men learn it, as they take diseases, one of another.
BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.
- 7
Put himself upon his good behaviour.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 47.
- 8
As the occasion, so the behavior. (Cual el Tiempo, tal el tiento.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 50.
- 9
"And how did little Tim behave?" asked Mrs. Cratchit. . . "As good as gold," said Bob.
DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 3.

- 10
Gentle Jane was as good as gold,
She always did as she was told.
She never spoke when her mouth was full,
Or caught blue-bottles their legs to pull.
W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act ii.
- 11
The laws of behavior yield to the energy of the individual.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.
A beautiful form is better than a beautiful face; a beautiful behavior is better than a beautiful form: . . . it is the finest of the fine arts.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.
- 12
What is natural is never disgraceful. (Ὅτι αἰσχρὸν οὐδὲν τῶν ἀναγκάων βροτοῖς.)
EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 863.
Nothing so much prevents one's being natural as the desire to appear so. (Rien n'empêche tant d'être naturel que l'envie de le paraître.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 431.
- 13
Behavior is a mirror in which every one shows his image. (Das Betragen ist ein Spiegel in welchem jeder sein Bild zeigt.)
GOETHE, Die Wahlverwandtschaften (Elective Affinities). Bk. ii, ch. 5.
- 14
I am never to act otherwise than so that I could also will that my maxim should become a universal law. (Ich soll niemals anders verfahren, als so, dass ich auch wollen könne, meine Maxime solle ein allgemeines Gesetz werden.)
KANT, Grundlegung zur Metaphysic der Sitten. Abschnitt 1. This is Kant's "Categorical Imperative," as translated by T. K. Abbott (Kant's Theory of Ethics, p. 18). It has been more freely rendered, "Make the maxim of thy conduct such that it might become a universal law."
- 15
Acting without design, occupying oneself without making a business of it, finding the great in what is small and the many in the few, repaying injury with kindness, effecting difficult things while they are easy, and managing great things in their beginnings: this is the method of Tao.
LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. (Old, tr.) The religion called Taoism claims Lao-tsze as its founder.
- 16
What a man does, not what he feels, thinks, or believes, is the universal yardstick of behavior.
BENJAMIN C. LEEMING, Imagination.
- 17
Nothing is more adroit than irreproachable conduct.
MADAME DE MAINTENON, Maxims. The maxim which governed her life.

I see the right, and I approve it, too;
Condemn the wrong, and yet the wrong
pursue.

(Video meliora proboque, Deteriora sequor.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vii, l. 20. (Tate, tr.)

I know and love the good, yet, ah! the worst pursue.

PETRARCH, To Laura in Life. Sonnet ccxv.

For the good that I would, I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.

New Testament: Romans, vii, 19.

Every one of us, whatever our speculative opinions, knows better than he practices, and recognizes a better law than he obeys.

FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: On Progress. Pt. ii.

Bad conduct soils the finest ornament more than filth. (Pulchrum ornatum turpes mores pejus cæno collinunt.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus. Act v, sc. 2, l. 53.

3 Behaviour, what wert thou
Till this madman show'd thee?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc.
2, l. 337.

Unweighed behaviour.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 23.

4
There is a fair behaviour in thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 2, l. 47.

Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 98.

5
Would to God we had behaved ourselves well in this world, even for one day.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
i, ch. 23, sec. 6.

6
As a rule, there is no surer way to the dislike of men than to behave well where they have behaved badly.

LEW WALLACE, Ben Hur. Bk. iv, ch. 9.

7
During good behaviour. (Quando se bene gesserit.)

UNKNOWN, Statutes 12 and 13, William III, ii, 3.

II—Behavior: Admonitions

8
Dread God, do law, love truth and worthiness.

CHAUCER, Lack of Steadfastness, l. 27.

9
Make yourself necessary to somebody. Do not make life hard to any.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

10
Hast thou named all the birds without a gun?
Loved the wood-rose and left it on its stalk?
At rich men's tables eaten bread and pulse?

Unarmed, faced danger with a heart of trust?
And loved so well a high behavior,
In man or maid, that thou from speech refrained,

Nobility more nobly to repay?

O, be my friend, and teach me to be thine!

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Forbearance.

Be civil to all; sociable to many; familiar with few; friend to one; enemy to none.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1756.

Call no man foe, but never love a stranger.

Build up no plan, nor any star pursue.

Go forth with crowds, in loneliness is danger.

Thus nothing Fate can send,

And nothing Fate can do

Shall pierce your peace, my friend.

STELLA BENSON, This is the End.

12
Four precepts: to break off customs; to shake off spirits ill-disposed; to meditate on youth;
to do nothing against one's genius.

HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 25 Oct., 1836.

Walk groundly, talk profoundly, drink roundly,
sleep soundly.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs. No. 446.

Fear less, hope more; eat less, chew more; whine less, breathe more; talk less, say more; hate less,
love more; and all good things are yours.

LORD FISHER. (Quoted in Records, 25 Nov., 1919.)

13
Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak,
slow to wrath.

New Testament: James, i, 19.

14
Let what will be said or done, preserve your sang-froid immovable, and to every obstacle oppose patience, perseverance and soothing language.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. viii, p. 316.

15
If not seemly, do it not; if not true, say it not.
(Εἰ μὴ καθήκει, μὴ πράξεις· εἰ μὴ ἀληθές ἐστι, μὴ εἰπῃς.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. xii, sec. 17.

If thou wouldst not be known to do anything,
never do it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

Never suffer a thought to be harbored in your mind which you would not avow openly. When tempted to do anything in secret, ask yourself if you would do it in public. If you would not, be sure it is wrong.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 241.

16
Be not careless in deeds, nor confused in words, nor rambling in thought.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. viii, sec.
51.

Blot out vain pomp; check impulse; quench appetite; keep reason under its own control.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 7.

1 My code of life and conduct is simply this: work hard; play to the allowable limit; disregard equally the good and bad opinion of others; never do a friend a dirty trick; . . . never grow indignant over anything; . . . live the moment to the utmost of its possibilities, . . . and be satisfied with life always, but never with oneself.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 14.

2 Do what you like. (Fais ce que voudras.)
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 57. The rule of life of the Thelemites.

3 Neither crow nor croak.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

4 Behave yoursel' before folk;
Whate'er ye do, when out o' view,
Be cautious aye before folk.
ALEXANDER RODGER, Behave Yourself Before Folk.

5 Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy
Rather in power than use.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 1, l. 73.

Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee:

Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not:
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 443.

Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 99.

6 Live pure, speak true, right wrong, follow the King—

Else, wherefore born?

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 117.

7 Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true:
To think without confusion clearly;
To love his fellow-men sincerely;
To act from honest motives purely;
To trust in God and Heaven securely.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Four Things.

8 Then bless thy secret growth, nor catch
A noise, but thrive unseen and dumb;
Keep clean, be as fruit, earn life, and watch
Till the white-wing'd reapers come.

HENRY VAUGHAN, The Seed Growing Secretly.

Heed how thou livest. Do no act by day
Which from the night shall drive thy peace away.

WHITTIER, Conduct.

9 Do all the good you can,
In all the ways you can,
In all the places you can,
At all the times you can,
To all the people you can,
As long as ever you can.

JOHN WESLEY, Rules of Conduct. Perhaps an expansion of a proverbial stanza sometimes used on tombstones. Adopted by the Rev. Dwight L. Moody as his motto.

BELGIUM

10 After years of bondage, the Belgian, rising from the tomb, has reconquered by his courage, his name, his rights and his flag; and your hand, kingly and proud, people hereafter unconquerable, writes upon your flag, King, Law, and Liberty.

(Après des siècles d'esclavage,
Le Belge sortant du tombeau,
A reconquis par son courage,
Son nom, ses droits et son drapeau;
Et ta main, souveraine et fière,
Peuple désormais indompté,
Grava sur ta vieille bannière
Le Roi, la loi, la liberté.)

LOUIS DECHEZ, La Brabançonne. The Belgian national anthem, written during the revolution of 1830.

11 And now I have gained the cockpit of the Western world, and academy of arms for many years.

JAMES HOWELL, Vocall Forest. (c. 1640) Belgium has been called the cockpit of Europe because it has been the scene of so many wars.

12 The little white ewe lamb of Europe.

FATHER VINCENT McNABB, Open Letter to the Kaiser, August, 1914.

13 I dislike Belgium and think the Belgians, on the whole, the most contemptible people in Europe.

For, dear me, why abandon a belief
Merely because it ceases to be true?
Cling to it long enough, and not a doubt
It will turn true again, for so it goes.
Most of the change we think we see in life
Is due to truths being in and out of favour.
E. A. ROBINSON, The Black Cottage.

BELL

- 19
They tune like bells, and want but hanging.
THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 192. (1630)
They agree like bells, they want nothing but hanging.
GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, 83. (1683)
- 20
And all went merry as a marriage bell.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 21.
Hear the mellow wedding bells, Golden bells!
What a world of happiness their harmony foretells.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Bells.
- 21
And let see which of you shall bear the bell
To speak of love a-right!
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 198. (1379)

So vices brag, but virtue bears the bell.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Glasse of Government.
Act iii, sc. 6. (1575)

<sup>1</sup>
He was a rationalist, but he had to confess that he liked the ringing of church bells.

ANTON CHEKHOV, Notebook.

The cheerful Sabbath bells, wherever heard,
Strike pleasant on the sense, most like the voice
Of one, who from the far-off hills proclaims Tidings of good to Zion.

CHARLES LAMB, The Sabbath Bells.

And the Sabbath bell,
That over wood and wild and mountain dell
Wanders so far, chasing all thoughts unholy
With sounds most musical, most melancholy.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 517.

<sup>2</sup>
Each matin bell, the Baron saith,
Knells us back to a world of death.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. ii, st. 1.

The bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 62.

Hark, how chimes the passing bell!
There's no music to a knell.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Passing Bell.

They went and told the sexton, and
The sexton toll'd the bell.

THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Sally Brown.

<sup>3</sup>
How soft the music of those village bells,
Falling at intervals upon the ear
In cadence sweet, now dying all away,
Now pealing loud again, and louder still,
Clear and sonorous, as the gale comes on!
With easy force it opens all the cells
Where Mem'ry slept.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 6.

Dear bells! how sweet the sounds of village bells
When on the undulating air they swim!
Now loud as welcomes! faint, now, as farewells!
And trembling all about the breezy dells
As flutter'd by the wings of Cherubim.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 159.

<sup>4</sup>
But the sound of the church-going bell
These valleys and rocks never heard;
Ne'er sigh'd at the sound of a knell,
Or smil'd when a Sabbath appear'd.

COWPER, Alexander Selkirk.

Bell! thou soundest merrily,
When the bridal party

To the church doth hie!

Bell! thou soundest solemnly,
When, on Sabbath morning,
Fields deserted lie!

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 3. Quoted as by a Swiss poet.

<sup>5</sup>
The vesper bell from far,
That seems to mourn for the expiring day.
DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto viii, l. 6. (Cary, tr.)

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*.

Your voices break and falter in the darkness,— Break, falter, and are still.

BRET HARTE, The Angelus.

And she breathed the husky whisper:—

"Curfew must not ring to-night."

ROSE HARTWICK THORPE, Curfew Must Not Ring To-night.

<sup>6</sup>
If you love not the noise of bells, why do you pull the ropes?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2767.

A crackt bell can never sound well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6358.

<sup>7</sup>
Bells call others, but themselves enter not into the Church.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The Bell calls others to Church, but itself never minds the Sermon.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1754.

<sup>8</sup>
While the steeples are loud in their joy
To the tune of the bell's ring-a-ding,
Let us chime in a peal, one and all,
For we all should be able to sing

Hullahbaloo!

THOMAS HOOD, A Song for the Million.

<sup>9</sup>
Play uppe, play uppe, O Boston bells!
Ply all your changes, all your swells,
Play uppe "The Brides of Enderby."

JEAN INGELOW, The High Tide on the Coast of Lincolnshire. St. 1.

<sup>10</sup>
Bells, the music bordering nearest heaven.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: New Year's Eve.

For bells are Music's laughter.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Marriage.

<sup>11</sup>
For bells are the voice of the church;
They have tones that touch and search
The hearts of young and old.

LONGFELLOW, The Bells of San Blas. St. 3.

These bells have been anointed.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend: Prologue.

He heard the convent bell
Suddenly in the silence ringing.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iii.

<sup>12</sup>
The bells themselves are the best of preachers,

Their brazen lips are learned teachers,
From their pulpits of stone, in the upper air,
Sounding aloft, without crack or flaw,
Shriller than trumpets under the Law.
Now a sermon and now a prayer.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iii.

<sup>13</sup>
The bells of Shandon, That sound so grand on

The pleasant waters of the river Lee.

FRANCIS SYLVESTER MAHONY, The Bells of Shandon.

1 Those evening bells! those evening bells!
How many a tale their music tells!
Of youth, and home, and that sweet time
When last I heard their soothing chime.

THOMAS MOORE, Those Evening Bells.

2 The bell never rings of itself; unless some one swings it, it is dumb. (Nunquam ædepol temere tinnit tintinnabulum; Nisi quis illud tractat aut movet, mutum est.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 162.

3 Keeping time, time, time
In a sort of Runic rhyme

To the tintinnabulation that so musically wells

From the bells, bells, bells.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Bells.

4 And now the chapel's silver bell you hear,
That summons you to all the pride of prayer.
Light quirks of music, broken and uneven,
Make the soul dance upon a jig to Heav'n.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iv, l. 141.

5 And this be the vocation fit,
For which the founder fashioned it:
High, high above earth's life, earth's labor,
E'en to heaven's blue vault to soar,
To hover as the thunder's neighbor,
The very firmament explore;
To be a voice as from above,
Like yonder stars so bright and clear,
And praise their Maker as they move,
And usher in the circling year.

SCHILLER, Song of the Bell. (Bowring, tr.)

I call the living; I mourn the dead; I break the lightning. (Vivos voco; mortuos plango; fulgura frango.)

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on the great bell of Schaffhausen minster. Used by Schiller as the motto of his poem, The Bell.

Funera plango, fulgura frango, sabbato pango;
Excito lentos, dissipio ventos, paco cruentos.

Another form of the above, meaning, "I toll for funerals, I break the lightning, I announce the Sabbath; I wake the lazy, I dissipate the winds, I pacify the quarrelsome."

6 Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 166.

7 Bid the merry bells ring to thine ear.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 112.

8 Silence that dreadful bell: it frights the isle
From her propriety.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 175.

9 They may ring their bells now; before long they will be wringing their hands.

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, when the bells were rung in London on the declaration of war against Spain, in 1739. (COXE, Life of Walpole, i, 579.)

10 The bells of Rylston seemed to say,
While she sate listening in the shade,
With vocal music, "God us ayde;"
And all the hills were glad to bear
Their part in this effectual prayer.

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone.
Canto vii, l. 1772.

BELLY

11 Every investigation which is guided by the principles of nature fixes its ultimate aim upon gratifying the stomach.

ATHENÆUS, Deipnosophists. Bk. vii, ch. 2.

"Little Mary."

J. M. BARRIE. Title of play. A euphemism for the stomach.

12 It is a difficult matter, my fellow citizens, to argue with the belly, since it has no ears.
(Χαλεπὸν μὲν ἐστὶν, ὧ πολλῖται, πρὸς γαστέρα λέγειν ὅτα οὐκ ἔχουσιν.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. viii, sec. 1.)

The hungry belly has no ears. (La ventre affamé n'a point d'oreilles.)

ogy*. Bk. vii, No. 156.)

15 A gross belly does not produce a refined mind.
(Παχέια γαστήρ λεπτόν οὐ τίκτει νόον.)

ST. JEROME, quoting an old Greek proverb.

The vilest of beasts is the belly. (Ὡς κάκιστον θηρίον ἐστὶν ἡ γαστήρ.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb.

16 He who does not mind his belly will hardly mind anything else.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

17 What comedy, what actor is better than a disappointed belly? (Quæ comœdia, mimus Quis melior plorante gula?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 157.

1 It once happened that all the other members of a man mutinied against the stomach, which they accused as the only idle, uncontributing part of the whole body, while the rest were put to hardships and expense of much labor to supply and minister to its appetites.

MENENNIUS AGRIPPA, recounting an old fable.
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Coriolanus.)

2 What avails it us to have our bellies full of meat if it be not digested?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24.

4 Do not mourn the dead with the belly. (Οὐ γὰρ ἔοικεν γαστέρι πένθῃσαι νεκρόν.)

PALLADAS, quoting Homer. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 47.)

5 It's the tripes that carry the feet, not the feet the tripes. (Tripas llevan piés, que no piés á tripas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34.

The belly carries the legs, and not the legs the belly.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34.

Let the guts be full, for it's they that carry the legs.

6 I can reason down or deny everything except this perpetual belly: feed he must and will, and I cannot make him respectable.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

7 A full belly makes a dull brain.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

A belly full of gluttony will never study willingly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6115.

A full belly neither fights nor flies well.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

8 Your belly will never let your back be warm.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6043.

The belly robs the back.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 33. (1659)

If it were not for the belly, the back might wear gold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2690.

9 The eye is bigger than the belly.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

10 May God look with hatred on the belly and its food; it is through them that chastity breaks down.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 57.)

When the belly is full the mind is amongst the maids.

UNKNOWN. MS. Proverbs, c. 1645.

A full Belly is the Mother of all Evil.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1744.

11 Whose God is their belly.

New Testament: Philippians, iii, 19.

Such as for their bellies' sake
Creep and intrude, and climb into the fold.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 114.

Men given up to the belly. (Mortales dediti ventri.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. ii, sec. 8.

12 I say, whatever you maintain
Of Alma in the heart or brain,
The plainest man alive may tell ye
Her seat of empire is the belly.
From hence she sends out those supplies
Which make us either stout or wise;
The strength of every other member
Is founded on your belly-timer.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 196.

13 The belly is not filled with fair words.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 62.

Promises don't fill the belly.

7 He who confers a benefit on any one loves him better than he is beloved.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, sec. 7. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, ii, 8.

8 If you confer a benefit, never remember it; if you receive one, never forget it. (Tu bene si quid facias, nec meminisse fas est; Quæ bene facta accipias, perpetuo memento.)

CHILON. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 39.)

Let him who has conferred the benefit conceal it; let him who has accepted it disclose it. (Qui dedit beneficium taceat; narret, qui accipit.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, sec. 11.

When befriended, remember it; when you befriend, forget it.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1740.

9 He that has once done you a kindness will be more ready to do you another, than he whom you yourself have obliged.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1. Quoted as a maxim.

10 Write injuries in dust, benefits in marble.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747. See also under INJURIES.

11 Benefits please like flowers while they are fresh.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

12 A chief source for evils among men are benefits, excessive benefits. (Ἀρχὴ μεγίστη τῶν ἐν ἀνθρώποις κακῶν ἀγαθὰ, τὰ λίαν ἀγαθὰ.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 724.

13 That man is worthless who knows how to receive a benefit, but not how to return one. (Nam improbus est homo qui beneficium scit accipere et reddere nescit.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 762. (Act v, sc. 1.)

14 To accept a benefit is to sell one's freedom. (Beneficium accipere, libertatem est vendere.)

There is a hook in every benefit, that sticks in his jaws that takes that benefit, and draws him whither the benefactor will.

JOHN DONNE, Sermons, p. 550.

15 When you confer a benefit on a worthy man you oblige all men. (Beneficium dignis ubi des, omnes obliges.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 88.

16 A benefit is a good office, done with intention and judgment; . . . it is a voluntary and benevolent action that delights the giver, in the comfort it brings to the receiver.

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. i, sec. 1.

A benefit is estimated according to the mind of the doer. . . . It consists not in what is done, but in what is intended. (Eodem animo beneficium debetur, quo datur . . . Beneficium non in eo quod fit aut datur consistit, sed in ipso dantis aut facientis animo.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. i, sec. 4.

17 Benefits are only so far acceptable as they seem capable of being requited; beyond that point, they excite hatred instead of gratitude. (Beneficia eo usque læta sunt, dum videntur exsolvi posse: ubi multum antevenere, pro gratia odium redditur.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 18.

Benefits, says Tacitus through the mouth of Montaigne, are only agreeable as long as one can repay them.

ANDRÉ GIDE, The Counterfeiters. Pt. ii, ch. 3.

Benefits too great
To be repaid, sit heavy on the soul,
As unrequited wrongs.

THOMAS GRAY, Agrippina. Act i, sc. 1. (1742)

Every one takes pleasure in returning small obligations; many go so far as to acknowledge moderate ones; but there is hardly any one who does not repay great ones with ingratitude.

BIBLE, THE

I—Bible: Praise

<sup>1</sup> After the sacred volumes of God and the Scriptures, study, in the second place, that great volume of the works and creatures of God, strenuously, and before all books, which ought to be only regarded as commentaries.

FRANCIS BACON, Letters: To Trinity College, Cambridge.

<sup>2</sup> Sir John Rainsford besought the queen [Elizabeth] aloud "That four prisoners, among the rest, might likewise have their liberty." The queen asked who they were. And he said, "Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, who had long been imprisoned in the Latin tongue; and now he desired that they might go abroad among the people in English."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms.

The sacred book no longer suffers wrong,
Bound in the fetters of an unknown tongue,
But speaks with plainness art could never mend,
What simplest minds can soonest comprehend.
COWPER, Hope, l. 449.

What sages would have died to learn,
Now taught by cottage dames.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Catechism.

It was a crime in a child to read by the bedside of a sick parent one of those beautiful collects which had soothed the griefs of forty generations of Christians.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 2.

He who guides the plough, or wields the crook,
With understanding spirit now may look
Upon her records, listen to her song.

WORDSWORTH, Translation of the Bible.

<sup>3</sup> The sire turns o'er, wi' patriarchal grace,
The big ha' Bible, ance his father's pride.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night. St. 12.

<sup>4</sup> Holy Bible, book divine,
Precious treasure, thou art mine;
Mine to teach me whence I came,
Mine to teach me what I am.

JOHN BURTON, Holy Bible, Book Divine.

<sup>5</sup> In the poorest cottage are Books: is one Book, wherein for several thousands of years
the spirit of man has found light, and nourishment, and an interpreting response to whatever is Deepest in him.

CARLYLE, Essays: Corn-Law Rhymes.

<sup>6</sup> What built St. Paul's Cathedral? Look at the heart of the matter, it was that divine Hebrew Book,—the word partly of the man Moses, an outlaw tending his Midianitish herds, four thousand years ago, in the wildernesses of Sinai! It is the strangest of things, yet nothing is truer.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

<sup>7</sup> A glory gilds the sacred page,
Majestic like the sun,
It gives a light to ev'ry age,
It gives, but borrows none.

COWPER, Olney Hymns. No. 30.

<sup>8</sup> Just knows, and knows no more, her Bible true, . . .

And in that charter reads, with sparkling eyes,
Her title to a treasure in the skies.

COWPER, Truth, l. 327.

<sup>9</sup> Lo, here a little volume, but great book!
(Fear it not, sweet, It is no hypocrite),
Much larger in itself than in its look.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Prayer Prefixed to a Little Prayer-Book, l. 1.

It is an armoury of light;
Let constant use but keep it bright,
You'll find it yields
To holy hands and humble hearts,
More swords and shields
Than sin hath snares, or hell hath darts.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Prayer Prefixed to a Little Prayer-Book, l. 24.

<sup>10</sup> The Scriptures, though not everywhere
Free from corruption, or entire, or clear,
Are uncorrupt, sufficient, clear, entire
In all things which our needful faith require.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 297.

<sup>11</sup> The Bible is like an old Cremona; it has been played upon by the devotion of thousands of years until every word and particle is public and tunable.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

<sup>12</sup> Out from the heart of nature rolled
The burdens of the Bible old.

EMERSON, The Problem.

The word unto the prophet spoken
Was writ on tables yet unbroken:
The word by seers or sibyls told,
In groves of oak, or fanes of gold,
Still floats upon the morning wind,
Still whispers to the willing mind.

EMERSON, The Problem.

F. W. FABER, Hymn: Hark, Hark, My Soul!

<sup>14</sup> It is a plain old book, modest as nature itself, and as simple, too; a book of an unpretending work-day appearance, like the sun that warms or the bread that nourishes us. . . . And the name of this book is simply—the Bible.

HEINE, Scintillations: Religion.

'Tis a home where daily bread
For the body is provided,
But the soul is never fed.

C. D. MEIGS, Home Without a Bible.

7
The history of every individual man should be a Bible.

NOVALIS, Christianity or Europe. (Carlyle, tr.)

8
But the word of the Lord endureth for ever.
New Testament: I Peter, i, 25.

Most wondrous book! bright candle of the Lord!
Star of Eternity! The only star
By which the bark of man could navigate
The sea of life, and gain the coast of bliss Securely.

POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. ii, l. 270.

9
Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxix, 105.

10
Within that awful volume lies
The mystery of mysteries!
Happiest they of human race,
To whom God has granted grace
To read, to fear, to hope, to pray,
To lift the latch and force the way;
And better had they ne'er been born,

Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.
SCOTT, The Monastery. Bk. i, ch. 12.

11
The stars, that in their courses roll,
Have much instruction given;
But thy good Word informs my soul
How I may climb to heaven.
ISAAC WATTS, The Excellency of the Bible.

How glad the heathens would have been,
That worship idols, wood and stone,
If they the book of God had seen,
Or Jesus and his gospel known!
ISAAC WATTS, Praise for the Gospel.

Dear Lord, this Book of thine
Informs me where to go,
For grace to pardon all my sin,
And make me holy too.
ISAAC WATTS, Praise to God for Learning to Read.

12
The Bible is a book of faith, and a book of doctrine, and a book of morals, and a book of religion, of special revelation from God; but it is also a book which teaches man his own individual responsibility, his own dignity, and his equality with his fellow-man.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, at Bunker Hill Monument, 17 June, 1843.

We search the world for truth; we cull
The good, the pure, the beautiful,
From graven stone and written scroll,
From all old flower-fields of the soul;
And, weary seekers of the best,
We come back laden from our quest,
To find that all the sages said
Is in the Book our mothers read.

WHITTIER, Miriam.

My mother's hands this Bible clasped;
She, dying, gave it me.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

16
The Old Testament is tribal in its provinciality; its god is a local god, and its village police and sanitary regulations are erected into eternal laws.

JOHN MACY, The Spirit of American Literature. Ch. 1.

17
As long as woman regards the Bible as the charter of her rights, she will be the slave of man. The Bible was not written by a woman.

Within its lids there is nothing but humiliation and shame for her.

<sup>17</sup> If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain

To tell my story.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 357.

After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith:

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 69.

<sup>18</sup> The great and good do not die even in this world. Embalmed in books, their spirits walk abroad. The book is a living voice. It is an intellect to which one still listens.

SAMUEL SMILES, Character. Ch. 10. See also POETS AND FAME.

Make bare the poor dead secrets of his heart,
Strip the stark-naked soul, that all may peer,
Spy, smirk, sniff, snap, snort, snivel, snarl,
and sneer.

SWINBURNE, In Sepulcretis. St. 2.

Shame, such as never yet dealt heavier stroke
On heads more shameful, fall on theirs through whom
Dead men may keep inviolate not their tomb,
But all its depths these ravenous grave-worms choke.

SWINBURNE, In Sepulcretis. St. 4.

2
For since he would sit on a prophet's seat,
As a lord of the human soul,
We needs must scan him from head to feet,
Were it but for a wart or a mole?

TENNYSON, The Dead Prophet. St. 14.

For now the Poet cannot die,
Nor leave his music as of old,
But round him ere he scarce be cold
Begins the scandal and the cry.

TENNYSON, To —, after Reading a Life and Letters. St. 4.

3
Why should the stranger peer and pry
One's vacant house of life about,
And drag for curious ear and eye
His faults and follies out?

Why stuff, for fools to gaze upon,
With chaff of words, the garb he wore,
As corn-busks when the ear is gone
Are rustled all the more?

WHITTIER, My Namesake. Sts. 6, 7.

BIRDS

Quotations relating to the more important birds will be found under their several names, Blackbird, Lark, Nightingale, etc.

I—Birds: Apothegms

4
I am no bird to be taken with chaff.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Reynard the Fox, 110.
(1481)

You must not think, sir, to catch old birds with chaff.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. iv, ch. 5.

5
The early bird catches the worm.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, 333. (1605) In

There are no birds this year in last year's nests. (En los Nidos de antaño no hay pajaros hogaño.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 74.

Enjoy the Spring of Love and Youth,
To some good angel leave the rest;
For Time will teach thee soon the truth,
There are no birds in last year's nest!
LONGFELLOW, It Is Not Always May.

8
For one reward to pursue two things. (Una mercede duas res adsequi.)

CICERO, Pro Roscio Amerino. Ch. 29, sec. 80.

Now for a neat job of catching two wild boars in one brake. (Jam ego uno in saltu lepide apros capiam duos.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 476. (Act ii, sc. 7.)

I should kill two birds with one stone, as that excellent thrifty proverb says.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Miser. Act ii. (1671)

9
I shall not ask Jean-Jacques Rousseau
If birds confabulate or no.

COWPER, Pairing Time Anticipated, l. 1.

10
A bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 20.

I did lately hear . . . by one bird that in my ear was late chaunting.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

I had a little bird, that brought me news of it.
BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotinus. Sig. F3. (1583)

I heard a bird so sing.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 5, l. 113.

I heard the little bird say so.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella. 23 May, 1711.

LEMIERRE, Fastes. Chant. i.

2 The bird avoids the nets that show too plainly. (Quæ nimis apparent retia, vitat avis.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 516.

Surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird.

Old Testament: Proverbs, i, 17.

Vainly the fowler's eye

Might mark thy distant flight to do thee wrong,

As, darkly painted on the crimson sky,

Thy figure floats along.

BRYANT, To a Waterfowl.

A bird may be caught with a snare that will not be shot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 13.

3 He is a fool who lets slip a bird in the hand for a bird in the bush.

PLUTARCH, Of Garrulity.

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. xi, l. 75. CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 4.

That proverb, "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," is of more authority with them [the men of this world] than are all the divine testimonies of the good of the world to come.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

A bird in hand is better than three in the wood.

THOMAS HILL, Commonplace-Book, 128. (1495)

Better one bird in hand than ten in the wood.

5 To fright a bird is not the way to catch her.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

He that will take the bird must not scare it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

6 The bird that can sing and won't sing must be made to sing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Such bird, such song. (Qualis avis, talis cantus.)

UNKNOWN, A Latin proverb.

7 The birds nor sow nor reap, yet sup and dine, The flowers without clothes live,

Yet Solomon was never dressed so fine.

HENRY VAUGHAN, Man. See also under DRESS.

8 Birds in their little nests agree.

ISAAC WATTS, Love Between Brothers and Sisters.

With Nature never do they wage

A foolish strife; they see

A happy youth, and their old age

Is beautiful and free

WORDSWORTH, The Fountain. St. 11.

9 Then said the wren, I am called the hen

Of our Lady most comely.

UNKNOWN, Harmony of Birds, 10. (c. 1555)

The robin and the wren

Are God Almighty's cock and hen;

The martin and the swallow

Are God Almighty's bow and arrow.

II—Birds: Description

10

Near all the birds

Will sing at dawn—and yet we do not take The chaffering swallow for the holy lark.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 951.

Oh, the little birds sang east, and the little birds sang west.

E. B. BROWNING, Toll Slowly.

11

Take any bird, and put him in a cage,

And do all thine intent, and thy corage,

To foster it tenderly with meat and drink,

And eke with all the dainties thou canst think,

And keep it all so kindly as thou may;

Although his cage of gold be never so gay,

Yet hath this bird, by twenty thousand fold,

Far rather in a forest, wild and cold,

Go eten worms and suche wretchedness.

CHAUCER, The Maunciples Tale, l. 161.

Just as a bird that flies about

And beats itself against the cage,

Finding at last no passage out,

It sits and sings, and so o'ercomes its rage.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Friendship in Absence.

12

Dame nature's minstrels.

GAVIN DOUGLAS, Morning in May.

13

And as a bird each fond endearment tries

To tempt its new-fledg'd offspring to the skies.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 167.

The shell must break before the bird can fly.

TENNYSON, The Ancient Sage, l. 154.

14

Many strange birds are on the air abroad, Nor are all of one flight or of one force,

But each after his kind dissimilar.

GUINICELLI, Of Moderation and Tolerance.

1 When the little birds sweetly did sing
Lauds to their Maker early i' the morning.
STEPHEN HAWES, Passetyme of Pleasure. (1506)

The little birds that tune their morning's joy.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 159.

2 The dear Lord God, of His glories weary—
Christ our Lord had the heart of a boy—
Made Him birds in a moment merry,
Bade them soar and sing for his joy.
KATHERINE TYNAN HINKSON, The Making of Birds.

3 And all the little birds had laid their heads
Under their wings—sleeping in feather beds.
THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream, l. 111.

4 Be like the bird which on frail branches balanced
A moment sits and sings;
He feels them tremble, but he sings unshaken,
Knowing that he has wings.
VICTOR HUGO, Wings. (Edwin Arnold, tr.)

5 A bird appears a thoughtless thing, . . .
No doubt he has his little cares,
And very hard he often fares,
The which so patiently he bears.
CHARLES LAMB, Crumbs to the Birds.

6 Do you ne'er think what wondrous beings
these?
Do you ne'er think who made them, and who taught
The dialect they speak, where melodies
Alone are the interpreters of thought?
Whose household words are songs in many keys,
Sweeter than instrument of man e'er caught!

LONGFELLOW, The Birds of Killingworth. St. 15.

A bird knows nothing of gladness,
Is only a song machine.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Book of Dreams. Pt. ii.

7 By shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Passionate Shepherd to His Love. SHAKESPEARE, *Merry
Wives of Windsor*. Act iii, sc. 1.

8 Yet this was but a simple bird,
Alone, among dead trees.
W. A. PERCY, Overtones.

9 Gone to the world where birds are blest!
Where never cat glides o'er the green.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Epitaph on a Robin.

10 Gay, guiltless pair,
What seek ye from the fields of Heaven?

Ye have no need of prayer,
Ye have no sins to be forgiven.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, The Winged Worshippers.

11 O delicate chain over all the ages stretched,
O dumb tradition from what far darkness fetched:

Each little architect with its one design
Perpetual, fixed, and right in stuff and line,
Each little ministrant who knows one thing,
One learned rite to celebrate the spring.
Whatever alters else on sea or shore,
These are unchanging: man must still explore.

J. C. SQUIRE, The Birds.

12 Hark, by the bird's song ye may learn the nest.

TENNYSON, The Marriage of Geraint, l. 359.

What does little birdie say
In her nest at peep of day?

TENNYSON, Sea Dreams, l. 281.

13 The birds know when the friend they love is nigh,
For I am known to them, both great and small.

JONES VERY, Nature.

14 You alone can lose yourself
Within a sky, and rob it of its blue!

MAXWELL BODENHEIM, Advice to a Blue-Bird.

The bluebird carries the sky on his back.
THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

15 And all it lends to the eye is this—
A sunbeam giving the air a kiss.
HARRY KEMP, The Hummingbird.

16 The linnet's lay of love.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 38.

17 Then from the neighboring thicket the mocking-bird, wildest of singers,
Swinging aloft on a willow spray that hung o'er the water,
Shook from his little throat such floods of delirious music,
That the whole air and the woods and the waves seemed silent to listen.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. 2.

Winged mimic of the woods! thou motley fool!
Who shall thy gay buffoonery describe?
Thine ever-ready notes of ridicule
Pursue thy fellows still with jest and jibe:
Wit, sophist, songster, Yorick of thy tribe;
Thou sportive satirist of Nature's school;
To thee the palm of scoffing we ascribe,
Arch-mocker and mad abbot of misrule!

ROBERT WYLDE, To the Mocking-Bird.

18 The bird forlorn
That singeth with her breast against a thorn.
THOMAS HOOD, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies.

1
Across the narrow beach we flit,
One little sand-piper and I;
And fast I gather, bit by bit,
The scattered drift-wood, bleached and dry,
The wild waves reach their hands for it,
The wild wind raves, the tide runs high,
As up and down the beach we flit,
One little sand-piper and I.
CELIA THAXTER, The Sand-Piper.

2
Seagulls . . . slim yachts of the element.
ROBINSON JEFFERS, Pelicans.

3
How joyously the young sea-mew
Lay dreaming on the waters blue
Whereon our little bark had thrown
A little shade, the only one,
But shadows ever man pursue.
E. B. BROWNING, The Sea-Mew.

BIRTH AND BIRTHDAY

See also Baby. For Birth in the sense of rank or nobility, see Ancestry.

I—Birth

4
The infant, as soon as Nature with great pangs of travail hath sent it forth from the womb of its mother into the regions of light, lies, like a sailor cast out from the waves, naked upon the earth, in utter want and helplessness, and fills every place around with mournful wailings and piteous lamentations, as is natural for one who has so many ills of life in store for him, so many evils which he must pass through and suffer.

FRANCIS BACON, De Rerum Natura. Pt. v, sec.
223.

He is born naked, and falls a whining at the
first.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 10.

Man alone at the very moment of his birth, cast naked upon the naked earth, does she abandon to cries and lamentations.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii,
sec. 2.

5
You have given yourself the trouble to be born. (Vous vous êtes donné la peine de naître.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Mariage de Figaro.

6
Every night and every morn
Some to misery are born;
Every morn and every night
Some are born to sweet delight.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

7
I came upstairs into the world, for I was born in a cellar.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 7.

Born in a cellar and living in a garret.
SAMUEL FOOTE, The Author. Act ii.

Born in the garret, in the kitchen bred.
BYRON, A Sketch, l. 1.

When each comes forth from his mother's womb, the gate of gifts closes behind him.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

9
For we should mourn in sorrowing throngs
the house

Where a man child is born to light of day.
(Nam nos decebat cœtus celebrantes domum Lugere, ubi esset aliquis in lucem editus.)

EURIPIDES, Cresphontes. As translated by CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk.
i, ch. 48, sec. 115.

10 Zoë, the fourth wife of Leo VI, gave birth to the future Emperor Constantine Porphyro-rogenitus in the purple chamber of the imperial palace.

GEORGE FINLAY, Byzantine and Greek Empires, i. Porphyrogenitus, or born in the purple, has nothing to do with purple robes of royalty, but refers to the porphyry-lined chamber in which Constantine was born.

11
A man is not completely born until he be dead.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letters: To Miss Hubbard. See also DEATH AND BIRTH.

12
Into the world we come like ships, Launch'd from the docks, and stocks, and slips,

For fortune fair or fatal!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Birth.

13
Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which it was said, There is a man-child conceived.

Old Testament: Job, iii, 3.

14
You were born of a white hen. (Gallinæ filius albæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 141.

He was born with a penny in 's mouth.

JOHN CLARKE, Par. Anglo-Latina, 39.

One man, says the auld proverb, is born wi' a silver spoon in his mouth, and another wi' a wudden ladle.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. Nov., 1831.

Plutus, as sponsor, stood at her font,

And Midas rocked the cradle.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Birth.

15
Naked I alighted on the earth and naked shall I go beneath it. (Γῆς ἐπεβην γυμνός, γυμνός θ' ὑπὸ γαίαν ἀπειμι.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, No. 58.)

Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord.

Old Testament: Job, i, 21.

For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.

New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 7.

Naked was I born, naked I am; I neither lose nor gain. (Desnudo nació, desnudo me hallo; ni pierdo ni gano.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25; Pt. ii, chs. 8, 53, 55, 57.

<sup>1</sup> Blest indeed are those who were never born to see the sun! (Φεύ μακαρίστοι, ὅσσοι ἀν' ὠδίνων οὐκ ἴδον ἡέλιον.)

PHILIPPUS OF THESSALONICA, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 383.)

Who breathes, must suffer; and who thinks, must mourn;

And he alone is bless'd, who ne'er was born.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of the World. Bk. iii, l. 240.

<sup>2</sup> From the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth.

Old Testament: Psalms, cx, 3.

Her birth was of the womb of morning dew
And her conception of the joyous prime.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto vi, st. 3.

<sup>3</sup> Infinitely more important than any other question in this country—that is the question of race suicide, complete or partial.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Letter to Bessie Van Vorst, 18 Oct., 1902. Reprinted as a preface to her The Woman Who Toils.

We want far better reasons for having children than not knowing how to prevent them.

DORA RUSSELL, Hypatia, p. 46.

<sup>4</sup> I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head and something a round belly.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 210.

There was he born, under a hedge.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 54.

<sup>5</sup> Thou must be patient; we came crying hither:

Thou know'st the first time that we smell the air,

We wawl and cry. . . .

When we are born, we cry that we are come
To this great stage of fools.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 182.

<sup>6</sup> I 'spect I growed. Don't think nobody never made me.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 21.

<sup>7</sup> When I was born, I did lament and cry,
And now each day doth show the reason why.

RICHARD WATKYNs, Flamma Sine Fumo. (1662)

<sup>8</sup> And when I was born, I drew in the common air, and fell upon the earth, which is of like nature, and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do. . . . For there is no king had any other beginning of birth. For all men have one entrance into life, and the like going out.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, vii, 3-6.

<sup>9</sup> My father got me strong and straight and slim

And I give thanks to him.

My mother bore me glad and sound and sweet,

I kiss her feet!

MARGUERITE WILKINSON, The End.

<sup>10</sup> Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting;

The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star,

Hath had elsewhere its setting,

And cometh from afar:

Not in entire forgetfulness,

And not in utter nakedness,

But trailing clouds of glory do we come

From God, who is our home.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 58.

<sup>11</sup> Born of a Monday, fair in the face,

Born of a Tuesday, full of God's grace,

Born of a Wednesday, merry and glad,

Born of a Thursday, sour and sad,

Born of a Friday, Godly given,

Born of a Saturday, work for your living,

Born of a Sunday, ne'er shall you want,

So ends the week, and there's an end on't.

UNKNOWN. (BRAND, Popular Antiquities. Notes and Queries, ser. v, vii, 424.)

Monday's child is fair of face,

Tuesday's child is full of grace,

Wednesday's child is full of woe,

Thursday's child has far to go,

Friday's child is loving and giving,

Saturday's child works hard for its living,

And a child that's born on the Sabbath day

Is fair and wise and good and gay.

UNKNOWN. (BRAY, Traditions of Devon, ii, 288.)

II—Birth: Birthday

See also Age: Middle Age

<sup>12</sup> What different dooms our birthdays bring!

For instance, one little mannikin thing

Survives to wear many a wrinkle;

While Death forbids another to wake,

And a son that it took nine moons to make,

Expires without even a twinkle!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Birth.

<sup>13</sup> Do you count your birthdays thankfully?
(Natalis grate numeras?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 210.

1
The return of my birthday, if I remember it, fills me with thoughts which it seems to be the general care of humanity to escape.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, v, 222.)

My birthday!—what a different sound
That word had in my youthful ears;
And how each time the day comes round,
Less and less white its mark appears.
THOMAS MOORE, My Birthday.

Believing hear, what you deserve to hear:
Your birthday as my own to me is dear. . . .
But yours gives most; for mine did only lend
Me to the world; yours gave to me a friend.
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 52.

3
Is that a birthday? 'tis, alas! too clear;
'Tis but the funeral of the former year.
POPE, To Mrs. M. B. on Her Birthday.

4
This day I breathed first: time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end;
My life is run his compass.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act v, sc. 3, l. 23.

5
How soon hath Time, the subtle thief of youth,
Stol'n on his wing my three-and-twentieth year!
MILTON, Sonnet: On His Being Arrived to the Age of Twenty-three.

6
Through life's road, so dim and dirty,
I have dragged to three-and-thirty;
What have these years left to me?
Nothing, except thirty-three.
BYRON, Diary. 22 Jan., 1821. (MOORE, Life of Byron. Vol. ii, p. 414.)

I am thirty-three—the age of the good sans-culotte Jesus; an age fatal to revolutionists.

CAMILLE DESMOULINS, when asked his age by the French Revolutionary Tribunal, 3 April, 1794. He was guillotined two days later.
Sans-culotte, without breeches, was the popular name for the Revolutionaries, presumably because they had discarded knee-breeches—culottes—for pantaloons. (Aper-çus sur Camille Desmoulins. Carlyle, French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. vi, ch. 2.)

7
Make me content
With fading light;
Give me a glorious sunset
And a peaceful night.
NORMAN B. HALL, A Thought on My Forty-fifth Birthday.

8
Fifty years spent, and what do they bring
me?
Now I can buy the meadow and hill:
Where is the heart of the boy to sing thee?
Where is the life for thy living to fill?
STRUTHERS BURT, Fifty Years Spent.

Old Age, on tiptoe, lays her jewelled hand
Lightly in mine.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, A Minuet on Reaching the Age of Fifty.

I keep some portion of my early dream;
Brokenly light, like moonbeams on a river,
It lights my life, a far elusive gleam,
Moves as I move, and leads me on forever.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Twoscore and Ten. St. 29.

9
Past my next milestone waits my seventieth
year.

I mount no longer when the trumpets call;
My battle-harness idles on the wall,
The spider's castle, camping-ground of dust,
Not without dints, and all in front, I trust.
J. R. LOWELL, *Epistle to George William
Curtis: Postscript*, 1887.

• III—Birth: Birthright

10
And he sold his birthright unto Jacob.
Old Testament: Genesis, xxv, 33.

Better a mess of pottage than nothing, pardie.
UNKNOWN, The Historie of Jacob and Esau.
(1557) The expression, "a mess of pottage," does not occur in the authorized version of the Bible, but seems to have been derived from the heading of the 25th chapter of Genesis in the Genevan version, printed in 1537: "Esau selleth his birthright for a mess of pottage."

11
His birthright sold, some pottage so to gain.
WILLIAM ALEXANDER, *Doomsday: The Sixth
Hour*. St. 39.

Lest, selling that noble inheritance for a poor mess of pottage, you never enter into his eternal rest.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Pt. ii,
ch. 20.

Shall we sell our birthrite for a mess of potash?
ARTEMUS WARD, Lecture.

Where'er a single slave doth pine,
Where'er one man may help another,— Thank God for such a birthright,
brother,—

That spot of earth is thine and mine!
There is the true man's birthplace grand,
His is a world-wide fatherland!

J. R. LOWELL, The Fatherland.

13 Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 70.

IV—Birth: Birth-stones

14
January
By her who in this month is born,
No gems save Garnets should be worn;
They will insure her constancy,
True friendship and fidelity.

February

The February born will find
Sincerity and peace of mind;
Freedom from passion and from care,
If they the Pearl will always wear.

March

Who in this world of ours their eyes
In March first open shall be wise;
In days of peril firm and brave,
And wear a Bloodstone to their grave.

April

She who from April dates her years,
Diamonds should wear, lest bitter tears
For vain repentance flow; this stone,
Emblem of innocence is known.

May

Who first beholds the light of day
In Spring's sweet flowery month of May
And wears an Emerald all her life,
Shall be a loved and happy wife.

June

Who comes with Summer to this earth
And owes to June her day of birth,
With ring of Agate on her hand,
Can health, wealth, and long life command.

July

The glowing Ruby should adorn
Those who in warm July are born,
Then will they be exempt and free
From love's doubt and anxiety.

August

Wear a Sardonyx or for thee
No conjugal felicity.
The August-born without this stone
'Tis said must live unloved and lone.

September

A maiden born when Autumn leaves
Are rustling in September's breeze,
A Sapphire on her brow should bind,
'Twill cure diseases of the mind.

October

October's child is born for woe,
And life's vicissitudes must know;
But lay an Opal on her breast,
And hope will lull those woes to rest.

November

Who first comes to this world below
With drear November's fog and snow
Should prize the Topaz' amber hue—
Emblem of friends and lovers true.

December

If cold December gave you birth,
The month of snow and ice and mirth,
Place on your hand a Turquoise blue,
Success will bless whate'er you do.

UNKNOWN, (Notes and Queries, 11 May, 1889,
p. 371.)

BLACK

1 Black is a pearl in a woman's eye.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, An Humorous Day's Mirth.

2 Above black there is no colour, and above salt no savour.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites. Fo. 33. (1578)

But then I am partial to black. I think it the most fascinating, the most felicitous, the most dignified, the most seductive color a woman can wear.

BURTON STEVENSON, House Next Door. Ch. 7.

3 Black will take no other hue. (Lanæ nigræ nullum colorem bibunt.)

6 They'll . . . pinch us black and blue.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 194.

7 Black as hell.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 94.

Thou'rt damn'd as black—nay, nothing is so
black.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 121.

Black is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons and the suit of night.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 254.

8 By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc.
3, l. 247.

To look like her are chimney-sweepers black.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 266.

9 Is black so base a hue?

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 2,
l. 71.

Coal-black is better than another hue,
In that it scorns to bear another hue.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 2,
l. 99.

10 No one can say black is her eye.

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 1711.

I defy anybody to say black's my nail.

JOHN REED, Registry Office. Act i.

11 Every white will have its black
And every sweet its sour.

UNKNOWN, Sir Carline. (15th century ballad.)

Sweet meat must have sour sauce.

SIR HENRY SPELMAN, Dialogue, 42. (c. 1580)

BLACKBIRD

- 5
I value my garden more for being full of blackbirds than of cherries, and very frankly give them fruit for their songs.
ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 477.
- 6
Strange, beautiful, unquiet thing,
Lone flute of God.
JOSEPH AUSLANDER, A Blackbird Suddenly.
- 7
Ov all the birds upon the wing
Between the zunny showers o' spring, . . .
The blackbird, whisslèn in among
The boughs, do zing the gayest song.
WILLIAM BARNES, The Blackbird.
- 8
O blackbird, who hath taught thee
The heartbreak in thy song?
F. W. BOURDILLON, The Blackbird.
- 9
The nightingale has a lyre of gold,
The lark's is a clarion call,
And the blackbird plays but a boxwood flute,
But I love him best of all.
W. E. HENLEY, Echoes. No. 18.
- 10
The blackbird in the coppice
Looked out to see me stride,

- And hearkened as I whistled
The trampling team beside,
And fluted and replied.
A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad. No. 7.
- 11
Wet your feet, wet your feet,
This is what he seems to say,
Calling from the dewy thicket
At the breaking of the day.

- 12
Quaintest, richest carol of all the singing throats.
GEORGE MEREDITH, Love in the Valley. St. 17.
- 13
The birds have ceased their songs,
All save the blackbird, that from yon tall ash, . . .
In adoration of the setting sun,
Chants forth his evening hymn.
DAVID MOIR, An Evening Sketch.
- 14
Let thy loud and welcome lay
Pour alway
Few notes but strong.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Blackbird.
- 15
O Blackbird! sing me something well:
While all the neighbours shoot thee round,
I keep smooth plats of fruitful ground,
Where thou may'st warble, eat and dwell.
ALFRED TENNYSON, The Blackbird.
- 16
The Blackbird sings along the sunny breeze
His ancient song of leaves, and summer boon.
FREDERICK TENNYSON, The Blackbird.
His bill's so yellow,
his coat's so black,
that he makes a fellow
whistle back.
HUMBERT WOLFE, The Blackbird.

BLAKE, WILLIAM

- 17
Blake saw a treeful of angels at Peckham
Rye,
And his hands could lay hold on the tiger's terrible heart.
Blake knew how deep is Hell, and Heaven
how high,
And could build the universe from one tiny
part.
WILLIAM ROSE BENÉT, Mad Blake.
- 18
Be a god, your spirit cried;
Tread with feet that burn the dew;
Dress with clouds your locks of pride;
Be a child, God said to you.
OLIVE DARGAN, To William Blake.
- 19
This seer's ambition soared too far;
He sank, on pinions backward blown;

But, tho' he touched nor sun nor star,
He made a world his own.
EDMUND GOSSE, William Blake.

How shall a wise man, babbling like a child,
Tame jungle tigers and make lambkins wild?
JOHN MACY, Couplets in Criticism: Blake.

2
He came to the desert of London town,
Gray miles long;
He wandered up and he wandered down,
Singing a quiet song.

He came to the desert of London town,
Mirk miles broad;
He wandered up and he wandered down,
Ever alone with God.
JAMES THOMSON THE YOUNGER, William Blake.

BLESSING

3
Bless me in this life with but peace of my conscience, command of my affections, the love of Thyself and my dearest friends, and I shall be happy enough to pity Cæsar.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
conclusion.

2 Got pless my heart, liver, and lungs.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 26.

3 The three blessings for which I am most grateful to Fortune are: first, that I was born a human being and not one of the brutes; second, that I was born a man and not a woman; third, that I was born a Greek and not a barbarian.

THALES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Sec. 33.)

Amid my list of blessings infinite, Stand this the foremost, "That my heart has bled."

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 496.

BLINDNESS

I—Blindness: Apothegms

4 How blind is he that sees not light through the bottom of a sieve!

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

5 We'll follow the blind side of him.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Gentleman Usher. Act i, sc. 1.
(1606)

The rascals have a blind side, as all conceited coxcombs have.

APHRA BEHN, The Rover. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 1.

6 But as a blind man start an hare.

CHAUCER, The Hous of Fame. Bk. ii, l. 173.

By wondrous accident perchance one may
Grope out a needle in a load of hay;
And though a white crow is exceeding rare,
A blind man may, by fortune, catch a hare.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Kicksey Winsey. Pt. vii.

7 A blind man cannot judgen well in hues.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 21.
(1374)

The blind man of colours all wrong deemeth.

THOMAS HOCCLEVE, De Regimine Principum,
36. (1411)

8 As blind as a bat at noon.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 52. (1639)

In this wisdom he is as blind as a beetle.

HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons, p. 90. (1549)

In the water as blind as a mole.

UNKNOWN, Euterpe, p. 68. (1584)

Blinder Than a trebly-bandaged mole.

C. S. CALVERLEY, Lines on Hearing an Organ.

9 A pebble and a diamond are alike to a blind
man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 340.

10 Better be blind than to see ill.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Better one-eyed than stone blind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

11 Folk oft times are most blind in their own cause.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Every man's blind in his ain cause.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

12 Who is so deaf or blind as is he

That wilfully will neither hear nor see?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Who is blinder than he that will not see?

ANDREW BOORDE, Breviary of Helthe. Bk. ii, fo. 6. (1547)

There is none so blind as they that won't see.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

Being too blind to have desire to see.

TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 868.

13 I was eyes to the blind, and feet was I to the lame.

Old Testament: Job, xxix, 15.

14 I read each a blind buzzard.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus x,
l. 267. (1377)

Wept till blind as a buzzard.

THOMAS OTWAY, Soldier's Fortune. Act iv, sc. 3.

15 The blind eat many a fly.

JOHN LYDGATE, Ballade. (c. 1430)

16 They be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.

New Testament: Matthew, xv, 14.

Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch?

New Testament: Luke, vi, 39.

When the blind leads the blind, no wonder they both fall into—matrimony.

FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act v, sc. 1.

17 In the country of the blind, the one-eyed man is king. (Cæcorum in patria luscus rex im-perat omnis.)

MICHAEL APOSTOLIUS, Proverbs. An old proverb, taken from the Greek, its earliest English use probably in the translation by John Palsgrave, in 1540, of the Comedye of Acolastus, by Fullenius. In frequent use thereafter, with minor variations.

Among the blind, the one-eyed man is king. (Scitum est inter cæcos luscum regnare posse.)

ERASMUS, Adagia: Excellentia et Inæqualitas.
(c. 1500)

Blessed are the one-eyed in the country of the blind. (Beati monocoli in regione cæcorum.)

FREDERICK THE GREAT, quoting a proverb.
(CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. iv, ch. 11.)

Among the blind the one-eyed blinkard reigns.

ANDREW MARVELL, Character of Holland.

But have ye not heard this,

How an one-eyed man is Well sighted when

He is among blind men?

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Not to Courte?

The eyes are blind when the mind is elsewhere. (Cæci sunt oculi cum animus alias res agit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 126.

Blind-man's holiday, when it is too dark to see to work.

UNKNOWN, Dictionary Canting Crew. Sig. B6. (1690)

II—Blindness: Its Misery

For Blindness is the first born of Excess.

BYRON, Heaven and Earth. Pt. i, sc. 3, l. 807.

Oh, say! what is that thing call'd light,
Which I must ne'er enjoy?

What are the blessings of the sight?

Oh, tell your poor blind boy.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Blind Boy.

As blind as are these three to me,
So, blind to Some-one I must be.

WALTER DE LA MARE, All But Blind.

Dispel this cloud, the light of Heav'n restore;
Give me to see, and Ajax asks no more.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 729. (Pope, tr.)

Mild light, and by degrees, should be the plan

To cure the dark and erring mind;
But who would rush at a benighted man,
And give him two black eyes for being blind?

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 273.

Thus with the year
Seasons return, but not to me returns
Day, or the sweet approach of ev'n or morn,
Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose,
Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine;
But cloud instead, and ever-during dark, . . .
And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 40.

O, loss of sight, of thee I most complain!
Blind among enemies, O worse than chains,
Dungeons, or beggary, or decrepit age!

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 67.

O dark, dark, dark, amid the blaze of noon,
Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse
Without all hope of day!

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 80.

When I consider how my light is spent,
E'er half my days, in this dark world and wide, . . .

Doth God exact day-labour, light denied,
I fondly ask.

MILTON, Sonnets. No. xvi.

These eyes, though clear
To outward view, of blemish or of spot,
Bereft of light, their seeing have forgot,
Nor to their idle orbs doth sight appear
Of sun, or moon, or star, throughout the year,
Or man, or woman. Yet I argue not Against Heaven's hand or will, nor bate a jot
Of heart or hope; but still bear up and steer Right onward.

MILTON, To Mr. Cyriack Skinner.

He from thick films shall purge the visual ray,

And on the sightless eyeball pour the day.
POPE, Messiah, l. 39.

He that is stricken blind can not forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 238.

A blind man is a poor man, and blind a poor man is;

For the former seeth no man, and the latter no man sees.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinngedichte. (Long-fellow, tr.)

BLISS

See also Delight, Joy

To bliss unknown my lofty soul aspires,
My lot unequal to my vast desires.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Gnothi Seaton, l. 3.

The bliss e'en of a moment still is bliss.

JOANNA BAILLIE, The Beacon. Act i, sc. 2.

One moment may with bliss repay
Unnumbered hours of pain.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Ritter Bann, l. 173.

It was a dream of perfect bliss,
Too beautiful to last.

T. H. BAYLY, It Was a Dream.

Thus ever fade my fairy dreams of bliss.
BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 14.

All indistinctly apprehend a bliss,
On which the soul may rest; the hearts of all
Yearn after it.

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xvii, l. 124. (Cary, tr.)

Is bliss, then, such abyss
I must not put my foot amiss
For fear I spoil my shoe?

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 135.

1 The hues of bliss more brightly glow,
Chastis'd by sabler tints of woe.
THOMAS GRAY, Ode on the Pleasure Arising from Vicissitude, l. 41.

2 And my heart rocked its babe of bliss,
And soothed its child of air,
With something 'twixt a song and kiss,
To keep it nestling there.
GERALD MASSEY, On a Wedding Day. St. 3.

3 But such a sacred and home-felt delight,
Such sober certainty of waking bliss,
I never heard till now.
MILTON, Comus, l. 262.
The sum of earthly bliss.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 522.

4 Some place the bliss in action, some in ease,
Those call it pleasure, and contentment these.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 21.
Condition, circumstance, is not the thing;
Bliss is the same in subject or in king.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 57.

5 Man looks at his own bliss, considers it,
Weighs it with curious fingers; and 'tis gone.
WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

6 The spider's most attenuated thread
Is cord, is cable, to man's tender tie
On earthly bliss; it breaks at every breeze.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 178.

BLOOD

7 The blood is the life.
Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xii, 23.
Blood is a juice of rarest quality. (Blut ist ein ganz besonderer Saft.)
GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4, l. 214.

8 Something will come of this. I hope it mayn't be human gore.
DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 4.

9 What coast knows not our blood? (Quæ caret ora cruore nostro?)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode. 1, l. 36.

10 Human blood is all of a color.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2560.

11 And in the midst, 'mong thousand heraldries,
And twilight saints, and dim emblazonings,
A shielded scutcheon blush'd with blood of queens and kings.

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 24.

12 His blood be on us and on our children.
New Testament: Matthew, xxvii, 25.
Blood will have blood.

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Sec. vii, l. 45.
See also under RETRIBUTION.

13 First Moloch, horrid King, besmear'd with blood.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 392.

14 I am in blood
Stepp'd in so far that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 136.

Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 1, l. 44.

15 A compact sealed in blood. (In sanguine foedus.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

For blood in the sense of birth, see ANCESTRY.

II—Blood Is Thicker Than Water

16 For naturally blood will aye of kind
Draw unto blood, where he may it find.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. iii, l. 2071.
(1412)

17 No distance breaks the tie of blood;
Brothers are brothers evermore.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Second Sunday After Trinity.

Yet, still, from either beach,
The voice of blood shall reach.

ALLSTON, America to Great Britain.

18 Blood is thicker than water.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670)

Blood is thicker than water.

COMMODORE JOSIAH TATTNALL, Despatch, to U. S. Secretary of the Navy, justifying assistance to the British fleet in the Pei-ho,
June, 1859.

Bluid is thicker than water.

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 38.

19 Hands across the sea,
Feet on English ground,
The old blood is bold blood, the wide world round.

BYRON WEBBER, Hands Across the Sea.

BLUSHING

20 Now the red wins upon her cheek;
Now white with crimson closes
In desperate struggle—so to speak,
A War of Roses.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, On Her Blushing.

21 The very sight of his scarlet coat made me blush as red as a turkey-cock.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Faithful Friends.
Act iii, sc. 2.

22 Girls blush, sometimes, because they are alive,

Half wishing they were dead to save the shame.

The sudden blush devours them, neck and brow;

They have drawn too near the fire of life, like gnats,

And flare up bodily, wings and all.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 732.

1 So sweet the blush of bashfulness,
E'en pity scarce can wish it less!

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 8.

2 I would rather see a young man blush than turn pale. (Τὼν δὲ νέων χαίρειν τοῖς ἐρυθρῶσι μάλλον ὁ τοῖς ὠχρῶσι.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. ix, sec. 4.)

Better a blush on the cheek than a spot in the heart.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 44.

3 And of his own thought he wex all reed.

CHAUCER, The Shipman's Tale, l. 111.

"Nay, nay," quod she, and waxed as red as rose.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1256. (c. 1374)

His blood began to change, and he woxe red as a rose.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Jason, 156. (c. 1477)

Red as a rose is she.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. i, st. 9.

The rising blushes, which her cheek o'er-spread,
Are opening roses in the lily's bed.

JOHN GAY, Dione. Act ii, sc. 3.

While, mantling on the maiden's cheek,
Young roses kindled into thought.

THOMAS MOORE, Evenings in Greece. Evening ii, Song 2.

And ever and anon, with rosy red
The bashful blood her snowy cheeks did dye.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto ix, st. 41.

4 I always take blushing either for a sign of guilt or ill-breeding.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act i, sc. 9.

5 We griev'd, we sigh'd, we wept; we never blush'd before.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, A Discourse by Way of Vision Concerning the Government of Oliver Cromwell. Poem ii, st. 7. The line was quoted in the House of Commons by Sir Robert Peel, replying to an attack by William Cobbett.

6 I pity bashful men, who feel the pain
Of fancied scorn and undeserv'd disdain,
And bear the marks, upon a blushing face,
Of needless shame, and self-impos'd disgrace.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 347.

Forgot the blush that virgin fears impart
To modest cheeks, and borrow'd one from art.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 47.

7 The question about everything [with Mr. Podsnap] was, would it bring a blush to the cheek of a young person?

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch. 11.

Mr. Phunky, blushing into the very whites of his eyes, tried to look as if he didn't know that everybody was gazing at him: a thing which no man ever succeeded in doing yet, or, in all reasonable probability, ever will.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

8 Courage! that is the hue of virtue. (Θάρρει, τοιοῦτόν ἐστι τῆς ἀρετῆς τὸ χρῶμα.)

DIOGENES, to a young man who blushed. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 54.)

Blushing is the colour of virtue.

MATHEW HENRY, Commentaries; Jeremiah, iii.

The man that blushes is not quite a brute.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 496.

When guilty men begin to blush, it is a sign of grace.

UNKNOWN, School of Slovenrie, 96. (1605)

9 A blush is no language: only a dubious flag-signal which may mean either of two contradictory.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. v, ch. 35.

10 The blush is beautiful, but it is sometimes inconvenient. (Bello è il rossore, ma è incommodo qualche volta.)

GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 3.

11 To read my book, the virgin shy
May blush while Brutus standeth by;
But when he's gone, read through what's writ,

And never stain a cheek for it.

ROBERT HERRICK, On His Book.

The modest fan was lifted up no more,
And virgins smil'd at what they blush'd before.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 342.

A virtue but at second-hand;
They blush because they understand.

SWIFT, Cadenus and Vanessa.

12 Men blush less for their crimes than for their weaknesses and vanity. (Les hommes rougissent moins de leur crimes que de leurs faiblesses et de leur vanité.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. ii.

13 Innocence is not accustomed to blush. (L'innocence à rougir n'est point accoutumée.)

MOLIÈRE, Don Garcie de Navarre. Act ii, sc. 5.

Whoso blushes is guilty already; true innocence is ashamed of nothing. (Quiconque rougit est déjà coupable; la vraie innocence n'a honte de rien.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iv.

14 Rather move a man's blood to blush in his face, than remove it by bleeding from his body.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 15.

1 Blushes become a pale face, but the blush one feigns is the one that profits. (Decet alba quidem pudor ora, si simules, prodest.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. viii, l. 35.

2 From every blush that kindles in thy cheeks, Ten thousand little loves and graces spring To revel in the roses.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Tamerlane. Act i, sc. 1.

3 I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush or no.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 9, l. 68.

4 Now, if you can blush and cry, "guilty," cardinal,

You'll show a little honesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 305.

Lay by all nicety and prolixious blushes,
That banish what they sue for.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 162.

5 Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 43.

By noting of the lady, I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions
To start into her face, a thousand innocent shames
In angel whiteness beat away those blushes.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. i, l. 160.

Her pure, and eloquent blood
Spoke in her cheeks, and so distinctly wrought,
That one might almost say, her body thought.

JOHN DONNE, Of the Progress of the Soul. Pt. ii, l. 244. (Written by Occasion of the Religious Death of Mistress Elizabeth Drury.)

6 Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim, l. 351.

Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face;
Else would a maiden blush bewaint my cheek.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 85.

7 What, canst thou say all this and never blush?

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1, l. 121.

And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phæbus.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 3, l. 228.

Come, quench your blushes and present yourself
That which you are, mistress o' the feast.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

12 A good name is seldom got by giving it one's self; and women, no more than honour, are compassed by bragging.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act i.

13 Where boasting ends, there dignity begins.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 509.

BOBOLINK

14 When Nature had made all her birds,
With no more cares to think on,

She gave a rippling laugh and out
There flew a Bobolinkon.

C. P. CRANCE, The Bobolinks.

15 The crack-brained bobolink courts his crazy mate,

Poised on a bulrush tipsy with his weight.

O. W. HOLMES, Spring.

16 Merrily swinging on brier and weed,
Near to the nest of his little dame,

Over the mountain-side or mead,
Robert of Lincoln is telling his name:

Bob-o'-link, bob-o'-link,

Spink, spank, spink;

Snug and safe is this nest of ours,
Hidden among the summer flowers.

Chee, chee, chee.

BRYANT, Robert of Lincoln.

17 There were Bobolincon, Wadolincon, Winter-seeble, Conquedle,—

A livelier set was never led by tabor, pipe, or fiddle,—

Crying, "Phew, shew, Wadolincon, see, see, Bobolincon, . . .

Bobbing in the clover there—see, see, see!"
WILSON FLAGG, The O'Lincoln Family.

1 Bobolink! still may thy gladness
Take from me all taint of sadness.

THOMAS HILL, The Bobolink.

Why art thou but a nest of gloom
While the bobolinks are singing?

W. D. HOWELLS, The Bobolinks Are Singing.

2 June's bridesman, poet o' the year,
Gladness on wings, the bobolink, is here;
Half-hid in tip-top apple-blooms he swings,
Or climbs against the breeze with quiverin'
wings,

Or, givin' way to 't in a mock despair,
Runs down, a brook o' laughter, thru the air.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 6.

BODY

See also Mind and Body; Soul and Body

3 I built a house of sticks and mud,
And God built one of flesh and blood.
How queer that was, how strange that is,
That my poor house should shelter His. . .
And yet my house of sticks and clay
Is standing sturdy still today;
While God's house in a narrow pit
Is rotting where men buried it.

N. D. ANDERSON, The Two Houses.

4 Can anyone foretell in what condition his body will be, I do not say a year hence, but this evening? (An id exploratum cuiquam potest esse, quomodo se hoc habiturum sit corpus non dico ad annum, sed ad ves-perum?)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 28, sec. 92.

Every body is subject to change, so comes it to pass that every body is mortal. (Omne corpus mutabile est; . . . ita efficitur ut omne corpus mortale est.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. iii, sec. 12.

Who can put trust in strength of body? (Qui po-terit corporis firmitate confidere?)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 14.

5 But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection.

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 27.

6 Never a slave but in body, now has she won freedom for her body, too. ('Η πρὶν εἶδσα μόνω τῷ σώματι δούλη, καὶ τῷ σώματι νῦν ἔγρεν ἐλευθερίην.)

DAMASCIUS, Epitaph. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 553.)

7 Our bodies do not fit us, but caricature and satirize us. Man is physically as well as meta-physically a thing of shreds and patches, borrowed unequally from good and bad ancestors, and a misfit from the start.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

What a plastic little creature he is! so shifty, so adaptive! his body a chest of tools.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Resources.

The body of man is the type after which a dwelling house is built.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

The human body is the magazine of inventions, the patent office, where are the models from which every hint is taken. All the tools and engines on earth are only extensions of its limbs and senses.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

The body borrows the elements of its blood from the whole world, and the mind its belief.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

8 Since the body is the pipe through which we tap all the succors and virtues of the material world, it is certain that a sound body must be at the root of any excellence in manners and actions.

EMERSON, *Lectures and Biographical Studies:
Aristocracy*. See also under HEALTH.

9 No more was seen the human form divine.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. x, l. 278. (Pope, tr.)

Human face divine.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 44.

10 I believe in the flesh and the body, which is worthy of worship—to see a perfect human body unveiled causes a sense of worship.
. . . Increase of physical beauty is attended by increase of soul beauty. The soul is the higher even by gazing on beauty. Let me be fleshly perfect.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Story of My Heart.

The body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, and is the means whereby alone the soul can establish relations with the universe.

HARRY ROBERTS, Letter. (New Statesman, 29 Aug., 1931.)

11 My poor gentlemanlike carcass.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act
iv, sc. 7.

12 Death alone discloses how insignificant are the puny bodies of men. (Mors sola fatetur quantula sint hominum corpuscula.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 172.

13 Whether our bodies are burnt on the pyre or decompose with time matters not at all: nature finds room for them all in her gentle arms. (Tabesne cadavera solvat An rogus, haud refert: placido natura receptat.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 809.

To what vulture shall this carcass be given?
(Cujus vulturis hoc erit cadaver?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 62.

14 For the body at best

Is a bundle of aches,

Longing for rest;

It cries when it wakes.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Moriturus.

<sup>2</sup> She whose body's young and cool
Has no need of dancing-school.

DOROTHY PARKER, Salome's Dancing Lesson.

<sup>3</sup> Our vile body.

New Testament: Philippians, iii, 21.

<sup>4</sup> Pocahontas' body, lovely as a poplar, sweet as a red haw in November or a pawpaw in May, did she wonder? does she remember? . . . in the dust, in the cool tombs?

CARL SANDBURG, Cool Tombs.

<sup>5</sup> Would you be free from the restraint of your body? Live in it as if you were about to leave it. (Vis adversus hoc corpus liber esse? Tanquam migraturus habita.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 17.

<sup>6</sup> Our bodies are our gardens, to which our wills are gardeners.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 323.

<sup>7</sup> Ah beautiful passionate body
That never has ached with a heart!

SWINBURNE, Dolores. St. 11.

<sup>8</sup> The beautiful body on the oblong bed
Beautiful as a sword, that has for hilt
Arms whitely crossed behind a silver head.

WINIFRED WELLES, Design for a Blade.

<sup>9</sup> If anything is sacred the human body is sacred.

WALT WHITMAN, I Sing the Body Electric. Sec. 6.

The man's body is sacred and the woman's body is sacred.

WHITMAN, I Sing the Body Electric. Sec. 6.

Have you ever loved the body of a woman?

Have you ever loved the body of a man?

Do you not see that these are exactly the same to all in all nations and times all over the earth?

WHITMAN, I Sing the Body Electric. Sec. 6.

Sacred is the dust

Of this heaven-labour'd form, erect, divine!

This heaven-assum'd majestic robe of earth.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night iii, l. 191.

BOLDNESS

I—Boldness: Its Virtues

<sup>10</sup> Push on, pursue, in no wise faint of foot!

(Ἐλα, δίωκε, μὴ τι μαλκίων ποδί.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 185.

Not for laggards doth a contest wait. (Ἄγων γὰρ ἀνδρας οὐ μένει ληλεμένους.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Glaucus of Potniæ. Frag. 21.

<sup>11</sup> What action is to the orator, that is boldness to the public man; first, second, third.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Audacia.

Boldness in business is the first, second, and third thing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1006.

<sup>12</sup> Dare, will, keep silence. (Oser, vouloir, se taire.)

<sup>13</sup> He most prevails who nobly dares.

WILLIAM BROOME, Courage in Love.

<sup>14</sup> He ruled them—man may rule the worst,
By ever daring to be first.

BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 12.

<sup>15</sup> There are periods when the principles of experience need to be modified, . . . when in truth to dare is the highest wisdom.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act iii, sc. 1.

<sup>17</sup> He which that nothing undertaketh,
Nothing ne achieveth, be he looth or dere.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 807. (c. 1374)

For he who naught dare undertake,
By right he shall no profit take.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l. 319.

Naught venture naught have.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

He that nothing ventures, hath neither horse nor mule, (says Solomon): He who adventureth too much (said Ecephron) loseth both horse and mule, answered Malchon.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 33.

<sup>18</sup> The gods look with favor on superior daring.
CIVILIS, to his legions. (TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 17.)

Even God lends a hand to honest boldness. (Τόμῃ δικάϊα καὶ θεὸς συλλαμβάνει.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 572.

God himself favors the bold. (Audentes deus ipse juvat.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. x, l. 586.

Fortune favors the bold, see under FORTUNE.

<sup>19</sup> To dare, and again dare, and forever dare!
(De l'audace, et encore de l'audace, et toujours de l'audace!)

GEORGE JACQUES DANTON, Speech, to the Legislative Committee of General Defence,

2 Sept., 1792, when the tocsin gave the signal for the slaughter of the royalists who crowded the prisons of Paris. The entire sentence is: "Legislators! it is not the alarm-cannon that you hear; it is the pas-de-charge against our enemies. To conquer them, to hurl them back, what do we require? To dare, and again dare, and forever dare!" (Le Moniteur: Hist. Parl., xvii, 347. CARLYLE, French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. i, ch. 4.)

1
Finite to fail, but infinite to venture.
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems, p. 52.

2
And though he stumbles in a full career,
Yet rashness is a better fault than fear.
DRYDEN, Tyrannic Love: Prologue, l. 20.

3
Boldness has genius, power, and magic in it.
GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4, l. 495.

4
He either fears his fate too much,
Or his deserts are small,
That dares not put it to the touch,
To gain or lose it all.
JAMES GRAHAM, MARQUIS OF MONTROSE, I'll Never Love Thee More.

5
On the neck of the young man sparkles no gem so gracious as enterprise.
HAFIZ. (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.)

6
Towards great persons use respective boldness.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 43.
Be not too bold with your betters.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 3. (1659)

7
Tender-handed stroke a nettle,
And it stings you for your pains;
Grasp it like a man of mettle,
And it soft as silk remains.
'Tis the same with common natures;
Use 'em kindly, they rebel;
But be rough as nutmeg-graters,
And the rogues obey you well.
AARON HILL, Verses Written on a Window in Scotland.

8
A decent boldness ever meets with friends.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 67. (Pope, tr.)

NICANDER OF COLOPHON, Epitaph. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 529.)

12
The bold persist even against misfortune;
the timorous and abject yield to despair through fear alone.

PLOTTIUS FIRMUS, to Emperor Otho. (TACITUS, History. Bk. ii, sec. 46.)

13
What though strength fails? Boldness is certain to win praise. In mighty enterprises, it is enough even to have willed success. (Quod si deficiant vires, audacia certe Laus erit: in magnis et voluisse sat est.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 10, l. 5.

14
No one reaches a high position without boldness. (Nemo timendo ad summum pervenit locum.)

"Dash! and through with it!"—That's the better watchword.

SCHILLER, Die Piccolomini. Act i, sc. 2. (Coleridge, tr.)

18
Fortune fears the brave, the cowardly overwhelms. (Fortuna fortes metuit, ignavos premit.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 159.

19
Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 6, l. 18.

Some enterprise That hath a stomach in 't.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 99.

20
Fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 62.

Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;
Threaten the threat'ner and outface the brow
Of bragging horror: so shall inferior eyes,
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example and put on
The dauntless spirit of resolution.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 1, l. 48.

Show boldness and aspiring confidence.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 1, l. 56.

21
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 46.

What man dare, I dare.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 99.

<sup>1</sup>
A jewel in a ten-times-barr'd-up chest
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 1, l. 180.

<sup>2</sup>
Who is so faint, that dares not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold?
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 401.

Boldness comes to me now and brings me heart.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
2, l. 121.

<sup>3</sup>
And as she lookt about, she did behold
How over that same door was likewise writ,
Be bold, be bold, and everywhere Be bold,
That much she mus'd, yet could not construe
it

By any riddling skill or common wit.
At last she spied at that room's upper end
Another iron door, on which was writ,
Be not too bold; whereto though she did bend

Her earnest mind, yet wist not what it might intend.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto xi,
st. 54.

One would say he had read the inscription on the gates of Busyrane,—“Be bold;” and on the second gate,—“Be bold, be bold, and evermore be bold;” and then again had paused well at the third gate,—“Be not too bold.”

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

Write on your doors the saying wise and old,
“Be bold! be bold!” and everywhere, “Be bold;
Be not too bold!” Yet better the excess
Than the defect; better the more than less;
Better like Hector in the field to die,
Than like a perfumed Paris turn and fly.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 100.

<sup>4</sup>
If we must fall, we should boldly meet our fate. (Si cadere necesse est, occurrendum discriminari.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 33.

In rashness there is hope. (Ex temeritate spes.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iii, sec. 26.

The only hope of safety was in boldness. (Unam in audacia spes salutis.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 49.

<sup>5</sup>
I drink, I huff, I strut, look big and stare,
And all this I can do, because I dare.

Yet a rich guerdon waits on minds that dare,
If aught be in them of immortal seed.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 4.

II—Boldness: Its Faults

<sup>7</sup>
What first? Boldness; What second and third? Boldness. And yet boldness is a child of ignorance and baseness, far inferior to other parts.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldness.

Boldness is an ill keeper of promise.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldness.

Great boldness is seldom without some absurdity.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldness.

Boldness is ever blind, for it seeth not dangers and inconveniences. Therefore, it is ill in counsel, good in execution.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldness.

<sup>8</sup>
He has no hearing on the prudent side.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 549.

<sup>9</sup>
Bold knaves thrive, without one grain of sense,

But good men starve for want of impudence.

DRYDEN, Constantine the Great: Epilogue.

<sup>10</sup>
In conversation boldness now bears sway;
But know, that nothing can so foolish be
As empty boldness.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 35.

<sup>11</sup>
Rashness is not always fortunate. (Non semper temeritas est felix.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxx, ch. 42.

Rashness brings success to few, misfortune to many. (Paucis temeritas est bono, multis malo.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. iv. l. 1.

I—Books: Definitions

11 Books are the legacies that a great genius leaves to mankind, which are delivered down from generation to generation, as presents to the posterity of those who are yet unborn.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 166.

12 That is a good book which is opened with expectation and closed with profit.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Bk. i, Learning-Books.

The test of a first-rate work, and a test of your sincerity in calling it a first-rate work, is that you finish it.

ARNOLD BENNETT, Things That Have Interested Me, p. 90.

There is no quite good book without a good morality; but the world is wide, and so are morals.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Gossip on a Novel of Dumas's.

The good book is always a book of travel; it is about a life's journey.

H. M. TOMLINSON, Out of Soundings, p. 192.

13 Books are the shrine where the saint is, or is believed to be.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Sir Thomas Bodley, 1605.

The images of men's wits and knowledges remain in books, exempted from the wrong of time, and capable of perpetual renovation.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

Books are ships which pass through the vast seas of time.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

14 Books are the compasses and telescopes and sextants and charts which other men have prepared to help us navigate the dangerous seas of human life.

JESSE LEE BENNETT, Books as Guides.

15 Books are men of higher stature, And the only men that speak aloud for future times to hear.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship. St. 49.

16 You, O Books, are the golden vessels of the temple, . . . burning lamps to be held ever in the hand.

RICHARD DE BURY, BISHOP OF DURHAM, (born Richard Aungerville), Philobiblon. Ch. 15. (1345)

Ye are the tree of life and the fourfold river of Paradise, by which the human mind is nourished, and the thirsty intellect is watered and refreshed; . . . fig-trees that are never barren.

RICHARD DE BURY, Philobiblon. Ch. 12.

Wells of living waters, delightful ears of corn, combs of honey, golden pots in which manna is stored, udders of milk.

RICHARD DE BURY, Philobiblon. Ch. 12.

All the glory of the world would be buried in oblivion, unless God had provided mortals with the remedy of books.

RICHARD DE BURY, Philobiblon. Ch. 9.

17 O blessed letters! that combine in one All ages past, and make one live with all.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Musophilus.

18 In Books lies the soul of the whole Past Time; the articulate audible voice of the Past, when the body and material substance of it has altogether vanished like a dream. . . . All that Mankind has done, thought, gained or been: it is lying as in magic preservation in the pages of Books. They are the chosen possession of men.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

The assembled souls of all men held wise, imprisoned until some one takes them down from a shelf and reads them.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 95.

The monument of vanish'd minds.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Gondibert. Bk. ii, canto 5.

1 Of the things which man can do or make here below, by far the most momentous, wonderful, and worthy are the things we call Books!

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

2 Books are the blessed chloroform of the mind.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, What English Literature Gives Us. See also Diodorus Siculus under LIBRARY: DEFINITIONS.

3 Of all the inanimate objects, of all men's creations, books are the nearest to us, for they contain our very thoughts, our ambitions, our indignations, our illusions, our fidelity to truth, and our persistent leaning toward error. But most of all they resemble us in their precarious hold on life.

JOSEPH CONRAD, Notes on Life and Letters, p. 5.

4 Wise books

For half the truths they hold are honoured tombs.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. ii, l. 14.

Books are sepulchres of thought;
The dead laurels of the dead.

LONGFELLOW, Wind Over the Chimney. St. 8.

5 In the highest civilization, the book is still the highest delight. He who has once known its satisfactions is provided with a resource against calamity.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

6 The virtue of books is to be readable.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.

Of all the needs a book has, the chief need is, that it be readable.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Autobiography. Ch. 19.

7 Books, those miraculous memories of high thoughts and golden moods; those magical shells, tremulous with the secrets of the ocean of life; . . . those honeycombs of dreams; those orchards of knowledge; those still-beating hearts of the noble dead; . . . prisms of beauty; urns stored with all the sweets of all the summers of time; immortal nightingales that sing for ever to the rose of life.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Prose Fancies, p. 114.

8 For books are more than books, they are the life

The very heart and core of ages past,
The reason why men lived and worked and died,

The essence and quintessence of their lives.

AMY LOWELL, The Boston Athenæum.

9 Books are not absolutely dead things, but do contain a progeny of life in them to be as active as that soul was whose progeny they are; nay, they do preserve as in a vial the purest efficacy and extraction of that living intellect that bred them.

MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 6.

As good almost kill a man as kill a good book: who kills a man kills a reasonable creature, God's image; but he who destroys a good book, kills reason itself, kills the image of God, as it were, in the eye.

MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 6.

10 A good book is the precious life-blood of a master spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a Life beyond Life.

MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 6.

That seasoned life of man preserved and stored up in books.

MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 6.

For books are as meats and viands are; some of good, some of evil substance.

MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 20.

11 Books are a part of man's prerogative;
In formal ink they thoughts and voices hold,
That we to them our solitude may give,
And make time present travel that of old;
Our life fame pieceth longer at the end,
And books it farther backward do extend.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, The Wife.

12 A book may be a flower that blows;

A road to a far town;

A roof, a well, a tower;

A book

May be a staff, a crook.

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Books.

13 Books are a finer world within the world.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Men of Letters.

14 Books, the children of the brain.

SWIFT, The Tale of a Tub. Sec. 1.

15 Books are the treasured wealth of the world, the fit inheritance of generations and nations.

THOREAU, Walden: Reading.

1 Bright books: the perspectives to our weak sights,
The clear projections of discerning lights,
Burning and shining thought, man's posthume day,
The track of fled souls in their Milky Way,
The dead alive and busy, the still voice
Of enlarged spirits, kind Heaven's white decoys.

HENRY VAUGHAN, To His Books.

They are not dead, but full of blood again,
I mean the sense, and every line a vein.

HENRY VAUGHAN, On Sir Thomas Bodley's Library.

2 Books are life's best business: vocation to these hath more emolument coming in, than all the other busy terms of life. They are . . . of easy access and kind expedition, never sending away empty any client or petitioner, nor by delay making their δῶρα ἄδωρα, Courtesies injurious.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoōtoria, p. 246. (Zωοτόρια, London, 1654.)

Books are for company, the best friends; in doubts counsellors, in damps comforters; Time's perspective, the home traveller's ship, or horse; the busy man's best recreation, the opiate of idle weariness, the mind's best ordinary, nature's garden and seed-plot of immortality.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoōtoria, p. 248.

3 There is no such thing as a moral or an immoral book. Books are well written, or badly written. That is all.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray: Preface.

We call some books immoral! Do they live? If so, believe me, TIME hath made them pure. In Books, the veriest wicked rest in peace.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Souls of Books. St. 3.

4 What holy cities are to nomadic tribes—a symbol of race and a bond of union—great books are to the wandering souls of men: they are the Meccas of the mind.

G. E. WOODBERRY, Torch, p. 176.

5 Dreams, books, are each a world; and books, we know,
Are a substantial world, both pure and good:
Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood,
Our pastime and our happiness will grow.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. St. 3.

II—Books: Apothegms

6 I am a man of one book. (Homo unius libri.)
St. THOMAS AQUINAS, referring to the fact that he read only the Bible.

Aquinas was once asked, with what compendium a man might become learned. He answered, "By reading of one book."

JEREMY TAYLOR, Life of Christ. Pt. ii, sec. 12.

Beware the man of one book. (Cave ab homine unius Libri.)

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature.

The homo unius libri is indeed proverbially formidable to all conversational figurantes.

SOUTHEY, The Doctor, p. 164.

Woe be to him that reads but one book.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

It is our duty to live among books; especially to live by one book, and a very old one.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Tracts for the Times.

7 Books must follow sciences, and not sciences books.

FRANCIS BACON, A Proposal for Amending the Laws of England.

8 There is no Past, so long as Books shall live!

BULWER-LYTTON, The Souls of Books. St. 4.

9 Laws die, Books never.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act i, sc. 2.

The one invincible thing is a good book; neither malice nor stupidity can crush it.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions and Opinions: A Great Poet.

10 Blessings upon Cadmus, the Phœnicians, or whoever it was that invented books.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Early Letters: To R. Mitchell.

11 Due attention to the inside of books, and due contempt for the outside, is the proper relation between a man of sense and his books.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 Jan., 1749.

Buy good books and read them; the best books are the commonest, and the last editions are always the best, if the editors are not blockheads, for they may profit of the former.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 19 March, 1750.

12 A room without books is as a body without a soul.

CICERO. (LUBBOCK, Pleasures of Life. Ch. 3.)

Far more seemly to have thy study full of books, than thy purse full of money.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

A house full of books, and a garden of flowers.

ANDREW LANG, Ballade of True Wisdom.

No furniture so charming as books.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i.)

13 "Gracious heavens!" he cries out, leaping up and catching hold of his hair, "what's this? Print!"

DICKENS, Somebody's Luggage. Ch. 3.

<sup>1</sup> Of making many books there is no end.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 12.

<sup>2</sup> A book may be as great a thing as a battle.
 BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Memoir of Isaac D'Israeli: Introduction.

<sup>3</sup> Some books leave us free and some books make us free.
 EMERSON, Journals, 22 Dec., 1839.

The colleges, whilst they provide us with libraries, furnish no professor of books; and I think no chair is so much wanted.
 EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

<sup>4</sup> Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book.
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxx, 8.

<sup>5</sup> Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book!
Old Testament: Job, xix, 23.

<sup>6</sup> Even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written.
New Testament: John, xxi, 25.

<sup>7</sup> A book that is shut is but a block.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 23.

<sup>8</sup> Learning hath gained most by those books by which the printers have lost.
 THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Books.

<sup>9</sup> A book may be amusing with numerous errors, or it may be very dull without a single absurdity.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield: Preface.

<sup>10</sup> A book is never a masterpiece; it becomes one.

EDMOND AND JULES DE GONCOURT, Journal.

<sup>11</sup> There be some men are born only to suck out the poison of books.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Malign. Studentium.

<sup>12</sup> Every age hath its book.
Koran. Ch. xiii.

<sup>13</sup> Why have we no grace for books, those spiritual repasts—a grace before Milton—a grace before Shakespeare—a devotional exercise proper to be said before reading the "Faerie Queene"?

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Grace Before Meat.

<sup>14</sup> I can read anything which I call a book. There are things in that shape which I cannot allow for such. In this catalogue of books which are no books—biblia a-biblia—I reckon Court Calendars, Directories, . . . Almanacs, Statutes at Large, the works of Hume, Gibbon, Robertson, Beattie, Soame Jenyns, and, generally, all those volumes which "no gentleman's library should be without."

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Detached Thoughts on Books and Reading.

<sup>15</sup> If books did good, the world would have been converted long ago.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions and Opinions.

<sup>16</sup> If a book is worth reading, it is worth buying.

RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies, p. 55.

If I were asked what book is better than a cheap book, I should answer that there is one book better than a cheap book, and that is a book honestly come by.

J. R. LOWELL, before U. S. Senate Committee on Patents, 29 Jan., 1886.

 SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 79.

He comes not in my books.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Widow. Act i, sc. 1.

TERENTIANUS MAURUS, Carmen Heroicum, l. 258.

<sup>19</sup> Few, but full of understanding, are the books of the library of God.

MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Recreation.

<sup>20</sup> It is with books as with men: a very small number play a great part.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Books.

III—Books: Their Influence

<sup>21</sup> Books will speak plain, when counsellors blanch.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Counsel.

<sup>22</sup> There is no mood to which a man may not administer the appropriate medicine at the cost of reaching down a volume from his bookshelf.

ARTHUR BALFOUR, Essays and Addresses, p. 36.

To divert at any time a troublesome fancy, run to thy books; they always receive thee with the same kindness.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Books.

<sup>23</sup> Books that purify the thought,
 Spirits of the learned dead,
 Teachers of the little taught,
 Comforters when friends are fled.
 WILLIAM BARNES, My Books.

1 Without books God is silent, justice dormant, natural science at a stand, philosophy lame, letters dumb, and all things involved in Cimmerian darkness.

THOMAS BARTHOLIN, De Libris Legendis.

2 Hark! the world so loud,
And they, the movers of the world, so still!
BULWER-LYTTON, The Souls of Books. St. 3.

3 No good Book, or good thing of any sort, shows its best face at first.

CARLYLE, Essays: Novalis.

4 If a book come from the heart, it will contrive to reach other hearts; all art and authorcraft are of small amount to that.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

5 It is chiefly through books that we enjoy intercourse with superior minds. . . . In the best books, great men talk to us, give us their most precious thoughts, and pour their souls into ours.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, On Self-Culture.

Books are the true levellers. They give to all, who will faithfully use them, the society, the spiritual presence, of the best and greatest of our race.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, On Self-Culture.

6 It is saying less than the truth to affirm that an excellent book (and the remark holds almost equally good of a Raphael as of a Milton) is like a well-chosen and well-tended fruit tree. Its fruits are not of one season only. With the due and natural intervals, we may recur to it year after year, and it will supply the same nourishment and the same gratification, if only we ourselves return to it with the same healthful appetite.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Prospectus of Lectures.

7 Books are a guide in youth and an entertainment for age.

JEREMY COLLIER, Of the Entertainment of Books.

8 Books should, not Business, entertain the Light;
And Sleep, as undisturb'd as Death, the Night.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

9 Books are not seldom talismans and spells.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 98.

'Twere well with most if books that could engage Their childhood, pleas'd them at a riper age.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 147.

10 But what strange art, what magic can dispose

The troubled mind to change its native woes? . . .

This, books can do;—nor this alone; they give

New views to life, and teach us how to live;

They soothe the griev'd, the stubborn they chastise,

Fools they admonish, and confirm the wise.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library, l. 37.

Books should to one of these four ends conduce, For wisdom, piety, delight, or use.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Prudence, l. 83.

11 He ate and drank the precious words,
His spirit grew robust;

He knew no more that he was poor,

Nor that his frame was dust.

He danced along the dingy days,

And this bequest of wings

Was but a book. What liberty

A loosened spirit brings!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 21.

There is no frigate like a book

To take us lands away,

Nor any coursers like a page

Of prancing poetry.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 99.

12 Who, without books, essays to learn,
Draws water in a leaky urn.

AUSTIN DOBSON, A Bookman's Budget, 188.

13 They support us in solitude. . . . They help us to forget the coarseness of men and things, compose our cares and our passions, and lay our disappointments to sleep.

COMTESSÉ DE GENLIS, Mémoires.

14 I have ever gained the most profit, and the most pleasure also, from the books which have made me think the most.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, p. 458.

The books which help you most are those which make you think the most.

THEODORE PARKER, World of Matter and World of Men.

15 Books give not wisdom where was none before,

But where some is, there reading makes it more.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 2.

16 Dear little child, this little book

Is less a primer than a key

To sunder gates where wonder waits

Your "Open Sesame!"

RUPERT HUGHES, With a First Reader.

17 The globe we inhabit is divisible into two worlds: the common geographical world, and the world of books; . . . if habit and perception between real and unreal, we may say that we more frequently wake out of common life to them, than out of them to common life.

LEIGH HUNT, Monthly Repository: Farewell Address, 1828.

Dear, human books,
With kindly voices, winning looks!
Enchant me with your spells of art,
And draw me homeward to your heart.

LIONEL JOHNSON, Oxford Nights.

Books have always a secret influence on the understanding; we cannot at pleasure obliterate ideas: he that reads books of science, though without any desire fixed of improvement, will grow more knowing; he that entertains himself with moral or religious treatises, will imperceptibly advance in goodness; the ideas which are often offered to the mind, will at last find a lucky moment when it is disposed to receive them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 137.

Many readers judge of the power of a book by the shock it gives their feelings.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 13.

All books are either dreams or swords,
You can cut, or you can drug, with words.
AMY LOWELL, Sword Blades and Poppy Seed,
I. 292.

5

We profit little by books we do not enjoy.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, Pleasures of Life. Ch. 3.

He fed his spirit with the bread of books,
And slaked his thirst at all the wells of thought.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Young Lincoln.

7

The book is doubly gifted: it moves to laughter, and by its counsel teaches a wise man how to live. (Duplex libelli dos est: quod risum movet, Et quod prudenti vitam consilio monet.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables: Bk. i, Prologue.

8

No book is so bad but some profit may be gleaned from it. (Nullam esse librum tam malum, ut non aliqua parte prodesset.)

PLINY THE ELDER. (PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iii, epis. 5.)

There's no book so bad but has some good in it.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 3.

Take up any book, even down to a jest-book, it is still better than nothing.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Oct., 1747.

The foolishlest book is a kind of leaky boat on a sea of wisdom; some of the wisdom will get in anyhow.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. xi.

A wise man, like a good refiner, can gather gold out of the drossiest volume.

MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 28.

9

There exists one book, which, to my taste, furnishes the happiest treatise of natural education. What then is this marvellous book? Is it Aristotle? Is it Pliny, is it Buffon? No,—it is Robinson Crusoe. (Il en existe un [livre] qui fournit, à mon gré, le plus heureux traité d'éducation naturelle . . . Quel est donc ce merveilleux livre? Est-ce Aristote? est-ce Pline, est-ce Buffon? Non; c'est Robinson Crusoe.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iii.

That wonderful book, while it obtains admiration from the most fastidious critics, is loved by those who are too simple to admire it.

MACAULAY, Essays: Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress.

10

Let your bookcases and your shelves be your gardens and your pleasure-grounds. Pluck the fruit that grows therein, gather the roses, the spices, and the myrrh.

JUDAH BEN TIBBON. (ABRAHAMS, Jewish Life in the Middle Ages, p. 354.)

By sucking you, the wise, like bees, do grow
Healing and rich, though this they do most slow,

Because most choicely; for as great a store
Have we of books as bees of herbs, or more:
And the great task to try, then know, the good

To discern weeds and judge of wholesome food.

HENRY VAUGHAN, To His Books.

IV—Books as Friends and Companions

12

Books are the most mannerly of companions, accessible at all times, in all moods, frankly declaring the author's mind, without offence.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Concord Days.

Books

Are not companions—they are solitudes;
We lose ourselves in them, and all our cares.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Village Feast: Evening.

13

Alonso of Arragon was wont to say of himself "That he was a great necromancer, for that he used to ask counsel of the dead," meaning books.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 105.

My days among the Dead are passed,
Around me I behold,

Where'er these casual eyes are cast,
The mighty minds of old:

My never-failing friends are they,
With whom I converse day by day.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, My Days Among the Dead Are Passed.

Studious let me sit,
And hold high converse with the mighty Dead.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 431.

Dead counsellors are likewise most instructive, because they are heard with patience and with reverence.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 87.

1 That place that does contain
My books, the best companions, is to me
A glorious court, where hourly I converse
With the old sages and philosophers.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Elder Brother.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 177.

2 The best companions are the best books.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters to Lord Hunting- don. No. 3.

We should choose our books as we would our companions, for their sterling and intrinsic merit.
C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 181.

Books and friends should be few and good.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

3 I can study my books at any time, for they are always disengaged.
CICERO, De Re Publica. Bk. i, sec. 9.

Books are the quietest and most constant of friends; they are the most accessible and wisest of counsellors, and the most patient of teachers.
CHARLES W. ELIOT, The Happy Life.

4 Come, my best friends, my books, and lead me on.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Motto.

5 A man's library is a sort of harem, and tender readers have a great pudency in showing their books to a stranger.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

Women are by nature fickle, and so are men.
... Not so with books, for books cannot change. A thousand years hence they are what you find them today, speaking the same words, holding forth the same comfort.

EUGENE FIELD, Love Affairs of a Bibliomaniac,
p. 11.

6 I . . . showed her that books were sweet unreproaching companions to the miserable, and that, if they could not bring us to enjoy life, they would at least teach us to endure it.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 22.

7 My masters and companions, my books.
JOSEPH HALL, Epistle to Lord Denny.

8 A blessed companion is a book,—a book that, fitly chosen, is a lifelong friend, . . . a book that, at a touch, pours its heart into our own.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit:
Books.

9 When I would know thee . . . my thought looks

Upon thy well-made choice of friends and
books;

Then do I love thee, and behold thy ends
In making thy friends books, and thy books friends.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 86.

10 We enter our studies, and enjoy a society which we alone can bring together. We raise no jealousy by conversing with one in preference to another; we give no offence to the most illustrious by questioning him as long as we will, and leaving him as abruptly.
Diversity of opinion raises no tumult in our presence; each interlocutor stands before us, speaks or is silent, and we adjourn or decide the business at our leisure.

LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Milton
and Andrew Marvell.

The debt which he owes to them is incalculable;
they have guided him to truth; they have filled his mind with noble and graceful images; they have stood by him in all vicissitudes, comforters in sorrow, nurses in sickness, companions in solitude. These friendships are exposed to no danger from the occurrences by which other attachments are weakened or dissolved. Time glides on; fortune is inconstant; tempers are soured; bonds which seemed indissoluble are daily sundered by interest, by emulation, or by caprice. But no such cause can affect the silent converse which we hold with the highest of human intellects.

MACAULAY, Essays: Lord Bacon.

11 A book is a friend whose face is constantly changing. If you read it when you are recovering from an illness, and return to it years after, it is changed surely, with the change in yourself.

ANDREW LANG, The Library. Ch. 1.

Three kinds of companions, men, women, and
books,

Were enough, said the elderly Sage, for his ends.

And the women we deem that he chose for their looks,

The men for their cellars: the books were his friends:

"Man delights me not," often, "nor women," but
books

Are the best of good comrades in loneliest nooks.

ANDREW LANG, To the Gentle Reader.

12 A wise man will select his books, for he would not wish to class them all under the sacred name of friends. Some can be accepted only as acquaintances. The best books of all kinds are taken to the heart, and cherished as his most precious possessions. Others to be chatted with for a time, to spend a few pleasant hours with, and laid aside, but not forgotten.

JOHN ALFRED LANGFORD, The Praise of Books: Preliminary Essay.

<sup>1</sup> What are my books? My friends, my loves,
My church, my tavern, and my only wealth;

My garden, yea, my flowers, my bees, my doves,

My only doctor, and my only health.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, My Books.

I feel your great hearts throbbing deep in quire,
And hear your breathing round me in the gloom.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Confessio Amantis.

All round the room my silent servants wait,
My friends in every season.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Autobiographical Fragment.

<sup>2</sup> The pleasant books, that silently among Our household treasures take familiar places,

And are to us as if a living tongue
Spake from the printed leaves or pictured faces!

LONGFELLOW, The Seaside and the Fireside: Dedication.

<sup>3</sup> While you converse with lords and dukes,
I have their betters here—my books.

THOMAS SHERIDAN, My Books.

<sup>4</sup> A good book is the best of friends, the same to-day and forever.

MARTIN F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Reading.

V—Books: Their Shortcomings

<sup>5</sup> Most books, indeed, are records less
Of fulness than of emptiness.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Writing.

Some books are lies frae end to end.

BURNS, Death and Dr. Hornbook, l. 1.

<sup>6</sup> Epitomes are the moths and corruptions of learning.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Colours of Good and Evil.

Every summary of a good book is a stupid summary. (Tout abrégé sur un bon livre est un sot abrégé.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

Abstracts, abridgements, please the fickle times.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library.

There's more ado to interpret interpretations, than to interpret things: and more books upon books, than upon any other subject.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

A dedication is a wooden leg.

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 192.

<sup>7</sup> "What is the use of a book," thought Alice,
"without pictures or conversations?"

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, p. 1.

<sup>8</sup> Books cannot always please, however good;
Minds are not ever craving for their food.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough, l. 24.

<sup>9</sup> Books are fatal: they are the curse of the human race. . . . The greatest misfortune that ever befell man was the invention of printing.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 24.

<sup>10</sup> Books are for the scholar's idle times. When he can read God directly, the hour is too precious to be wasted in other men's transcripts of their reading.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses and Lectures:
The American Scholar.*

When the mind wakes, books are set aside as impertinent.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Books.

One master could so easily be conceived as writing all the books of the world. They are all alike.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 297.

<sup>11</sup> Books are the best things, well used: abused, among the worst.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses and Lectures:
The American Scholar.*

Good books are the most precious of blessings to a people; bad books are among the worst of curses.

E. P. WHIPPLE, Essays and Reviews: Romance of Rascality.

No worse thief than a bad book.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>12</sup> He that takes up conclusions on the trust of authors, . . . loses his labour, and does not know anything, but only believeth.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 5.

<sup>13</sup> No book is of much importance; the vital thing is, What do you yourself think?

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xviii,
p. 19.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 2.

<sup>16</sup> Books have led some to learning and others to madness, when they swallow more than they can digest.

PETRARCH, On Fortune.

1 What need of books these truths to tell,
Which folks perceive who cannot spell?

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 590.

2 Some books are drenchèd sands,
On which a great soul's wealth lies all in heaps,

Like a wrecked argosy.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 2.

3 To mind the inside of a book is to entertain one's self with the forced product of another man's brain.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Relapse.

VI—Books and Men

4 Many are perfect in men's humours, that are not greatly capable of the real part of business; which is the constitution of one, that hath studied men, more than books.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

5 I have rather studied books than men.

FRANCIS BACON, Advice to Sir George Villiers.

The proper study of mankind is books.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Chrome Yellow.

See also MAN: THE STUDY OF MAN.

6 Learning is acquired by reading books; but the much more necessary learning, the knowledge of the world, is only to be acquired by reading men, and studying all the various editions of them.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 March, 1752.

7 Sleep over books, and leave mankind unknown.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 20.

We can not learn men from books.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. v, ch. 1.

8 Books are a triviality. Life alone is great.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 29 May, 1839.

Books are good enough in their way, but they are a mighty bloodless substitute for life. . . .
There are not many works extant, if you look the alternative all over, which are worth the price of a pound of tobacco to a man of limited means.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque: An Apology for Idlers.

9 Books teach us very little of the world.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Letter to Henry Goldsmith, Feb., 1759.

His knowledge of books had in some degree diminished his knowledge of the world.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, A Character.

10 The years know more than books.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

11 Books without the knowledge of life are useless.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (MRS. PIOZZI, Johnsoniana.)

12 The earth has had to forget its books that it might recover its men.

F. D. MAURICE, The Friendship of Books, p. 62.

VII—Books Old and New

13 Of all odd crazes, the craze to be forever reading new books is one of the oddest.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Essays: Books Old and New.

14 All books grow homilies by time; they are Temples, at once, and Landmarks.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Souls of Books. St. 4.

15 Old Books are best! With what delight
Does "Faithorne fecit" greet our sight.

BEVERLY CHEW, Old Books Are Best. See also under AGE.

16 Some will read old books, as if there were no valuable truths to be discovered in modern publications.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Miscellanies, p. 183.

17 Old age is a good advertisement.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. x, p. 312.

18 Books, like metals, require to be stamped with some valuable effigies before they become popular and current.

FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals: Preface.

19 The volumes of antiquity, like medals, may very well serve to amuse the curious; but the works of the moderns, like the current coin of a kingdom, are much better for immediate use.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Letter 75.

Books, like proverbs, receive their chief value from the stamp and esteem of ages through which they have passed.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Ancient and Modern Learning.

20 In proportion as society refines, new books must ever become more necessary. . . .
Books are necessary to correct the vices of the polite; but those vices are ever changing, and the antidote should be changed accordingly—should still be new.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Letter 75.

21 One would imagine that books were like women, the worse for being old; that they have a pleasure in being read for the first time; that they open their leaves more cordially; that the spirit of enjoyment wears out with the spirit of novelty; and that, after a certain age, it is high time to put them on the shelf.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Reading New Books.

New-fangled books are like made dishes in this respect, that they are generally little else than hashes and rifaccimenti of what has been served up entire and in a more natural state at other times.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk.

The praise of ancient authors proceeds not from the reverence of the dead, but from the competition and mutual envy of the living.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan: Conclusion.

Old books, as you well know, are books of the world's youth, and new books are fruits of its age.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 9.

The great drawback in new books is that they prevent our reading the old ones. (Le grand inconvénient des livres nouveaux, c'est qu'ils nous empêchent de lire les anciens.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 250.

What a sense of security in an old book which Time has criticised for us!

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Library of Old Authors.

And the loved books that younger grow with years.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis: Postscript, 1887.

Nothing so old as a new book.

MARK PATTISON, Books and Critics.

For some in ancient books delight;
Others prefer what moderns write:
Now I should be extremely loth
Not to be thought expert in both.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto i, l. 517.

All books are divisible into two classes, the books of the hour, and the books of all time.

RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies. Pt. i.

VIII—Books: The Book-Lover

I love my books as drinkers love their wine;
The more I drink, the more they seem divine.

FRANCIS BENNOCH, My Books.

Books we must have though we lack bread.

ALICE WILLIAMS BROTHERTON, Ballade of Poor Bookworms.

With faded yellow blossoms 'twixt page and page,

To mark great places with due gratitude.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. ii.

The peace of great books be for you,
Stains of pressed clover leaves on pages,
Bleach of the light of years held in leather.

CARL SANDBURG, For You.

And as for me, though that my wit be light,
On bookës for to read I me delight,
And to them give I faith and full credence,
And in my heart have them in reverence
So heartily, that there is gamè none
That from by bookës maketh me to goon.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 29.

His delight
Was all in books; to read them or to write;
Women and men he strove alike to shun,
And hurried homeward when his tasks were done.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. iii.

And so his blameless years rolled by,
To-day the double of to-morrow;
No wish to smile, no need to sigh,
No heart for mirth, no time for sorrow.

ROBERT CREWE-MILNES, The Bookworm.

Golden volumes! richest treasures!
Objects of delicious pleasures!
You my eyes rejoicing please,
You my hands in rapture seize!
Brilliant wits and musing sages,
Lights who beamed through many ages,
Left to your conscious leaves their story,
And dared to trust you with their glory;
And now their hope of fame achieved,
Dear volumes, you have not deceived!

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Libraries.

We prize books, and they prize them most who are themselves wise.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

There are books . . . which take rank in our life with parents and lovers and passionate experiences.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

The Love of Books, the Golden Key
That opens the Enchanted Door.

ANDREW LANG, Ballade of the Bookworm.

With pipe and book at close of day,
O what is sweeter, mortal, say!
It matters not what book on knee,
Old Izaak or the Odyssey.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Volumes in Folio.

But whether it be worth or looks
We gently love or strongly,
Such virtue doth reside in books
We scarce can love them wrongly.

COSMO MONKHOUSE, De Libris.

1 Knowing I loved my books, he furnish'd me
From mine own library with volumes that
I prize above my dukedom.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 166.

I never knew
More sweet and happy hours than I employ'd
Upon my books.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Lady of Pleasure. Act ii, sc. 1.

2 Take thou a book in thine hands as Simon the Just took the Child Jesus into his arms to carry him and kiss him.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, Doctrinale Juvenum.

3 Everywhere have I sought rest and found it not, except sitting apart in a nook with a little book. (In omnibus requiem quæsi et non inveni, nisi seorsum sedans in angulo cum libello.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, Inscription, on his picture at Zwoll, Holland, where he is buried. Supposed to have been written by him in a copy of his De Imitatione Christi. Credited to him by Roswey in his Preface to the 1617 edition of the book.

With spots of sunny openings, and with nooks
To lie and read in, sloping into brooks.

LEIGH HUNT, The Story of Rimini.

The love of learning, the sequestered nooks,
And all the sweet serenity of books.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 232.

4 O for a Booke and a shadie nooke,
Eyther in-a-dooer or out;
With the grene leaves whispering overhede,
Or the streete cryes all about;
Where I maie Reade all at my ease,
Both of the Newe and Olde,
For a jollie goode Booke whereon to looke
Is better to me than golde.

JOHN WILSON. On the authority of Austin Dobson, to whom Wilson, an old London bookseller, stated that he had written this stanza as a motto for one of his second-hand book catalogues. First published in Alexander Ireland's Book Lover's Enchiridion, 1883, as an "old English song," and was so called by Sir John Lubbock, who used it as the heading for Ch. iii, The Pleasures of Life, 1887. (See Notes and Queries, Nov., 1919, p. 297.)

5 Often have I sighed to measure
By myself a lonely pleasure,
Sighed to think I read a book
Only read, perhaps, by me.

WORDSWORTH, To the Small Celandine.

6 My Book and Heart Shall never part.
UNKNOWN, The New England Primer.

IX—Books: Bibliomania

7 As it hath been wisely noted, the most corrected copies are commonly the least correct.
BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

8 A big book is a great evil. (Μέγα βιβλίον μέγα κακόν.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragmenta Incertæ. No. 359.

A fig for big books! We like only the little format which slips into the pocket. (Fi des gros livres!
Nous ne voulons plus que de petit format qui marche avec nous.)

JULES JANIN, Le Livre, 109.

Books that you may carry to the fire, and hold readily in your hand, are the most useful after all.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (HAWKINS, Johnsoniana.
No. 197.)

9 Great collections of books are subject to certain accidents besides the damp, the worms, and the rats; one not less common is that of the borrowers, not to say a word of the purloiners.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Bibliomania.

I mean your borrowers of books—those mutilators of collections, spoilers of the symmetry of shelves, and creators of odd volumes.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Two Races of Men.

Such is the sad fate of each lent book—often it is lost, always it is spoilt. (Tel est le triste sort de tout livre prêté, Souvent il est perdu, toujours il est gâté.)

NODIER, Lines Written for Pixerecourt.

10 Not as ours the books of old—
Things that steam can stamp and fold;
Not as ours the books of yore—
Rows of type, and nothing more.

AUSTIN DOBSON, To a Missal of the Thirteenth Century.

11 What wild desires, what restless torments seize

The hapless man, who feels the book-disease!

JOHN FERRIAR, The Bibliomania, l. 1.

How pure the joy when first my hands unfold
The small, rare volume, black with tarnished
gold.

JOHN FERRIAR, The Bibliomania.

The princeps copy, clad in blue and gold.

JOHN FERRIAR, The Bibliomania.

In red morocco drest he loves to boast
The bloody murder; or the yelling ghost;
Or dismal ballads, sung to crowds of old,
Now cheaply bought for thrice their weight in gold.

JOHN FERRIAR, The Bibliomania.

12 Yon second-hand bookseller is second to none in the worth of the treasures which he dispenses.

LEIGH HUNT, On the Beneficence of Bookstalls.

13 Blest be the hour wherein I bought this book;
His studies happy that composed the book,

And the man fortunate that sold the book.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.
Act i, sc. 1.

1 Wear the old coat and buy the new book.

AUSTIN PHELPS, The Theory of Preaching.

2 A book? O rare one!

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 133.

3 You two are book-men.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc.
2, l. 35.

We turn'd o'er many books together.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 156.

The bookish theoretic.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 24.

That book in many's eyes doth share the glory,
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 3,
l. 91.

4 You shall see them on a beautiful quarto page, where a neat rivulet of text shall meander through a meadow of margin.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act i, sc. 1.

But every page having an ample marge,
And every marge enclosing in the midst
A square of text that looks a little blot.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 667.

Or where the pictures for the page atone,
And Quarles is sav'd by beauties not his own.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 139.

5 Thee will I sing, in comely wainscot bound,
And golden verge enclosing thee around;
The faithful horn before, from age to age
Preserving thy invaluable page;
Behind, thy patron saint in armour shines,
With sword and lance, to guard thy sacred lines; . . .

Th' instructive handle's at the bottom fix'd
Lest wrangling critics should pervert the text.

THOMAS TICKELL, The Hornbook, l. 7.

Their books of stature small they take in hand,
Which with pellucid horn secured are;
To save from fingers wet the letters fair.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, The Schoolmistress. St.
18.

6 This boke is one thing, the halter another;
He that stealeth the one may be sure of the other.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, dating from 1578.

Steal not this book, my honest friend,
For fear the gallows be thine end.

UNKNOWN, Book Inscription.

Steal not this book, for fear of shame,
For it is in the owner's name;
And when you're dead, the Lord will say,
"Where is that book you stole away?"

UNKNOWN, Book Inscription.

X—Books: The Author and His Book

7 When I am dead, I hope it may be said:

"His sins were scarlet, but his books were read."

HILAIRE BELLOC, On His Books.

8 Some said, John, print it; others said, Not so;
Some said, It might do good; others said, No.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book.

9 Go now, my little Book, to every place Where my first Pilgrim has but shown his face.

Call at their door. If any say, "Who's there?"
Then answer thou "Christiana is here."

BUNYAN, *The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's
Way of Sending Forth His Second Part*.

Now may this little Book a blessing be
To those that love this little Book and me:
And may its buyer have no cause to say,
His money is but lost or thrown away.

BUNYAN, *The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's
Way of Sending Forth His Second Part*.

10 'Tis pleasant, sure, to see one's name in print;
A book's a book, although there's nothing
in't.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 51.

11 O little book, thou art so unconning,
How dar'st thou put thyself in press for dread?

CHAUCEUR [?], The Flower and the Leaf, l. 591.

Nor will suffer this book, By hook or by crook, Printed to be.

JOHN SKELTON, Duke of Clout.

12 Wouldst thou find my ashes? Look
In the pages of my book;
And, as these thy hands doth turn,
Know here is my funeral urn.

ADELAIDE CRAFTSEY, The Immortal Residue.

13 Better 'twere my book were dead
Than to live not perfected.

ROBERT HERRICK, His Request to Julia.

Thou art a plant sprung up to wither never,
But, like a laurel, to grow green forever.

ROBERT HERRICK, To His Booke.

14 The best part of every author is in general to be found in his book.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (HILL, Johnsonian Miscel-lanies, ii, 310.)

15 Pray thee, take care, that tak'st my book in hand,

To read it well; that is, to understand.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 1.

16 All the doings of mankind, their vows, their fears, their angers and their pleasures, their joys and their goings to and fro, shall form the motley subject of my book. (Quidquid agunt homines, votum tomor ira voluptas Gaudia discursus, nostri farrago libelli est.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 85.

1
I like you and your book, ingenious Hone!
In whose capacious all-embracing leaves
The very marrow of tradition's shown;
And all that history, much that fiction,
weaves.

CHARLES LAMB, To the Editor of the Every-Day Book.

2
The readers and the hearers like my books,
And yet some writers cannot them digest;
But what care I? for when I make a feast,
I would my guests should praise it, not the cooks.

(Lector et auditor nostros probat, Aule, libellos,
Sed quidam exactos esse poeta negat.
Non nimium curo: nam cenæ fercula nostræ
Malim convivis quam placuisse cocis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 81. (Sir John Harington, tr.)

3
I have not made my book more than my book has made me. (Je n'ay pas plus fait mon livre, que mon livre m'a fait.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 18.

All the world may know me by my book, and my book by me.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

4
Go, little Book! from this my solitude;
I cast thee on the waters,—go thy ways:
And if, as I believe, thy vein be good,
The World will find thee after many days.
Be it with thee according to thy worth:
Go, little Book! in faith I send thee forth.

SOUTHEY, Lay of the Laureate: L'Envoi.

"Go, little book, from this my solitude!
I cast thee on the waters,—go thy ways!
And if, as I believe, thy vein be good,
The world will find thee after many days."
When Southey's read, and Wordsworth understood,

I can't help putting in my claim to praise—
The first four rhymes are Southey's, every line:
For God's sake, reader! take them not for mine.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 222.

5
O, let my books be then the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast; . . .

O, learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxiii.

6
Go, little book, and wish to all
Flowers in the garden, meat in the hall,
A bit of wine, a spice of wit,
A house with lawns enclosing it,

A living river by the door,
A nightingale in the sycamore!
R. L. STEVENSON, Envoy.

Go, songs, for ended is our brief, sweet play;
Go, children of swift joy and tardy sorrow:

And some are sung, and that was yesterday,
And some unsung, and that may be to-morrow.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Envoy.

8
Then falter not, O book, fulfil your destiny,
You not a reminiscence of the land alone,
You too as a lone bark cleaving the ether,
purpos'd

I know not whither, yet ever full of faith.

WALT WHITMAN, In Cabin'd Ships at Sea.

Camerado, this is no book,
Who touches this touches a man, . . .
It is I you hold and who holds you,
I spring from the pages into your arms.

WALT WHITMAN, So Long.

9
Go forth, my little book! pursue thy way;
Go forth, and please the gentle and the good.
WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour on the Continent. No. 38.

Reader, farewell! My last words let them be—
If in this book Fancy and Truth agree;
If simple Nature trained by careful Art
Through It have won a passage to thy heart;
Grant me thy love, I crave no other fee!

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 39.

BOOTH, EDWIN

10
That face which no man ever saw
And from his memory banished quite,
With eyes in which are Hamlet's awe
And Cardinal Richelieu's subtle light.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Sargent's Portrait of Edwin Booth at "The Players."

In narrow space, with Booth, lie housed in death
Iago, Hamlet, Shylock, Lear, Macbeth.
If still they seem to walk the painted scene,
'Tis but the ghosts of those that once have been.

T. B. ALDRICH, The Grave of Edwin Booth.

11
Take with thee, too, our bond of gratitude
That in a cynic and a tattling age
Thou didst consent to write, in missal script,
Thy name on the poor players' slandered page,

And teach the lords of empty birth a king
may walk the stage.

ALICE BROWN, Edwin Booth.

12
But as for all the rest,
There's hardly one (I may say none) who stands the Artist's test.
The Artist is a rare, rare breed. There were but two, forsooth,

In all me time (the stage's prime!) and The Other One was Booth.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, The Other One Was Booth.

BORES

<sup>1</sup> Bore; a person who talks when you wish him to listen.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

<sup>2</sup> For ennui is a growth of English root,
Though nameless in our language: we retort
The fact for words, and let the French translate

That awful yawn which sleep can not abate.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, l. 101.

<sup>3</sup> Description is always a bore, both to the describer and to the describee.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Home Letters. Letter vii.

<sup>4</sup> The bore is usually considered a harmless creature, or of that class of irrational bipeds who hurt only themselves.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Thoughts on Bores.

<sup>5</sup> To inflict anyone with a compulsory interview of more than ten minutes indicates a crude state of civilization.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Social Aims.

<sup>6</sup> And she became a bore intense
Unto her love-sick boy.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

<sup>7</sup> All men are bores, except when we want them.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

<sup>8</sup> A tedious person is one a man would leap a steeple from, gallop down any steep hill to avoid.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Impertinens.

<sup>9</sup> We often pardon those who bore us, but never those whom we bore. (Nous pardonnons souvent à ceux qui nous ennuiant, mais nous ne pouvons pardonner à ceux que nous ennuyons.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 304.

One is bored almost always by those persons with whom one is not permitted to be bored. (On s'ennuie presque toujours avec les gens avec qui il n'est pas permis de s'ennuyer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 352.

We are nearly always most bored by those whom we bore. (On s'ennuie presque toujours avec ceux que l'on ennue.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 555.

Extreme boredom serves to cure boredom. (L'extrême ennui sert à nous désennuyer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 532.

<sup>10</sup> And so dull that the men who retailed them out-doors

Got the ill name of augurs, because they were bores.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 54.

There was one feudal custom worth keeping, at least,

Roasted bores made a part of each well-ordered feast.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1226.

<sup>11</sup> Meanwhile I inly curse the bore
Of hunting still the same old coon.

J. R. LOWELL, Without and Within.

<sup>12</sup> The well bred man should never consent to become a bore. (Dedecet ingenuos tædia ferre sui.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 530.

<sup>13</sup> So sweetly mawkish, and so smoothly dull.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 171.

<sup>14</sup> That old hereditary bore, the steward.

SAMUEL ROGERS, A Character.

<sup>15</sup> Again I hear that creaking step!—
He's rapping at the door!

Too well I know the boding sound
That ushers in a bore.

J. G. SAXE, My Familiar.

I do not tremble when I meet
The stoutest of my foes,

But Heaven defend me from the friend
Who comes—but never goes!

J. G. SAXE, My Familiar.

He says a thousand pleasant things,—
But never says "Adieu."

J. G. SAXE, My Familiar.

In vain I speak of urgent tasks;
In vain I scowl and pout;

A frown is no extinguisher—
It does not put him out!

J. G. SAXE, My Familiar.

<sup>16</sup> O, he is as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife;

Worse than a smoky house: I had rather live
With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far,

Than feed on cates and have him talk to me
In any summer-house in Christendom.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 159.

Faith! he must make his stories shorter
Or change his comrades once a quarter.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 95.

<sup>17</sup> The secret of being a bore is to tell everything. (Le secret d'ennuyer est celui de tout dire.)

VOLTAIRE, L'Enfant Prodigue: Preface.

Every species of mankind is good except the bore species. (Tous les genres sont bons hors le genre ennuyeux.)

VOLTAIRE, L'Enfant Prodigue: Preface.

One must always aim at being interesting rather than exact; for the spectator forgives everything except dreariness. (Il faut toujours songer à être intéressant plutôt qu'exact; car le spectateur pardonne tout, hors la langueur.)

VOLTAIRE, Cædipe. Lettre iv.

Repose is a good thing, but boredom is its brother. (Le repos est un bon chose, mais l'ennui est son frère.)

VOLTAIRE.

BORROWING AND LENDING

See also Debt. For literary borrowing see Plagiarism

I—Borrowing

CATO, Fragments. No. 79. (SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cxix, sec. 2.)

<sup>3</sup> Be not made a beggar by banqueting upon borrowing.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xviii, 33.

The borrower runs in his own debt.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

<sup>4</sup> Borrowing thrives but once.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>5</sup> Two things thou shalt not long for, if thou love a mind serene:—

A woman to thy wife, though she were a crownèd queen;

And the second, borrowed money,—though the smiling lender say

That he will not demand the debt until the Judgment Day.

IBN JEMIN, Epigram. (Emerson, tr.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act ii, sc. 9.

<sup>7</sup> Money borrowed is soon sorrowed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Who goeth a-borrowing, goeth a-sorrowing.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandrie: September's Abstract. (1580).

He that goes a-borrowing, goes a-sorrowing.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

<sup>8</sup> Who quick be to borrow, and slow be to pay, Their credit is naught, go they never so gay.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandrie, 83.

<sup>9</sup> Let us all be happy, and live within our means, even if we have to borrow the money to do it.

ARTEMUS WARD, Natural History.

II—Borrowing: Lending

<sup>10</sup> Give, and you may keep your friend if you lose your money; lend, and the chances are that you lose your friend if ever you get back your money.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtoniana. Essay xxi.

Lend money to an enemy, and thou'lt gain him; to a friend, and thou'lt lose him.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1740.

<sup>11</sup> A small sum makes a debtor, a larger sum an enemy. (Æs debitorem leve, gravior inimicum facit.)

LABERIUS. See also under BENEFIT.

<sup>12</sup> He who prefers to give Linus the half of what he wishes to borrow, rather than lend him the whole, prefers to lose only the half. (Dimidium donare Lino quam credere totum Qui mavolt, mavolt perdere dimidium.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 75.

What you lend is lost.

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 43.

Lend only what you can afford to lose.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Who lends loseth double.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 217.

Very often he that his money lends

Loses both his gold and his friends.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 4.

What we spent we had; what we gave we have; what we lent is lost.

UNKNOWN, New Help to Discourse, 250. (1669)

See also under GIFT.

<sup>13</sup> A good man sheweth favour, and lendeth.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxii, 5.

<sup>14</sup>

In low simplicity

He lends out money gratis and brings down

The rate of usance here with us in Venice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 44.

<sup>15</sup>

If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not

As to thy friends; for when did friendship take

A breed for barren metal of his friend?

But lend it rather to thine enemy;

Who, if he break, thou mayst with better face Exact the penalty.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 133.

Out of my lean and low ability

I'll lend you something.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 378.

<sup>16</sup>

That may be claim'd again which was but lent,

And should be yielded with no discontent,

Nor surely can we find herein a wrong,

That it was left us to enjoy it long.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, The Lent Jewels.

<sup>1</sup> The holy passion of Friendship is of so sweet and steady and loyal and enduring a nature that it will last through a whole lifetime, if not asked to lend money.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

UNKNOWN, Reliq. Antiquæ. i, 113. (c. 1320.)

<sup>3</sup> God bless pawnbrokers!
They are quiet men.

MARGUERITE WILKINSON, Pawnbrokers.

Brothers, Wardens of City Halls,
And Uncles, rich as three Golden Balls
From taking pledges of nations.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg, l. 275.

III—Borrowing and Lending

<sup>4</sup> I hae naething to lend—
I'll borrow frae naeboddy.

BURNS, I Hae a Wife.

<sup>5</sup> I come to borrow what I'll never lend
And buy what I'll never pay for.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, The Wits. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>6</sup> Generally speaking, among sensible persons, it would seem that a rich man deems that friend a sincere one who does not want to borrow his money; while, among the less favored with fortune's gifts, the sincere friend is generally esteemed to be the individual who is ready to lend it.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. v, ch. 1.

<sup>7</sup> Creditors have better memories than debtors.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

<sup>8</sup> The best way to keep your friends is to never owe them anything and never lend them anything. (Le meilleur moyen de conserver vos amis est de rien leur devoir et de ne jamais leur prêter.)

PAUL DE KOCK, L'Homme aux Trois Culottes. Ch. 3.

<sup>9</sup> The human species, according to the best theory I can form of it, is composed of two distinct races, the men who borrow, and the men who lend.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Two Races of Men.

<sup>10</sup> The borrower is the servant to the lender.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 7.

<sup>11</sup> Believe me, it is a godlike thing to lend; to owe is a heroic virtue. (Croyez que chose divine est prester; debvoir est vertu heroïque.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

Nature hath created man to no other end but to lend and to borrow. (Nature n'a crée l'homme que pour prester et emprunter.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

No man is so rich that he may not sometimes owe, and none so poor but that one may sometimes borrow of him. (Il n'est si riche qui quelquefois ne doibve; il n'est si pauvre de qui quelquefois on ne puisse emprunter.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

<sup>12</sup> Neither a borrower nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 75.

Lend less than thou owest.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 133.

<sup>13</sup> 'Tis a very good world that we live in,
To lend, or to spend, or to give in;
But to beg or to borrow, or get a man's own,
'Tis the very worst world that ever was known.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, Epigram.

BOSTON

<sup>14</sup> A Boston man is the east wind made flesh.
THOMAS APPLETON. (Attr.)

<sup>15</sup> And this is good old Boston,
The home of the bean and the cod,
Where the Lowells talk to the Cabots,
And the Cabots talk only to God.
J. C. BOSSIDY, On the Aristocracy of Harvard.

Then here's to the City of Boston,
The town of the cries and the groans,
Where the Cabots can't see the Kabotschniks,
And the Lowells won't speak to the Cohns.
FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, Revised.

Here's to the town of New Haven,
The home of the Truth and the Light,
Where God talks to Jones in the very same tones
That He uses with Hadley and Dwight.
F. S. JONES, On the Democracy of Yale.

<sup>16</sup> Boston's a hole, the herring-pond is wide,
V-notes are something, liberty still more.
ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium."

<sup>17</sup> The rocky nook with hill-tops three Looked eastward from the farms,
And twice each day the flowing sea
Took Boston in its arms.
EMERSON, Boston. St. 1.

The sea returning day by day
Restores the world-wide mart;
So let each dweller on the Bay
Fold Boston in his heart,
Till these echoes be choked with snows,
Or over the town blue ocean flows.
EMERSON, Boston. St. 20.

<sup>18</sup> We say the cows laid out Boston. Well, there are worse surveyors.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

One day, through the primeval wood,
A calf walked home, as good calves should;
But made a trail all bent askew,
A crooked trail, as all calves do. . . .
This forest trail became a lane,
That bent, and turned, and turned again, . . .
And this, before men were aware,
A city's crowded thoroughfare; . . .
And men two centuries and a half
Trode in the footsteps of that calf.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The Calf-Path.

1 Boston State-house is the hub of the solar system. You couldn't pry that out of a Boston man if you had the tire of all creation straightened out for a crow-bar.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6.

The axis of the earth sticks out visibly through the center of each and every town and city.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6.

2 Full of crooked little streets; but I tell you Boston has opened, and kept open, more turnpikes that lead straight to free thought and free speech and free deeds than any other city of live men or dead men.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

That's all I claim for Boston,—that it is the thinking center of the continent, and therefore of the planet.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 4.

I never thought he would come to good, when I heard him attempting to sneer at an unoffending city so respectable as Boston.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 11.

The heart of the world beats under the three hills of Boston.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table, Ch. 12.

3 Solid men of Boston, banish long potations!
Solid men of Boston, make no long orations!

CHARLES MORRIS, Pitt and Dundas's Return to London from Wimbledon. Published in 1840, in a collection of Morris's ballads called Lyra Urbanica. The reference is to the Boston, in Lincolnshire, England, after which Boston, Mass., was named.

Solid men of Boston, make no long orations;
Solid men of Boston, drink no long potations;
Solid men of Boston, go to bed at sundown;
Never lose your way like the loggerheads of London.

UNKNOWN, Billy Pitt and the Farmer. Printed in Debrett's Asylum for Fugitive Pieces, in 1786, without author's name.

A solid man of Boston;
A comfortable man with dividends,
And the first salmon and the first green peas.

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act iv.

4 Boston is a state of mind.

MARK TWAIN [?]. Also attributed to Emerson and Thomas G. Appleton.

5 Massachusetts has been the wheel within New England, and Boston the wheel within Massachusetts. Boston therefore is often called the "hub of the world," since it has been the source and fountain of the ideas that have reared and made America.

REV. F. B. ZINCKLE, Last Winter in the United States. (1868)

BOY AND BOYHOOD

See also Children, Youth

6 My object will be, if possible, to form Christian men, for Christian boys I can scarcely hope to make.

THOMAS ARNOLD, Letter, written in 1828 when appointed headmaster of Rugby.

7 And six little singing boys—dear little souls!
In nice clean faces, and nice white stoles.

R. H. BAREHAM, The Jackdaw of Rheims.

8 Ah! happy years! once more who would not be a boy!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 23.

One of the best things in the world to be is a boy; it requires no experience, but needs some practice to be a good one.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, Being a Boy. Ch. 1.

9 Few boys are born with talents that excel,
But all are capable of living well.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 509.

10 I only know two sorts of boys. Mealy boys and beef-faced boys.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 14.

11 That boy is blest,
Whose infant lips have drain'd a mother's breast;
But happier far are those, (if such be known),
Whom both a father and a mother own.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 177.

12 God bless all little boys who look like Puck,
With wide eyes, wider mouths and stick-out ears,
Rash little boys who stay alive by luck
And Heaven's favor in this world of tears.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Blessing on Little Boys.

13 The boy stood on the burning deck
Whence all but him had fled;
The flame that lit the battle's wreck,
Shone round him o'er the dead.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Casabianca.

1
Has there any old fellow got mixed with the boys?

If there has, take him out, without making a noise.

O. W. HOLMES, The Boys.

Shall we always be youthful, and laughing, and gay,

Till the last dear companion drops smiling
away?

Then here's to our boyhood, its gold and its gray!
The stars of its winter, the dews of its May!

O. W. HOLMES, The Boys.

O for one hour of youthful joy!
Give back my twentieth spring!
I'd rather laugh, a bright-haired boy,
Than reign, a gray-beard king.

O. W. HOLMES, The Old Man Dreams.

Oh, would I were a boy again,
When life seemed formed of sunny years,
And all the heart then knew of pain
Was wept away in transient tears!

MARK LEMON, Oh, Would I Were a Boy Again.

3
I remember, I remember
The fir trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky;
It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm farther off from heav'n
Than when I was a boy.

THOMAS HOOD, I Remember, I Remember.

Oh, when I was a tiny boy
My days and nights were full of joy,
My mates were blithe and kind!
No wonder that I sometimes sigh
And dash a tear-drop from my eye
To cast a look behind!

THOMAS HOOD, A Retrospective Review.

My eyes are dim with childish tears,
My heart is idly stirred,
For the same sound is in my ears
Which in those days I heard.

WORDSWORTH, The Fountain, l. 29.

4
The boy who just knows how to talk and set firm foot to ground, delights to play with his mates, flies into a passion and as lightly puts it aside, and changes every hour. (Reddere qui voces jam scit puer et pede certo Signat humum, gessit paribus colludere, et iram Col-ligit ac ponit temere et mutatur in horas.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 158.

5
Let no foul word or sight cross the threshold wherein there is a boy. . . . Great reverence is due to boyhood. (Nil dictu fœdum visuque hæc limina tangat, intra quæ puer est. . . .
Maxima debetur puero reverentia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 44.

6
I do be thinking God must laugh
The time He makes a boy;

All element the creatures are,
And divilment and joy.

WINIFRED M. LETTS, Boys.

7
I remember the gleams and glooms that dart
Across the school-boy's brain;
The song and the silence in the heart,
That in part are prophecies, and in part
Are longings wild and vain.

And the voice of that fitful song
Sings on, and is never still:

"A boy's will is the wind's will,
And the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts."

LONGFELLOW, My Lost Youth. St. 7.

Perhaps there lives some dreamy boy, untaught
In schools, some graduate of the field or street,
Who shall become a master of the art,
An admiral sailing the high seas of thought.

LONGFELLOW, Possibilities.

8
When I was a beggarly boy
And lived in a cellar damp,
I had not a friend nor a toy,
But I had Aladdin's lamp.
J. R. LOWELL, Aladdin.

I knew the streets of Rome and Troy,
I sup'd with Fates and Furies;
Twelve years ago I was a boy,
A happy boy, at Drury's.
W. M. PRAED, School and Schoolfellows.

9
The smiles and tears of boyhood's years,
The words of love then spoken.

THOMAS MOORE, Oft in the Stilly Night.

10
O, 'tis a parlous boy;
Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable;
He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 154.

Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 211.

11
When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act v, sc. 1, l. 398.

Two lads that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 63.

12
How rude are the boys that throw pebbles and mire.

ISAAC WATTS, Innocent Play.

13
Blessings on thee, little man,
Barefoot boy, with cheek of tan!
With thy turned-up pantaloons,
And thy merry whistled tunes.

WHITTIER, The Barefoot Boy

Oh, for boyhood's time of June,
Crowding years in one brief month.
WHITTIER, The Barefoot Boy.

<sup>1</sup> The sweetest roamer is a boy's young heart.
GEORGE E. WOODBERRY, Agathon.

<sup>2</sup> O dearest, dearest boy! my heart
For better lore would seldom yearn,
Could I but teach the hundredth part
Of what from thee I learn.

WORDSWORTH, Anecdote for Fathers, l. 57.

<sup>3</sup> Boys are boys, and employ themselves with boyish matters. (Sunt pueri pueri, pueri

He brake the whole staff of bread.

Old Testament: Psalms, cv, 16.

Behold, I will break the staff of bread in Jerusalem: and they shall eat bread by weight, and with care; and they shall drink water by measure, and with astonishment.

Old Testament: Ezekiel, iv, 16. See also Ezekiel, v, 16; xiv, 13.

The stay and the staff, the whole stay of bread, and the whole stay of water.

Old Testament: Isaiah, iii, 1.

Corn, which is the staff of life.

EDWARD WINSLOW, Good Newses from New England, p. 47. (1624)

Here is bread, which strengthens man's heart, and therefore called the staff of life.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Psalm civ.

"Bread," says he, "dear brothers, is the staff of life."

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub. Sec. iv.

<sup>2</sup> When you came, you were like red wine and honey,

And the taste of you burnt my mouth with its sweetness.

Now you are like morning bread,

Smooth and pleasant.

I hardly taste you at all, for I know your savor;

But I am completely nourished.

AMY LOWELL, A Decade.

<sup>3</sup> Give us this day our daily bread.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 11.

Back of the loaf is the snowy flour,

And back of the flour the mill,

And back of the mill is the wheat and the shower

And the sun and the Father's will.

MALTBIE D. BABCOCK, Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread.

<sup>4</sup> Bread and cheese be two targets against death.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Health's Improvement, p. 236. (1655)

I love not the humour of bread and cheese.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 140.

Be fair conditioned and eat bread with your pudding.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 79.

<sup>5</sup> In one hand he carries a stone, and with the other offers bread. (Altera manu fert lapidem, panem ostentat altera.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 195. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

A favor roughly bestowed by a hard man is bread made of stone.

FABIUS VERRUCOSUS. (SENECA, De Beneficiis, ii, 7.)

What man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 9.

The poet's fate is here in emblem shown, He asked for bread, and he received a stone.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Epigrams: On Butler's Monument in Westminster Abbey.

Robbie asked for bread when he was alive; now that he is dead, they give him a stone.

Comment attributed to Burns's mother when informed that a monument was to be erected to him by his countrymen.

BREVITY

DEMOSTHENES, referring to Phocion, who was celebrated for his conciseness. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion. Ch. 5, sec. 4.)

Bilin' down his repoort, wuz Finnigin!

An' he writed this here: "Musther Flannigan:

Off agin, on agin,

Gone agin.—Finnigin."

STRICKLAND GILLILAN, Finnigin to Flannigan.

<sup>7</sup> Let thy speech be short, comprehending much in few words.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxii, 8.

<sup>8</sup> A good discourse is that from which nothing can be retrenched without cutting into the quick.

ST. FRANCIS DE SALES, On Eloquence.

<sup>9</sup> Few were his words, but wonderfully clear. (Παῖρα μὲν, ἀλλὰ μάλα λιγέως.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 214.

<sup>10</sup> Every word that is superfluous flows away from the full mind. (Omne supervacuum pleno de pectore manat.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 337.

There is need of brevity, that the thought may run on. (Est brevitatem opus, ut currat sententia.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 9.

You reply, as your custom is, in few words. (Respondes, ut tuus est mos, Pauca.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 60.

<sup>11</sup> In laboring to be brief, I become obscure. (Brevis esse laboro, obscurus fio.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 25.

For brevity is very good,

Where we are, or are not understood.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 669.

<sup>12</sup> Let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay.

New Testament: James, v, 12.

Let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay.
New Testament: Matthew, v, 37.

Use not vain repetitions.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 7.

It is a foolish thing to make a long prologue,
 and to be short in the story itself.

Apocrypha: II Maccabees, ii, 32.

He who writes couplets wishes, I suppose, to please by brevity. But what is the use of brevity, tell me, when there is a whole book of it? (Disticha qui scribit, puto, vult brevi-tate placere. Quid prodest brevitatis, dic mihi, si liber est?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 29.

In the eloquence of the bar, nothing pleases so much as brevity. (Nihil æque in causis agendis, ut brevitatis, placet.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 20.

As man is now constituted, to be brief is almost a condition of being inspired.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 141.

Since brevity is the soul of wit,
 And tediousness the limbs and outward flour-ishes,

I will be brief.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 90.

Brevity is the soul of drinking, as of wit.

CHARLES LAMB, John Woodvil. Ch. iii.

It is better to be brief than tedious.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 88.

Not that the story need be long, but it will take a long while to make it short.

H. D. THOREAU, Letter to a friend.

Too poor for a bribe, and too proud to importune,

He had not the method of making a fortune.

THOMAS GRAY, Sketch of His Own Character.

15

Turn from the glitt'ring bribe thy scornful eye,

Nor sell for gold what gold could never buy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 87.

Won by bribes, by flatteries implor'd,
 The groom retails the favours of his lord.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 180.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 87.

Shall we now

Contaminate our fingers with base bribes?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 24.

But they wavered not long, for conscience was strong,

And they thought they might get more;
And they refused the gold, but not
So rudely as before.

BROOK

7 A noise like of a hidden brook
In the leafy month of June,
That to the sleeping woods all night
Singeth a quiet tune.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. v, st. 18.

Over the stones to lull and leap
Herding the bubbles like white sheep;
The claims of worry to deny,
And whisper sorrow into sleep.

GRACE HAZARD CONKLING, The Whole Duty of Berkshire Brooks.

8 Shallow brooks that flow'd so clear
The bottom did the top appear.

DRYDEN, To the Pious Memory of Mrs. Anne Killigrew, l. 110.

9 The streams, rejoic'd that winter's work is done,

Talk of to-morrow's cowslips as they run.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Village Patriarch: Spring.

And in the hush we joined to make
We heard, we knew we heard the brook.

ROBERT FROST, Going for Water.

10 From Helicon's harmonious springs
A thousand rills their mazy progress take.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy, l. 3.

Myriads of rivulets hurrying thro' the lawn.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vii, l. 205.

11 Sweet are the little brooks that run
O'er pebbles glancing in the sun,
Singing in soothing tones.

THOMAS HOOD, Town and Country. St. 9.

I heard a little water, and oh, the sky was blue,
A little water singing as little waters do.

And pore upon the brook that babbles by.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 104.

13 I wandered by the brookside,
I wandered by the mill;

I could not hear the brook flow,
The noisy wheel was still.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, The Brookside.

14 And liquid lapse of murmuring streams.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 263.

15 He makes sweet music with th' enamell'd
stones,

Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage,
And so by many winding nooks he strays
With willing sport to the wild ocean.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 7, l. 28. (1594)

Gently running, made sweet music with the enamel'd stones and seemed to give a gentle kiss to every sedge he overtook in his watery pilgrimage.

RICHARD JOHNSON, Seven Champions of Christendom. (1597)

16 I chatter, chatter, as I flow
To join the brimming river,

For men may come and men may go,
But I go on for ever.

TENNYSON, The Brook, l. 47.

1 Brook! whose society the poet seeks,
Intent his wasted spirits to renew;
And whom the curious painter doth pursue
Through rocky passes, among flowery creeks,
And tracks thee dancing down thy water-breaks.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 31.

2 Few men, drinking at a rivulet, stop to consider its source.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Gifts.

Before we drink much at a brook, it is well to know its source.

died while ye were smiling!

E. B. BROWNING, Cowper's Grave. St. 2.

4 I think, am sure, a brother's love exceeds
All the world's loves in its unworldliness.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Blot in the 'Scutcheon.
Act ii, sc. 1.

5 Affliction's sons are brothers in distress;
A brother to relieve, how exquisite the bliss!

ROBERT BURNS, A Winter Night. St. 8.

And when with grief you see your brother stray,
Or in a night of error lose his way,
Direct his wandering and restore the day. . . .
Leave to avenging Heaven his stubborn will,
For, O, remember, he's your brother still.

11 Am I my brother's keeper?

Old Testament: Genesis, iv, 9.

12 I do not hunger for a well-stored mind,
I only wish to live my life, and find
My heart in unison with all mankind.

EDMUND GOSSE, Lying in the Grass.

13 Let brotherly love continue.

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 1.

14 To-day, old friend, remember still
That I am Joe and you are Bill.

O. W. HOLMES, Bill and Joe.

15 There with a communal zeal we both had strove

In acts of dear benevolence and love;
Brothers in peace, not rivals in command.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 241. (Pope, tr.)

Between them was mutual love, and side by side they were wont to rush into battle. (His amor unus erat pariterque in bella ruebant.)

22 Wherefore to colliers, carters, and cokes,
To Jack and Tom my rhyme shall be directed.

SIR DAVID LINDSAY, Dialog Betwixt Experience and a Courteour. Sig. A 8. (1552)

Of the maimed, of the halt and the blind in the rain and the cold—

Of these shall my songs be fashioned, my tales be told.

JOHN MASEFIELD, A Consecration.

1 Then none was for a party;
Then all were for the state;
Then the great man helped the poor,
And the poor man loved the great:
Then lands were fairly portioned;
Then spoils were fairly sold:
The Romans were like brothers
In the brave days of old.
MACAULAY, Horatius. St. 32.

2 The crest and crowning of all good,
Life's final star, is Brotherhood.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Brotherhood.
There is a destiny which makes us brothers;
None goes his way alone.
EDWIN MARKHAM, A Creed.

3 We two have talked our hearts out to the embers,
And now go hand in hand down to the dead.
JOHN MASEFIELD, The Faithful.

4 The time shall come When man to man shall be a friend and
brother.
GERALD MASSEY, Hope On, Hope Ever.

5 Fellowship is heaven, and lack of fellowship is hell; fellowship is life, and lack of fellowship is death; and the deeds that ye do upon the earth, it is for fellowship's sake that ye do them.
WILLIAM MORRIS, A Dream of John Ball. Ch. 4.

6 To count the life of battle good,
And dear the land that gave you birth;
And dearer yet the brotherhood
That binds the brave of all the earth.
HENRY NEWBOLT, Clifton Chapel.

7 So great is the strife between brothers. (Tanta est discordia fratrū.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 60.

8 We two form a multitude. (Nos duo turba sumus.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 355. Referring to Deucalion and Pyrrha after the deluge.

One man with a dream, at pleasure,
Shall go forth and conquer a crown;
And three with a new song's measure
Can trample an empire down.
ARTHUR O'SHAUGHNESSY, The Music-Makers.

Three men, together riding,
Can win new worlds at their will;
Resolute, ne'er dividing,
Lead, and be victors still.
Three can laugh and doom a king,
Three can make the planets sing.
MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Three.

9 Heav'n forming each on other to depend,
A master, or a servant, or a friend,
Bids each on other for assistance call,

Till one man's weakness grows the strength of
all.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 249.

10 The younger brother hath the more wit.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

11 We few, we happy few, we band of brothers.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 60.
Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur?
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 2, l. 9.

12 Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 256.

13 No one can be perfectly free till all are free;
no one can be perfectly moral till all are moral; no one can be perfectly happy till all are happy.
HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30, sec. 16. Last sentence.

While there is a lower class I am in it. While there is a criminal class I am of it. While there is a soul in prison I am not free.

BROWN, JOHN

<sup>1</sup> I am fully persuaded that I am worth inconceivably more to hang than for any other purpose.

JOHN BROWN, Speech, at his trial, 2 Nov., 1859.

<sup>2</sup> John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave,

His soul is marching on!

CHARLES SPRAGUE HALL, John Brown's Body.
Sometimes attributed to Frank E. Jerome.

John Brown died on the scaffold for the slave;
Dark was the hour when we dug his hallowed
grave;

Now God avenges the life he gladly gave,
Freedom reigns to-day!

EDNA DEAN PROCTOR, John Brown.

<sup>3</sup> The death of Brown is more than Cain killing Abel: it is Washington slaying Spartacus.
VICTOR HUGO, A Word Concerning John Brown
to Virginia, 2 Dec., 1859.

<sup>4</sup> But, Virginians, don't do it! for I tell you that the flagon,

Filled with blood of Old Brown's offspring, was first poured by Southern hands;
And each drop from Old Brown's life-veins,
like the red gore of the dragon,
May spring up a vengeful Fury, hissing through your slave-worn lands:

And Old Brown, Osawatomie Brown,
May trouble you more than ever, when you've nailed his coffin down!

E. C. STEDMAN, How Old Brown Took Harper's
Ferry. Written Nov., 1859, during Brown's trial.

But high let our standard flout it!
"Sic semper"—the drop comes down—

And (woe to the rogues that doubt it!)

There's an end of old John Brown!

HENRY HOWARD BROWNELL, The Battle of Charlestown.

<sup>5</sup> John Brown of Ossawatomie, they led him out
to die;

And lo! a poor slave-mother with her little child pressed nigh.

Then the bold, blue eye grew tender, and the old harsh face grew mild,

As he stooped between the jeering ranks and kissed the negro's child!

The shadows of his stormy life that moment fell apart;

And they who blamed the bloody hand forgave the loving heart.

That kiss from all its guilty means redeemed
the good intent,

And round the grisly fighter's hair the martyr's aureole bent!

WHITTIER, Brown of Ossawatomie.

Compassionate eyes had our brave John Brown,
And a craggy stern forehead, a militant frown;
He, the storm-bow of peace, give him volley on volley,

The fool who redeemed us once of our folly,
And the smiter that healed us, our right John Brown!

LOUISE IMOGEN GUINEY, John Brown: A Para- dox.

<sup>6</sup> I, John Brown, am now quite certain that the crimes of this guilty land will never be purged away but with Blood.

JOHN BROWN, Last Statement, made in writing the day of his execution, 2 Dec., 1859.

BROWNING, ROBERT

<sup>7</sup> Or from Browning some "Pomegranate," which, if cut deep down the middle,

Shows a heart within blood-tinctured, of a veined humanity.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.
St. 41.

<sup>8</sup> And, Robert Browning, you writer of plays,
Here's a subject made to your hand!

ROBERT BROWNING, A Light Woman.

<sup>9</sup> Great-hearted son of the Titan mother, Earth,
Fed at her breast,

He builded upward from the solid ground,
While listening ever for the heavenly sound
Of higher voices, to his soul addressed.

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Robert Browning.

<sup>10</sup> Still fares he forth from dawn-lit paths dewpearled,

A singing pilgrim through a sighing world.

JAMES B. KENYON, Robert Browning.

<sup>11</sup> Browning! Since Chaucer was alive and hale, No man hath walk'd along our roads with step

So active, so inquiring eye, or tongue

So varied in discourse.

W. S. LANDOR, To Robert Browning.

<sup>12</sup> Yet few poets were so mated before and no poet was so mated afterward, until Browning stooped and picked up a fair-coined soul that lay rusting in a pool of tears.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Shelley, p. 38.

<sup>13</sup> He used poetry as a medium for writing in prose.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. Pt. i. Referring to Browning.

BRYAN, WILLIAM JENNINGS

<sup>14</sup> The boy orator of the Platte.

W. J. CONNELL. Derisive description given to William Jennings Bryan during Congressional campaign of 1890.

The Platte—six inches deep and six miles wide at the mouth.

SENATOR JOSEPH B. FORAKER, Speech, during campaign against Bryan, 1896.

1 His civic laurels will not yield in splendor to the brightest chaplet that ever bloomed upon a warrior's brow.

HENRY T. LEWIS, Speech, nominating Bryan, 11 July, 1896. Lewis was quoting Prentiss, who said the same thing of Henry Clay.

2 Bryan's hold on the West lay in the fact that he was in himself the average man of a large part of that country; he did not merely resemble that average man, he was that average man.

CHARLES WILLIS THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 41.

Colonel George Harvey, with sarcastic intent, once alleged mendaciously that Bryan became a white ribboner because he heard a little girl recite, "The Lips That Touch Liquor Shall Never Touch Mine."

CHARLES WILLIS THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 42.

He [Bryan] was a progressive who never progressed—mentally. I never saw the least indication that he ever learned anything, either in Europe or at home, at any time in his mature life.

CHARLES WILLIS THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 91.

3 Would that we could do something at once dignified and effective to knock Mr. Bryan once for all into a cocked hat.

WOODROW WILSON, Letter to Adrian H. Joline, 29 April, 1907. Given to public by Joline in January, 1912. (See Literary Digest, 20 Jan., 1912.)

BURDEN

See also Care

4 Oh, there are moments for us here, when seeing

Life's inequalities, and woe, and care,
The burdens laid upon our mortal being
Seem heavier than the human heart can bear.

WILLIS G. CLARK, A Song of May.

5 But wilt thou measure all thy road,
See thou lift the lightest load.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

6 Every horse thinks his own pack heaviest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Each one thinks his lot the worst; but he is mistaken. If he thought himself the worst of the lot he might be right.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars.

7 And when the porter bends beneath his load,
And pants for breath, clear thou the crowded road.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 49.

Respect the burden, Madam.

NAPOLEON, to Mrs. Balcombe, at St. Helena, when some servants carrying heavy boxes, passed in their way. (O'MEARA, Napoleon at St. Helena.)

8 Bear ye one another's burdens.

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 2.

Every man shall bear his own burden.

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 5.

Let every pedlar carry his own burden.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9 None knows the weight of another's burden.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Light burdens, long borne, grow heavy.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

10 I would rather have a big burden and a strong back, than a weak back and a caddy to carry life's luggage.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xx, p. 26.

11 Money and time are the heaviest burdens of life, and the unhappiest of all mortals are those who have more of either than they know how to use.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 30.

12 How many weak shoulders have craved heavy burdens! (Combien d'épaules sans force ont demandé de lourds fardeaux!)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 201.

God giveth the shoulder according to the burden. (Gott giebt die Schultern nach der Bürde.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

The back is made for the burden.

CARLYLE. Quoted as "a pious adage."

13 Take up the White Man's burden—

No tawdry rule of kings,

But toil of serf and sweeper—

The tale of common things.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The White Man's Burden.

14 Equal to us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day.

New Testament: Matthew, xx, 12.

15 Light grows the burden which is well borne. (Leve fit, quod bene fertur, onus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 2, l. 10.

The burden one likes is cheerfully borne.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

16 To support the burden, you must strive with head erect; if your sinews yield, you will fall. (Sustineas ut onus, nitendum vertice pleno est, Aut, flecti nervos si patiere, cades.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 7, l. 77.

1 It is base to flinch under a burden. (Turpe est cedere oneri.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, sec. 7.

2 A load would sink a navy, too much honour;
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 383.

3 The burden is equal to the horse's strength.
Talmud. Sota 13.

An ass endures his burden, but not more than his burden.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 The strength will with the burden grow.
TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln.

5 Place the burden on the slow-paced ass. (Onus segni impone asello.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb. See also Ass.

BURKE, EDMUND

6 Here lies our good Edmund, whose genius was such,
We scarcely can praise it, or blame it too much;
Who, born for the Universe, narrow'd his mind,
And to party gave up what was meant for
mankind:
Though fraught with all learning, yet straining his throat
To persuade Tommy Townshend to lend him a vote; . . .

Though equal to all things, for all things unfit;
Too nice for a statesman, too proud for a wit;
For a patriot, too cool; for a drudge, disobedient;
And too fond of the right to pursue the expedient.
In short, 'twas his fate, unemploy'd or in place, Sir,
To eat mutton cold, and cut blocks with a razor.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 29.

7 Burke, sir, is such a man that if you met him for the first time in the street, when you were stopped by a drove of oxen, and you and he stepped aside to take shelter but for five minutes, he'd talk to you in such a manner that when you parted you would say, "This is an extraordinary man."

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

8 We could only wish that the years had brought to him . . . a disposition to happiness, a composed spirit to which time has made things clear, an unambitious temper, and hopes undimmed for mankind.

JOHN MORLEY, Burke, p. 299.

9 And the final event to himself has been that,
as he rose like a rocket, he fell like a stick.

THOMAS PAINE, Letter to the Addressers. The phrase was afterwards appropriated by Lockhart. See under DICKENS.

BURNS, ROBERT

10 Oh, but the mountain breeze must have been pleasant

Upon the sunburnt brow

Of that poetic and triumphant peasant
Driving his laureled plow!

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Robert Burns.

11 The poor inhabitant below
Was quick to learn and wise to know,
And keenly felt the friendly glow,
And softer flame;
But thoughtless follies laid him low,
And stain'd his name.

ROBERT BURNS, A Bard's Epitaph.

12 Misled by a Fancy's meteor ray,
By Passion driven;
But yet the light that led astray,
Was light from Heaven.

ROBERT BURNS, The Vision. Duan ii, st. 18.

But ne'er to a seductive lay
Let faith be given,
Nor deem that "light which leads astray
Is light from heaven."

WORDSWORTH, To the Sons of Burns.

13 And rustic life and poverty
Grew beautiful beneath his touch. . . .
Whose lines are mottoes of the heart,
Whose truths electrify the sage.

CAMPBELL, Ode to the Memory of Burns.

14 A Burns is infinitely better educated than a Byron.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Note Book, 2 Nov., 1831.

Burns of all poets is the most a Man.

DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI, On Burns.

15 Such graves as his are pilgrim shrines,
Shrines to no code or creed confined,—
The Delphian vales, the Palestines,
The Meccas of the mind.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Burns. St. 32.

16 The century shrivels like a scroll,—
The past becomes the present,—
And face to face, and soul to soul,
We greet the monarch-peasant. . . .

We praise him, not for gifts divine,—
His Muse was born of woman,—

His manhood breathes in every line,—
Was ever heart more human?

O. W. HOLMES, For the Burns Centennial Celebration.

<sup>1</sup>'Tis but a cot roofed in with straw, a hovel built of clay;

One door shuts out the snow and storm, one window greets the day.

And yet I stand within this room and hold all thrones in scorn.

For here, beneath this lowly thatch, love's sweetest bard was born.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Burns Cottage in Ayr.

<sup>2</sup>Each little lyrical
Grave or satirical
Musical miracle!

F. L. KNOWLES, On a Fly-Leaf of Burns's Songs.

<sup>3</sup>A dreamer of the common dreams,
A fisher in familiar streams,
He chased the transitory gleams
That all pursue;

But on his lips the eternal themes
Again were new.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Tomb of Burns.

He came when poets had forgot
How rich and strange the human lot;
How warm the tints of Life; how hot
Are Love and Hate:

And what makes Truth divine, and what Makes Manhood great.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Tomb of Burns.

His greatness, not his littleness,
Concerns mankind.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Tomb of Burns.

<sup>4</sup>Give lettered pomp to teeth of Time,
So "Bonnie Doon" but tarry:

Blot out the epic's stately rhyme,
But spare his Highland Mary!

WHITTIER, Burns. St. 29.

<sup>5</sup>I mourned with thousands, but as one
More deeply grieved, for he was gone
Whose light I hailed when first it shone,
And showed my youth

How verse may build a princely throne
On humble truth.

WORDSWORTH, At the Grave of Burns. St. 6.

That carpet-dusting, though a pretty trade,
Is not the imperative labour after all.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 878.

The buying and the selling, and the strife
Of little natures.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, De Berney.

1 I care not a fig for the cares of business;
Politics fill me with doubt and dizziness.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Fine Weather on the Di-gentia. St. 4.

2 Thou shalt not covet: but tradition
Approves all forms of competition.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, The Latest Decalogue.

3 Hackney'd in business, wearied at that oar
Which thousands, once fast chain'd to, quit
no more.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 1.

Stamps God's own name upon a lie just made,
To turn a penny in the way of trade.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 420.

4 We must hold a man amenable to reason for the choice of his daily craft or profession. It is not an excuse any longer for his deeds that they are the custom of his trade. What business has he with an evil trade? Has he not a calling in his character?

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

The ways of trade are grown selfish to the borders of theft, and supple to the borders (if not beyond the borders) of fraud.

EMERSON, *Nature Addresses and Essays: Man
the Reformer*.

5 Why so serious, why so grave?
Man of business, why so muddy?
Thyself from chance thou canst not save
With all thy care and study.
Look merrily then, and take thy repose:
For 'tis to no purpose to look so forlorn,
Since the world was as bad before thou wert
born,

And when it will mend who knows?

THOMAS FLATMAN, A Thought of Death.

6 When a man's business does not fit him, 'tis as ofttimes with a shoe—if too big for the foot it will trip him, if too small, will chafe.
(Cui non conveniet sua res, ut calceus olim, Si pede major erit, subvertet, si minor, uret.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 42.

14 There is nothing more requisite in business than despatch.

ADDISON, The Drummer. Act v, sc. 1.

15 Of all virtues for rising to honour, quickness of despatch is the best; for superiors many times love not to have those they employ too deep or too sufficient, but ready and diligent.

FRANCIS BACON, *Advancement of Learning:
Civil Knowledge*. Sec. 9.

16 Business dispatched is business well done,
but business hurried is business ill done.

BULWER-LYTON, Caxtoniana: Readers and Writers.

17 Despatch is the soul of business.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

18 Cecil's despatch of business was extraordinary, his maxim being, "The shortest way to do many things is to do only one thing at once."

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 9.

V—Business and Busyness

19 Nowhere so busy a man as he there was,
And yet he seemed busier than he was.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 321.

<sup>1</sup> Who more busy than he that hath least to do?
THOMAS DRAKE, Biblio. Scho. Inst., 20. (1633)

<sup>2</sup> To be too busy gets contempt.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>3</sup> Without any sort of business, is forever busy. (Sans aucune affaire, est toujours affairé.)
MOLIÈRE, Le Misanthrope. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 30.

<sup>4</sup> Nor will he be in business for the mere sake of being busy. (Nec in negotiis erit negotii causa.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, 8.

<sup>5</sup> No one is so busy as the man who has nothing to do. (Il n'y a pas de gens plus affairés que ceux qui n'ont rien à faire.)
UNKNOWN. A French proverb. See also LEISURE.

BUTCHER

<sup>6</sup> He would have made a good butcher, but for the by-blow.

<sup>7</sup> Butchers! whose hands are dy'd with blood's foul stain,

And always foremost in the hangman's train.
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 43.

<sup>8</sup> Whoe'er has gone thro' London Street,
Has seen a Butcher gazing at his meat,
And how he keeps
Gloating upon a sheep's
Or bullock's personals, as if his own;
How he admires his halves
And quarters—and his calves,
As if in truth upon his own legs grown;—
His fat! his suet!

His kidneys peeping elegantly thro' it!
THOMAS HOOD, A Butcher.

Of brutal juices the whole man is full.—
In fact, fulfilling the metempsychosis,
The Butcher is already half a Bull.

THOMAS HOOD, A Butcher.

<sup>9</sup> A sturdy man he look'd to fell an ox,
Bull-fronted, ruddy, with a formal streak
Of well-greas'd hair down either cheek.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 428.

<sup>10</sup> Where is that devil's butcher?
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 5, l. 77.

Like to a mortal butcher bent to kill.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 618.

<sup>11</sup> The butcher looked for his knife and it was in his mouth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 1.

He'd with his candle look for his knife,
Which he had in his mouth.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, iii, 321.

<sup>12</sup> Beef on the butcher's stall, the slaughter-house of the butcher, the butcher in his killing-clothes.

WALT WHITMAN, A Song For Occupations. Sec. v, l. 26.

<sup>13</sup> Begot by butchers, but by bishops bred,
How high his honour holds his haughty head.
UNKNOWN, Epigram on Wolsey.

BUTTERCUP

<sup>14</sup> The royal kingcup bold
Dares not don his coat of gold.
EDWIN ARNOLD, Almond Blossoms.

<sup>15</sup> He likes the poor things of the world the best;
I would not, therefore, if I could, be rich.
It pleasures him to stoop for buttercups.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 210.

<sup>16</sup> All will be gay when noontide wakes anew
The buttercups, the little children's dower.

ROBERT BROWNING, Home Thoughts from Abroad.

<sup>17</sup> When daisies and buttercups gladdened my sight,

Like treasures of silver and gold.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Field Flowers.

<sup>18</sup> The buttercups across the field
Made sunshine rifts of splendor.
DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, A Silly Song.

<sup>19</sup> The buttercups, bright-eyed and bold,
Held up their chalices of gold
To catch the sunshine and the dew.
JULIA C. R. DORR, Centennial Poem, l. 165.

<sup>20</sup> I'm called little Buttercup,
Dear little Buttercup,
Though I could never tell why.
W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act i.

<sup>21</sup> Buttercups and daisies,
Oh, the pretty flowers;
Coming ere the spring time,
To tell of sunny hours. . . .
He who gave them hardships
And a life of care,
Gave them likewise hardy strength
And patient hearts to bear.
MARY HOWITT, Buttercups and Daisies.

<sup>22</sup> And O the buttercups! that field
O' the cloth of gold, where pennons swam— . . .

What was it to their matchless sheen,
Their million million drops of gold
Among the green!
JEAN INGELow, The Letter L: Present. St. 3.

<sup>23</sup> And still a tiny fan turns
Above a forge of gold,

To keep, with fairy lanterns,
The world from growing old.
WILFRED THORLEY, Buttercups.

BUTTERFLY

<sup>1</sup> I'd be a butterfly, born in a bower,
Where roses and lilies and violets meet.
THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, I'd Be a Butterfly.

<sup>2</sup> And all about her wheeled and shone
Butterflies all gold.
JOHN DAVIDSON, Butterflies.

<sup>3</sup> I'll make my joy like this Small Butterfly;
Whose happy heart has power
To make a stone a flower.
WILLIAM H. DAVIES, The Example.

<sup>4</sup> Thou spark of life that wavest wings of
gold,
Thou songless wanderer mid the songful
birds,
With Nature's secrets in thy tints unrolled. . . .
Thou winged blossom, liberated thing, . . .
But thou art Nature's freeman.
T. W. HIGGINSON, Ode to a Butterfly.

<sup>5</sup> We saw a snow-white butterfly
Dancing before the fitful gale,
Far out at sea.
RICHARD HENGIST HORNE, Genius.

<sup>6</sup> There was never a Queen like Balkis,
From here to the wide world's end;
And Balkis talked to a butterfly
As you would talk to a friend.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Just-So Stories: The Butterfly that Stamped.

<sup>7</sup> There will be butterflies,
There will be summer skies
And flowers upthrust,
When all that Cæsar bids,
And all the pyramids
Are dust.
HANIEL LONG, Butterflies.

<sup>8</sup> The butterfly, an idle thing,
Nor honey makes, nor yet can sing. . . .
And though from flower to flower I rove,
My stock of wisdom I'll improve,
Nor be a butterfly.
ADELAIDE O'KEEFE, The Butterfly.

<sup>9</sup> Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel?
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 308.

<sup>10</sup> Exquisite child of the air.
ALICE FREEMAN PALMER, The Butterfly.

<sup>11</sup> This was your butterfly, you see—
His fine wings made him vain:

The caterpillars crawl, but he Passed them in rich disdain.—
My pretty boy says, "Let him be Only a worm again!"
SARAH M. B. PIATT, After Wings.

<sup>12</sup> What more felicity can fall to creature
Than to enjoy delight with liberty,
And to be lord of all the works of Nature?
EDMUND SPENSER, Muiopotmos, Or the Fate of the Butterfly, l. 209.

<sup>13</sup> Fly away, butterfly, back to Japan,
Tempt not a pinch at the hand of a man,
And strive not to sting ere you die away.
So pert and so painted, so proud and so pretty,
To brush the bright down from your wings were a pity—

Fly away, butterfly, fly away!
SWINBURNE, To James McNeill Whistler.

<sup>14</sup> Much converse do I find in thee,
Historian of my infancy!
Float near me; do not yet depart!
Dead times revive in thee:
Thou bring'st, gay creature as thou art!
A solemn image to my heart.
WORDSWORTH, To a Butterfly.

What joy awaits you, when the breeze
Hath found you out among the trees,
And calls you forth again!
WORDSWORTH, To a Butterfly.

BYRON, GEORGE GORDON

<sup>15</sup> And poor, proud Byron, sad as grave
And salt as life; forlornly brave,
And quivering with the dart he gave.
E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 412.

<sup>16</sup> And be the Spartan's epitaph on me—
"Sparta hath many a worthier son than he."
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 10.

Even I,—albeit I'm sure I did not know it,
Nor sought of foolscap subjects to be king,—
Was reckon'd, a considerable time,
The grand Napoleon of the realms of rhyme.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 55.

<sup>17</sup> 'Twas his to mourn Misfortune's rudest shock, Scourged by the winds, and cradled on the rock.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 105.

<sup>18</sup> He might have soared, a miracle of mind, Above the doubts that dim our mental sphere,
And poured from thence, as music on the wind,

Those prophet tones, which men had turned to hear,
As if an angel's harp had sung of bliss
In some bright world beyond the tears of this.
WALTER COLTON, Byron.

- 1
Oh, Night doth love her! Oh, the clouds
They do her form environ!
The lightning weeps—it hears her sob,
“Speak to me, Lord Byron!”
EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Speak to Me, Lord Byron.
Referring to the story that Byron refused to speak to his sister for many years before she died.
- 2
He had a head which statuary loved to copy, and a foot the deformity of which the beggars in the street mimicked.
MACAULAY, Essays: Moore's Life of Byron.
- 3
From the poetry of Lord Byron they drew a system of ethics, compounded of misanthro-py and voluptuousness,—a system in which the two great commandments were, to hate your neighbour, and to love your neighbour's wife.
MACAULAY, *Essays: Moore's Life of Lord
Byron*.
- 4
Yes, Byron, thou art gone,
Gone like a star that through the firmament
Shot and was lost, in its eccentric course

- Dazzling, perplexing. Yet thy heart, methinks,
Was generous, noble—noble in its scorn
Of all things low or little; nothing there
Sordid or servile.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: Bologna.
- 5
O mighty mind, in whose deep streams this age
Shakes like a reed in the unheeding storm,
Why dost thou curb not thine own sacred rage?
SHELLEY, Fragment: Addressed to Byron.
- 6
Too avid of earth's bliss, he was of those Whom Delight flies because they give her chase.
Only the odour of her wild hair blows
Back in their faces hungering for her face.
WILLIAM WATSON, Byron the Voluntary.
- 7
My friend the apothecary o'er the way
Doth in his window Byron's bust display.
Once, at Childe Harold's voice, did Europe
bow:
He wears a patent lung-protector now.
WILLIAM WATSON, The Fall of Heroes.

Hail Cæsar, those who are about to die salute thee! (Ave, Cæsar, morituri te salutant!)

The salutation used by the Roman gladiators, as they filed past the imperial box before fighting in the circus. Sometimes given, "Ave, Imperator, morituri te salutamus." (Suetonius, Lives of the Cæsars: Claudius. Ch. xxi, sec. 6.)

Like a parrot, I will learn from you the names of others; but I have learned of myself to say, "Hail, Cæsar." (Psittacus a vobis aliorum nomina discam: Hoc didici per me dicere "Cæsar have.")

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiv, epig. 73.

For other names your lessons may avail:
I taught myself to carol, "Cæsar! hail!"

MARTIAL. xiv, 73. (Elphinston, tr.)

"O Cæsar, we who are about to die Salute you!" was the gladiators' cry In the arena, standing face to face With death and with the Roman populace.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 1.

1 Either Cæsar or nothing. (Aut Cæsar aut nihil.)

The device of Cæsar Borgia.

Cæsar or nothing? We are nothing loath Thus to acclaim him; Cæsar Borgia's both. (Aut nihil aut Cæsar vult dici Borgia. Quidni? Cum simul et Cæsar possit et esse nihil.)

Either Pontifex Maximus or an exile. (Nisi pontificem non reversurum.)

JULIUS CÆSAR, to his mother, on the morning of the election. (Suetonius, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius. Sec. 13.)

II—Cæsar, Julius

2 Cæsar's wife must be above suspicion. (Tum Cæsar . . . respondit: quia suam uxorem etiam suspicione vacare vellet.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Julius Cæsar. Sec. 10.

Cæsar, however, when summoned as a witness, gave no testimony against Clodius, and denied that he had condemned his wife for adultery, but said that he had put her away because Cæsar's wife must be free not only from shameful conduct, but even from shameful report.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Cicero. Ch. 29, sec. 7.

He took to wife Pompeia, daughter of Quintus Pompeius and granddaughter of Lucius Sulla. But he afterward divorced her, suspecting her of adultery with Publius Clodius. . . . When summoned as a witness against Clodius, Cæsar declared that he had no evidence, although both his mother Aurelia and his sister Julia had given the jurors a faithful account of the whole affair; and on being asked why it was then that he had put away his wife, he replied, "Because I maintain that the members of my family should be free from suspicion, as well as from guilt." (Quoniam meos tam suspicione quam crimine judico carere oportere.)

SUETONIUS, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius. Secs. 6 and 74.

3 I hold thee fast, Africa. (Teneo te, Africa.) JULIUS CÆSAR, when he fell on landing in Africa. (Suetonius, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius. Sec. 59.)

By the splendor of God, I have taken seizin of my kingdom: the earth of England is in my two hands.

WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, as he slipped and fell when landing at Pevensey, England, 28 Sept., 1066. (Freeman, Norman Conquest. Vol. iii, ch. 15.)

4 No honor shall make thee worthy of Cæsar's wrath. (Dignum te Cæsaris ira Nullus honor faciet.)

JULIUS CÆSAR, to Metellus. (Lucan, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 136.)

5 Cæsar, in modesty mixed with greatness, did for his pleasure apply the name of a Commentary to the best history of the world.

UNKNOWN, On Cinædi. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 272.)

7 Give, you gods,
Give to your boy, your Cæsar,
This rattle of a globe to play withal,
This gewgaw world, and put him cheaply off.
DRYDEN, All for Love. Act ii, sc. 1.

8 No chief has Rome so loved, nor thee so much, Cæsar, as now; thee too, albeit she would, she cannot now love more. (Nullum Roma ducem, nec te sic, Cæsar, amavit: Te quoque jam non plus, ut velit ipsa, potest.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 11.

Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 23.

9 Ask why from Britain Cæsar would retreat? Cæsar himself might whisper he was beat. Why risk the world's great empire for a punk? Cæsar perhaps might answer, he was drunk.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 129.

10 Cæsar was held great because of his benefactions and lavish generosity. Cæsar gained glory by giving, helping, and forgiving. Finally, Cæsar had schooled himself to work hard and sleep little, to devote himself to the welfare of his friends and neglect his own, to refuse nothing that was worth the giving. He longed for great power, an army, a new war to give scope to his merit.

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. 54, sec. 2.

<sup>8</sup> With strength and patience all his grievous loads are borne, And from the world's rose-bed he only asks a thorn.

WILLIAM R. ALGER, Mussud's Praise of the Camel.

<sup>9</sup> Yon dumb patient camel, Keeping a reserve of scanty water, Meant to save his own life in the desert; Ready in the desert to deliver (Kneeling down to let his breast be opened) Hoard and life together for his mistress.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 11.

<sup>10</sup> There's never a question About my digestion, Anything does for me!

C. E. CARRYL, The Complaint of the Camel.

A Camel's all lumpy And bumpy and humpy— Any shape does for me!

C. E. CARRYL, The Complaint of the Camel.

ERASMUS, Adagia. Cent. v, sec. 8. A translation of a Greek proverb, Apostolius, ix, 8, 43.

<sup>12</sup> The last straw breaks the camel's back.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5120.

As the last straw breaks the laden camel's back.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 2.

<sup>13</sup> Old camels carry young camels' skins to market.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>14</sup> The camel at the close of day Kneels down upon the sandy plain To have his burden lifted off, And rest again.

ANNA TEMPLE, The Kneeling Camel.

<sup>15</sup> Patient of thirst and toil, Son of the desert.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 965.

<sup>16</sup> The camel, even when mangy, bears the burden of many asses. (Κάμηλος καὶ ψωρώσα πολλῶν ὄνων ἀνατίθεται φορτία.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb.

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb, applied to a person disporting himself in some ridiculous way.

CANDLE

<sup>18</sup> A candle lights others and consumes itself.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 283.

<sup>19</sup> I light my candle from their torches.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 5, subs. 1.

Light another's candle, but don't put out your own.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>20</sup> To enlarge or illustrate this . . . is to set a candle in the sun.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 2.

Like his that lights a candle to the sun.

ANDREW FLETCHER, Letter to Sir Walter Aston.

But it is not necessary to light a candle to the sun.

ALGERNON SIDNEY, Discourses on Government. Ch. ii, sec. 23.

<sup>1</sup> And hold up to the sun my little taper.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 21.

Oh! rather give me commentators plain,
Who with no deep researches vex the brain;
Who from the dark and doubtful love to run,
And hold their glimmering tapers to the sun.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register: Introduction. Pt. i.

Some future strain in which the muse shall tell
How science dwindles and how volumes swell.
How commentaries each dark passage shun,
And hold their farthing candle to the sun.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vii, l. 95.

<sup>2</sup> How inferior for seeing with, is your brightest train of fireworks to the humblest farthing candle!

CARLYLE, Essays: Diderot.

CHARLES I, of Spain, reading upon the tombstone of a Spanish grandee, "Here lies one who never knew fear." (BOSWELL, Johnson, 1769.)

<sup>4</sup> His candle burns within the socket.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræm. Anglo-Latina, 279.

<sup>5</sup> The smallest candle fills a mile with its rays, and the papillæ of a man run out to every star.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>6</sup> Tace, madam, is Latin for candle.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. i, ch. 10.

Brandy is Latin for a goose and Tace is Latin for a candle.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (According to Notes and Queries, 6 Dec., 1851, this expression is much older and occurs in Dampier's Voyages, 1686.)

<sup>7</sup> He consuming just like a candle on both ends, between wine and women.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Enigmatic Characters, p. 64. (1658)

The butler and steward were in a confederacy and burnt the candle at both ends.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas, iii, 116. (Smollet, tr.)

My candle burns at both ends;

It will not last the night;

But ah, my foes, and oh, my friends—

It gives a lovely light!

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, A Few Figs from Thistles: First Fig.

<sup>8</sup> Sith Nature thus gave her the praise,
To be the chiefest work she wrought,

In faith, methink, some better ways

On your behalf might well be sought,

Than to compare, as ye have done,

To match the candle with the sun.

HENRY HOWARD, Sonnet to the Fair Geraldine.

<sup>9</sup> Be of good comfort, Master Ridley, and play the man. We shall this day light such a candle, by God's grace, in England, as I trust shall never be put out.

HUGH LATIMER, at the stake, to Nicholas Ridley, who was burned with him, 16 Oct., 1555. (The Martyrdom, p. 523.) Hume (History of England. Ch. 37) gives a slightly different version.

<sup>10</sup> Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 15.

Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick?

New Testament: Mark, iv, 21.

And useless as a candle in a skull.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 785.

<sup>11</sup> He that is worst may still hold the candle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Must I hold a candle to my shames?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 41.

I'll be a candle-holder, and look on.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 38.

<sup>12</sup> Thus hath the candle singed the moth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 79.

<sup>13</sup> And then, exulting in their taper, cry,
"Behold the sun;" and, Indian-like, adore!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 779.

CANDOR

I—Candor: Definitions

<sup>14</sup> 'Tis not my talent to conceal my thoughts,
Or carry smiles and sunshine in my face,
When discontent sits heavy at my heart.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4.

You know I say
Just what I think, and nothing more nor less, . . .

I cannot say one thing and mean another.

LONGFELLOW, Giles Corey. Act ii, sc. 3.

<sup>15</sup> Gracious to all, to none subservient,
Without offence he spake the word he meant.

T. B. ALDRICH, The Sisters' Tragedy.

ANACHARSIS, who was a Scythian, and so frank, that this phrase became a synonym for frankness. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Anacharsis, 1.)

<sup>17</sup> Without, or with, offence to friends or foes,

I sketch your world exactly as it goes.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 89.

But now I'm going to be immoral; now
I mean to show things really as they are,
Not as they ought to be.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 40.

I was so free with him as not to mince the
matter.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote: Author's Preface.

We use great plainness of speech.

New Testament: II Corinthians, iii, 12.

"Not to put too fine a point upon it"—a favourite apology for plain-speaking with Mr.
Snagsby.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 11.

Speak boldly, and speak truly, shame the devil.

FLETCHER, Wit Without Money. Act iv, sc. 4.

Do all things like a man, not sneakingly:
Think the king sees thee still; for his King does.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 21.

Frankness is a natural quality. (La franchise est une qualité naturelle.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 108.

Speak out, hide not thy thoughts. ('Ἐξαύδα, μὴ κεύθε νόῳ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 363.

He spake, and into every heart his words
Carried new strength and courage.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 586. (Bryant, tr.)

Be not ashamed to say what you are not ashamed to think. (Non pudeat dicere, quod non pudet sentire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. Quoted.

His heart's his mouth:
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 257.

He hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper, for what his heart thinks his tongue speaks.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 13.

He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 166.

I want that glib and oily art,
To speak and purpose not.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act 1, sc. 1, l. 227.

Henceforth my wooing mind shall be expressed
In russet yeas and honest kersey noes.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc.
2, l. 412.

He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier; and now is he turned orthographer; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 19.

I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 53.

Speak frankly as the wind.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
3, l. 253.

II—Candor: Its Virtues

Always be ready to speak your mind, and a base man will avoid you.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Candour, who, with the charity of Paul,
Still thinks the best, whene'er she thinks at all,
With the sweet milk of human kindness
bless'd,

The furious ardour of my zeal repress'd.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 55.

Blunt tools are sometimes found of use where sharper instruments would fail.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 24.

There is no wisdom like frankness.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iv, ch. 9.

Frankness invites frankness.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

Feign'd Zeal, you saw, set out with speedier
pace,

But, the last heat, Plain Dealing won the race.

DRYDEN, Albion and Albanus: Epilogue.

Nothing astonishes men so much as common sense and plain dealing.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Art.

There's a brave fellow! There's a man of pluck!

A man who's not afraid to say his say,
Though a whole town's against him.

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act ii, sc. 2.

I blurt ungrateful truths, if so they be,
That none may need to say them after me.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis.

We drank the pure daylight of honest speech.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 48.

Open rebuke is better than secret love.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 5.

For when I dinna clearly see,
I always own I dinna ken,

An' that's the way o' wisest men.

ALLAN RAMSAY, The Clock and Dial.

1 I had rather seal my lips, than, to my peril,
Speak that which is not.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 145.

2 Innocence in genius and candor in power are both noble qualities.

MADAME DE STAËL, Germany. Pt. ii, ch. 8.

3 On an occasion of this kind it becomes more than a moral duty to speak one's mind. It becomes a pleasure.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act ii.

4 Come, give us your plain-dealing fellows,
Who never from honesty shrink,
Not thinking of all they should tell us,
But telling us all that they think.
UNKNOWN, The Broderer's Song.

III—Candor: Its Dangers

5 Candor, my tepid Friend,
Come not to play with me!
The Myrrhs and Mochas of the Mind
Are its Iniquity.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 109.

6 A man that should call everything by its right name, would hardly pass the streets without being knocked down as a common enemy.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 246.

7 Nothing is more useful to man than to speak truly, yet candor is apt to be twisted to its own destruction. (Utilius homini nihil est, quam recte loqui; Sed ad perniciem solet agi sinceritas.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 12, l. 1.

8 Plain-dealing is a jewel, and he that useth it shall die a beggar.

HENRY PORTER, Two Angry Women of Abington. (1599)

Plain-dealing is a jewel.

WYCHERLEY, Country Wife. Act iv, sc. 3.

Plain dealing is the best when all is done.

WILLIAM PRYNNE, Histrionastix, iii, 1.

9 Candor and generosity, unless tempered by due moderation, lead to ruin. (Simplicitas ac liberalitas, ni adsit modus, in exitum vertuntur.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iii, sec. 86.

10 Complaisance gets us friends, plain-speaking hate. (Obsequium amicos, veritas odium parit.)

TERENCE, Andria. Act i, sc. 1, l. 41.

If he persists in telling me whatever he pleases,
he shall hear what he does not wish to hear. (Si

mihi perget quæ volt dicere, ea quæ non volt audiet.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 920. (Act v, sc. 4.)

He that speaketh what he will shall hear what he would not.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, 2. (1539)

11 To be intelligible is to be found out.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act i.

IV—Candor: Spades are Spades

12 To call a fig a fig, and a skiff a skiff. (Τὰ σύκα σύκα, τὴν σκάφην δὲ σκάφην ὀνομάσων.)

ARISTOPHANES. (LUCIAN, *De Conscribend.
Hist.*, 41.) Erasmus (Colloquies: Philetymus et Pseudocheus) puts the phrase into Latin:
"Ficum vocamus ficum, et scapham scapham."

Confutation is my name, the friend of truth and frankness. . . . I call a fig a fig; a skiff a skiff.
(Τὰ σύκα σύκα, τὴν σκάφην σκάφην λέγων.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 545.

The world's too squeamish now to bear plain words;

Concerning deeds it acts with gust enough:

But, thanks to wine-les and democracy,
We've still our stage where truth calls spade a spade!

ROBERT BROWNING, Aristophanes' Apology.

13 A fig's a fig, he calls a spade a spade. (Ficus ficus, ligonem ligonem vocat.)

ERASMUS, Adagiorum Chiliades: Veritas.

14 Which can call . . . a spade a spade.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Garden of Wysdome. Sig.
C 4. (1539)

A loose, plain, rude writer, I call a spade a spade.

ROBERT BURTON, *Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader*.

I cannot say the crow is white,

But needs must call a spade a spade.

HUMPHREY GIFFORD, A Woman's Face is Full of Wiles.

15 Faith we do call a spade a spade in Cornwall.

BEN JONSON, The Magnetic Lady. Act i.

Ramp up my genius, be not retrograde,

But boldly nominate a spade a spade.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act v, sc. 3.

I have learned to call wickedness by its own terms: a fig a fig; and a spade a spade.

JOHN KNOX.

16 The Macedonians are a rude and clownish people that call a spade a spade.

PHILIP OF MACEDON. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms of Kings and Great Commanders: Philip.)

Brought up like a rude Macedon, and taught to call a spade a spade.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Ephemerides of Phialo.
(1579)

1 I think it good plain English, without fraud,
To call a spade a spade, a bawd a bawd.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Kicksey Winsay.

2 I'll give you leave to call me anything, if you don't call me spade.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

3 "Ye can call it influenza if ye like," said Mrs.
Machin. "There was no influenza in my young days. We called a cold a cold."

ARNOLD BENNETT, The Card. Ch. 8.

4 I call a cat a cat and Rolet a rascal. (J'appelle un chat un chat, et Rolet un fripon.)

BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. i, l. 52.

5 I don't complain of Betsy or any of her acts Exceptin' when we've quarreled and told each other facts.

WILL CARLETON, Betsy and I Are Out.

V—Candor: The Candid Friend

6 There is no man so friendless but what he can find a friend sincere enough to tell him disagreeable truths.

BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do with It?
Bk. ii, ch. 14.

7 Give me the avowed, the erect, the manly foe,
Bold I can meet,—perhaps may turn his blow;
But of all plagues, good Heaven, thy wrath can send,

Save, save, oh, save me from the Candid Friend.

GEORGE CANNING, The New Morality.

Many a friend will tell us our faults without reserve, who will not so much as hint at our follies.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, July 1, 1748.

8 I hate him that my vices telleth me.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 662.

To a poor man, men should his vices tell,
But not to a lord, though he should go to hell.

CHAUCER, The Somnours Tale, l. 369.

9 Truly, sir, when a man is ruined, 'tis but the duty of a Christian to tell him of it.

FARQUHAR, The Twin-Rivals. Act i, sc. 1.

10 If a friend telleth thee a fault, imagine always that he telleth thee not the whole.

FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam, i, 47.

barajar.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 23.

13 With spots quadrangular of diamond form,
Ensanguined hearts, clubs typical of strife,
And spades, the emblem of untimely graves.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 217.

14 Cards were at first for benefits designed,
Sent to amuse, not to enslave the mind.

DAVID GARRICK, Epilogue to Ed. Moore's Gamester.

15 When in doubt, win the trick.

EDMOND HOYLE, Twenty-Four Rules for Learners.

16 "A clear fire, a clean hearth, and the rigour of the game." This was the celebrated wish of old Sarah Battle (now with God), who, next to her devotions, loved a good game of whist.
She was none of your lukewarm gamesters, your half-and-half players. . . They do not play at cards, but only play at playing at them. . . . All people have their blind side—their superstitions; and I have heard her declare, under the rose, that Hearts was her favourite suit.

CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's
Opinions on Whist*.

17 If dirt was trumps, what hands you would hold!

CHARLES LAMB, Lamb's Suppers. Vol. ii, last ch.

Soiled by rude hands, who cut and come again.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall: The Widow's Tale, l. 26.

18 It is an old courtesy at the cards, perdy, to let the loser have his word.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works, p. 1018. (1533)

19 See how the world its veterans rewards!
A youth of frolics, an old age of cards.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 243.

You do not play then at whist, sir? Alas, what a sad old age you are preparing for yourself!
(Vous ne jouez donc pas le whist, monsieur?
Hélas! quelle triste vieillesse vous vous préparez!)

TALLEYRAND, Retort, when reproached for his addiction to cards.

20 Ere he took me, I put him to his trumps.

THOMAS SACKVILLE, *Mirror for Magistrates:
Jack Cade*. (1559)

It has put him to his trumps.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Cupid's Revenge.
Act iv, sc. 1.

I will not play my ace of trumps yet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, 2647. (1732)

Ye pallid cares, far hence away! (Pallentes procul hinc abite curæ.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 6, l. 6.
Begone, old Care, and I prithee begone from me;
For i' faith, old Care, thee and I shall never agree.
JOHN PLAYFORD, Musical Companion. Song 13.
20
And ever, against eating cares,
Lap me in soft Lydian airs.
MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 135.
21
Care Sat on his faded cheek.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 601.

Care is beauty's thief.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, Cupid and Psyche.

1 For other things mild Heav'n a time ordains,
And disapproves that care, though wise in
show,

That with superfluous burden loads the day.

MILTON, Sonnet xviii: To Cyriac Skinner.

2 O human cares! What emptiness in the affairs of men! (O curas hominum, O quantum est in rebus inane!)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 1.

3 Banish care from your mind. (Ejicite ex animo curam.)

PLAUTUS, Casina: Prologue, l. 23.

Eat not thy heart, which forbids to afflict our souls, and waste them with vexatious cares.

PLUTARCH, Morals: Of the Training of Children.

Eat not thy heart, that is to say, consume not thyself with cares.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. 54.

4 Fretting cares make grey hairs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Care makes white hairs. (Cura facit canos.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

5 So shaken as we are, so wan with care.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

6 O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 22.

Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 35.

7 His cares are now all ended.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 3.

8 Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 3.

9 Deep-drenched in a sea of care.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1100.

10 Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth,

Where nothing lives but crosses, cares, and grief.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 78.

And is there care in Heaven?

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto viii, st. 1.

11 Care's an enemy to life.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 3, l. 3.

12 I could lie down like a tired child
And weep away the life of care

Which I have borne and yet must bear.

SHELLEY, Stanzas Written in Dejection Near Naples.

13 Those little cares and visionary joys
That so perplex the fond impassion'd heart
Of ever-cheated, ever-trusting man.

JAMES THOMSON, To the Memory of Sir Isaac Newton, l. 154.

14 And care, whom not the gayest can outbrave,
Pursues its feeble victim to the grave.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Childhood. Pt. ii, l. 17.

15 Care to our coffin adds a nail, no doubt;
But every grin so merry draws one out.

JOHN WOLCOT, Expostulatory Odes. Ode 15.

16 Let care kill a cat, We'll laugh and grow fat.
UNKNOWN, Shirburn Ballads, 91. (1585)

What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 135.

Hang sorrow, care'll kill a cat.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 3.

Hang sorrow! care will kill a cat,
And therefore let's be merry.

GEORGE WITHER, Christmas.

CARLYLE, THOMAS

17 A spectre moving in a world of spectres.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Description of himself.

18 He is like a lover or an outlaw who wraps up his message in a serenade, which is nonsense to the sentinel, but salvation to the ear for which it is meant.

EMERSON, Papers from the Dial: Past and Present.

Carlyle, in his strange, half-mad way, has entered the Field of the Cloth of Gold . . . the indubitable champion of England.

EMERSON, Papers from the Dial: Past and Present.

19 A trip-hammer, with an Æolian attachment.

EMERSON, after meeting Carlyle in 1848.

20 These deathless names by this dead snake defiled

Bid memory spit upon him for their sake.
SWINBURNE, After Looking into Carlyle's Reminiscences.

CASTLE

I—Castles on Earth

21 Castles are forests of stone.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

22 A castle, after all, is but a house—
The dullest one when wanting company.

J. S. KNOWLES, The Hunchback. Act iv, sc. 1.

1 This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 6, l. 1.

The rude ribs of that ancient castle.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 32.

2 A castle girt about and bound
With sorrow, like a spell.
SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. vi, st. 25.

II—Castles in the Air

3 The bonnie, bonnie bairn who sits poking in the ase,
Glowring in the fire wi' his wee round face,
Laughing at the fuffin' lowe—what sees he
there?
Ha! the young dreamer's bigging castles in
the air.

JAMES BALLANTINE, Castles in the Air.

For a' sae sage he looks, what can the laddie ken?
He's thinkin' upon naething, like many mighty
men;
A wee thing maks us think, a sma' thing maks us stare;

There are mair folks than him biggin' castles in
the air.

JAMES BALLANTINE, Castles in the Air.

4 Castles in the air cost a vast deal to keep up.
BULWER-LYTTON, Lady of Lyons. Act i, sc. 3.

5 When I build castles in the air,
Void of sorrow, void of fear.
ROBERT BURTON, *Anatomy of Melancholy: The
Author's Abstract*. (1621)

6 Building castles in the air, and making yourself a laughing-stock.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 31.

7 I find the gayest castles in the air that were ever piled, far better for comfort and for use, than the dungeons in the air that are daily dug and caverned out by grumbling, discontented people.

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

8 And castles built above in lofty skies,
Which never yet had good foundation.
GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Steel Glass, p. 55. (1576)

9 There is more pleasure in building castles in the air than on the ground.
EDWARD GIBBON, Miscellaneous Works, i, 278.

10 Castles in the air—they are so easy to take refuge in. And so easy to build, too.

HENRIK IBSEN, The Master Builder. Act iii.

11 Alerand was a building of castles in the air.
WILLIAM PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, i, 266. (1566) This is the earliest known instance of the use in English of this proverbial phrase, of which many examples could be quoted.

As we are wont to say by them that build castles in the air.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apology for Poetry. Par.
12. (1595)

'Tis best to build no castles in the air.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary. Vol. ii, p. 424.

12 If one advances confidently in the direction of his dreams, and endeavors to live the life which he has imagined, he will meet with a success unexpected in common hours. . . .
If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost; that is where they should be. Now put the foundations under them.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 18.

III—Castles in Spain

13 Thou shalt make castles then in Spain,
And dream of joy, all but in vain.

CHAUCER, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 2573.
(c. 1400)

This is the earliest use in English of this proverbial phrase, whose origin is obscure.
Storer (Peter the Cruel, p. 280) ascribes it to the lavish favors bestowed by Don Enrique of Spain. It has been traced back in French literature to the thirteenth century, and Littré thinks the idea is simply that of an imaginary castle in any foreign country. It may have originated from the boastings of Spanish adventurers in France of their lordly residences, which existed only in the imagination. It was used by Charles d'Orléans, Pierre Gringoire, and many others.

He began to make castles in Spain, as lovers do.
WILLIAM CAXTON, Jason, 25. (c. 1477)

14 I fell asleep in the very act of building castles in Spain.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. iii, ch. 76.

15 When I could not sleep for cold,
I had fire enough in my brain,
And builded, with roofs of gold,
My beautiful castles in Spain.
J. R. LOWELL, Aladdin. St. 1.

16 Let me think of building castles in Spain.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

CAT

17 An old cat laps as much milk as a young.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 318.

18 What a monstrous tail our cat hath got!
HENRY CAREY, Dragon of Wantley. Act ii, sc. 1.

19 Who shall hang the bell about the cat's neck?
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.
It is well said, but who will bell the cat?
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

But when the bell was brought and on a collar hung, was no rat in the rout, for all the realm of France, that durst have bound the bell about the cat's neck.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: The Vision of the Field Full of Folk, l. 180. Langland tells the whole fable of the mice who decided to hang a bell to the cat's neck in order to be warned of her approach.

1 Let take a cat, and foster him well with milk
And tender flesh, and make his couch of silk,
And let him see a mouse go by the wall,
Anon he waveth milk, and flesh, and all,
And every dainty which is in that house,
Such appetite hath he to eat a mouse.

CHAUCEUR, Maunciples Tale, l. 71.

The cat, if you but singe her tabby skin,
The chimney keeps, and sits content within:
But once grown sleek, will from her corner run,
Sport with her tail and wanton in the sun:
She licks her fair round face, and frisks abroad
To show her fur, and to be catterwaw'd.

POPE, The Wife of Bath. Prologue, l. 142.

2 Ere a cat could lick his ear.

CHARLES COTTON, Vergil Travestied. Bk. iv. (1664)

3 Mrs. Crupp had indignantly assured him that there wasn't room to swing a cat there; but as Mr. Dick justly observed to me, sitting down on the foot of the bed, nursing his leg, "You know, Trotwood, I don't want to swing a cat. I never do swing a cat. Therefore what does that signify to me!"

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Vol. ii, ch. 6.

4 Confound the cats! All cats—always—
Cats of all colours, black, white, grey;
By night a nuisance and by day—
Confound the cats!

ORLANDO DOBBIN, A Dithyramb on Cats.

5 Turn cat in the pan very prettily.

A muzzled cat never was a good mouser.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605)

7 When the cat is abroad the mice play.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 33. (1578)

When the cat's away The mice will play.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670)

When the cat's gone, the mice grow saucy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5572. (1732)

Well wots the mouse The cat's out of house.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish. (1670)

So it is, and such is life. The cat's away, and the mice they play.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 54.

Playing the mouse in absence of the cat.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 2, l. 172.

8 Is the cat to blame,

If maids be fools with shame?

JOHN FLORIO, Second Fruits. Fo. 41. (1591)

9 Cats hide their claws.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1072.

The cat invites the mouse to a feast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4441.

When the cat winketh,

Little wots the mouse what the cat thinketh.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6453.

Let the cat wink and let the mouse run.

UNKNOWN, World and the Child. (1522)

10 Far in the stillness a cat Languishes loudly.

All cats are grey in the dark.

THOMAS LODGE, A Marguerite of America, l. 56.

By night all cats are gray. (De noche todos los Gatos son pardos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33.

14 A cat may look on a king.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

A halfpenny cat may look at a king.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish. (1670)

15 There are more ways of killing a cat than choking her with cream.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho. Ch. 20.

16 To pull the chestnuts from the fire with the cat's paw. (Tirer les marrons de la patte du chat.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Étourdi. Act iii, sc. 5. The story of the ape using the whelp's foot to get chest-nuts out of the fire was told in 1586 by GEOFFREY WHITNEY, Choice of Emblems, p. 58. It was from this book that Shakespeare gained his knowledge of the foreign emblematisers of the sixteenth century.

Some few that . . . make use of us, as the monkey did of the cat's paw, to scrape the nuts out of the fire.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act v, sc. 4. (1664)

To take the nuts from the fire with the dog's foot.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1732)

1 When I play with my cat, who knows whether I do not make her more sport than she makes me?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

When my Cat and I entertain each other with mutual apish tricks (as playing with a garter), who knows but that I make her more sport than she makes me?

ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler. Ch. 1. (1653)

2 A baited cat may grow as fierce as a lion.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays, p. 305.

3 It has been the providence of Nature to give this creature nine lives instead of one.

PILPAY, The Greedy Cat. Fable iii.

Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 80.

As many lives as a cat.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.

With new reversions of nine lives,
Starts up, and like a cat revives.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 2, l. 1629.

4 It would make a cat laugh.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganza, iv, 148.

5 But thousands die without or this or that,
Die, and endow a college or a cat.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 95. The Duchess of Richmond left annuities for the maintenance of her cats.

6 Never wake a sleeping cat. (N'eveille point le chat qui dort.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i. See also under DOG.

7 The more you rub a cat on the rump, the higher she sets her tail.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 109.

16 A good cat deserves a good rat. (À bon chat bon rat.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb. There is also its opposite: "À mauvais chat mauvais rat."

CAUSE

I—Cause: Apothegms

17 Home of lost causes, and forsaken beliefs, and unpopular names, and impossible loyalties!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Preface. Referring to Oxford University.

Oxford! of whom the poet said

That one of your unwritten laws is

To back the weaker side, and wed

Your gallant heart to wobbling causes.

OWEN SEAMAN, The Scholar Farmer.

18 Greatly unfortunate, he fights the cause
Of honour, virtue, liberty and Rome.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1.

19 A cause may be inconvenient, but it's magnificent. It's like champagne or high shoes, and one must be prepared to suffer for it.

ARNOLD BENNETT, The Tille.

20 Presume to lay their hand upon the ark
Of her magnificent and awful cause.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 231.

21 Great causes are never tried on their merits.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

22 Seeing the root of the matter is found in me.

Old Testament: Job, xix, 28.

23 This cause is to be fought, not pleaded.

PHILIP MASSINGER, Bashful Lover. Act i, sc. 2.

And, confident we have the better cause,
Why should we fear the trial?

PHILIP MASSINGER, Bashful Lover. Act i, sc. 2.

1 Cause me no causes.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act i, sc. 3.

2 To set the Cause above renown,
To love the game beyond the prize,
To honour, while you strike him down,
The foe that comes with fearless eyes.

HENRY NEWBOLT, Clifton Chapel.

3 A man is a lion in his own cause.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

4 Your cause doth strike my heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 6, l. 101.

5 Hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 13.

Mine's not an idle cause.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 2, l. 95.

II—Cause: The Good Cause

6 A good cause needs not to be patron'd by passion, but can sustain itself upon a temperate dispute.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 5.

7 They never fail who die in a great cause.

BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act ii, sc. 2.

In such a cause they could not dare to fear.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 621.

8 Our cause is just, our union is perfect.

JOHN DICKINSON, Declaration on Taking up Arms, 1775. Formerly attributed to Jefferson, but occurs in original manuscript draft in Dickinson's handwriting.

9 A good cause makes a stout heart and a strong arm.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 140.

That cause is strong which has not a multitude,
but one strong man behind it.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy: Books and Libraries.

A just cause is strong.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act iii, l. 3.

10 Pledged to the glory of a mighty cause.

ANGELA MORGAN, Conquerors.

11 The cause is gude and the word's "Fa' on."

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

12 God befriend us, as our cause is just!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 120.

13 A noble cause doth ease much a grievous
cause.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. i.

14 For my sake, do get it into your minds that my cause is a just one. (Mea causa causam hanc justum esse animum inducite.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos: Prologue,
l. 41.

15 The homely beauty of the good old cause.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: O Friend! I Know Not.

III—Cause: The Bad Cause

16 Defend not my deed; a bad cause should be silent. (Nec factum defende meum: mala causa silenda est.)

OVID, Epistolæ ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 1, l. 147.

17 A bad cause will ever be supported by bad means and bad men.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. No. ii.

18 It is a bad cause that asks for mercy. (Mala causa est quæ requirit misericordiam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 346.

19 It's a bad cause that none dare speak in.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

IV—Cause and Effect

20 To know truly is to know by causes. (Vere scire, esse per causas scire.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum.
Pt. ii, bk. ii, aphor. 1. Quoted.

21 The causes of events are ever more interesting than the events themselves. (Semper causæ eventorum magis movent quam ipsa eventa.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. ix, sec. 5.

22 Behind the coarse effect is a fine cause. . . .
Cause and effect are two sides of one fact.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

Cause and effect, means and ends, seed and fruit, cannot be severed; for the effect already blooms in the cause, the end preëxists in the means, the fruit in the seed.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

23 Do not clutch at sensual sweetness until it is ripe on the slow tree of cause and effect.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

Cause and effect, the chancellors of God.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Everything is the cause of itself.

EMERSON, Journals, 1856.

24 To all facts there are laws,
The effect has its cause, and I mount to the cause.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto iii, st. 8.

25 That which follows ever conforms to that which went before. (Τὰ ἐξῆς ἀεὶ τοῖς προηγούμενοις οὐκ ἐκτρέφεται.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 45.

<sup>1</sup> Their cause is hidden, but our woes are clear.
(Causa latet, mala nostra patent.)
OVID, Heroides. Eleg. xxi, l. 53.

The cause is hidden, but the result is known.
(Causa latet, vis est notissima.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 287.

<sup>2</sup> And now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or, rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 100.

<sup>3</sup> There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 1, l. 3.

It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—
It is the cause.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 1.
Thou art the cause, and most accursed effect.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 120.

<sup>4</sup> Happy the man who has been able to understand the causes of things. (Felix, qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 490.

<sup>5</sup> After this, therefore on account of this.
(Post hoc, ergo propter hoc.) False argument from cause to effect from mere precedence of circumstance.

RICHARD WHATELY, Logic, p. 135.

V—Cause: First Cause

<sup>6</sup> The parent of the universe . . . fixed for eternity the causes whereby he keeps all things in order. (Parens rerum . . . Fixit in æternum causas, qui cuncta coerct.)

Spanish Friar. Act iii, sc. 2; RICHARD STEELE,
Tender Husband. Act iii, sc. 2.

As sure as death.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act
ii, sc. 1.

Sure as God made little apples.

NORTHALL, Folk Phrases, p. 11.

Sure as the coat on your back.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 208.

<sup>11</sup> Never take anything for granted.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 5 Oct., 1864.

<sup>12</sup> No great deed is done
By falterers who ask for certainty.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i, last sc.

<sup>13</sup> In this world, nothing is certain but death and taxes.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to M. Leroy, 1789.

There's nothing certain in man's life but this:
That he must lose it.

OWEN MEREDITH, Clytemnestra. Pt. xx.

One thing at least is certain—this life flies:
One thing is certain, and the rest is lies.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 63. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

<sup>14</sup> How shall I hedge myself with certainties?
HELEN FRAZEE-BOWER, Certainties.

But I have certainty enough
For I am sure of you.

AMELIA JOSEPHINE BURR, Certainty Enough.

<sup>15</sup> Such sober certainty of waking bliss.

MILTON, Comus, l. 263.

<sup>16</sup> I will maintain it before the whole world.
(Je le soutiendrai devant tout le monde.)
MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act iv,
sc. 3.

<sup>17</sup> All cares of mortal men did they forget,
Except the vague desire not to die,
The hopeless wish to flee from certainty,
That sights and sounds we love will bring on us

In this sweet fleeting world and piteous.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. v, l. 385.

<sup>18</sup> I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 83.

<sup>1</sup> Wisely and slow: they stumble that run fast.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 3,
l. 94. (1591)

Slowness is sure.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca Scholastica Instructissima, 111. (1633)

These, though slow, were sure.

FULLER, Holy War. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1639)

As he is slow he is sure.

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 140. (1711)

I may be slow, but I am precious sure.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. ii, ch. 5.

TERTULLIAN, De Carne Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 5.
See under BELIEF.

II—Certainty and Uncertainty

<sup>3</sup> If a man will begin with certainties, he will end with doubts; but if he will be content to begin with doubts, he shall end in certainties.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i. See also under DOUBT.

<sup>4</sup> What is more unwise than to mistake uncertainty for certainty, falsehood for truth? (Quid enim stultius quam incerta pro certis habere, falso pro veris?)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 68.

<sup>5</sup> Certainty is the mother of Quietness and Repose; and Incertainty the cause of variance and contentions.

COKE, The Institutes. No. iii, p. 302.

<sup>6</sup> He is a fool who leaves certainties for uncertainties. (Νήπιος ὃς τὰ ἔτοιμα λυπῶν τ' ἀνέτοιμα διώκει.)

ÆSOP. (Attribution by PLUTARCH, ii, 505.)

He that leaves certainty and sticks to chance,
When fools pipe he may dance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6439.

He is no wise man that will quit a certainty for an uncertainty.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 57.

<sup>7</sup> We lose certainties whilst we seek uncertainties. (Certa mittimus, dum incerta petimus.)

<sup>8</sup> The only certainty is that nothing is certain. (Solum certum nihil esse certi.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. ii, 7.

Nothing is more certain than uncertainties.

BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 11.

Nothing is certain but uncertainty. (Rien n'est sûr que la chose incertaine.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

<sup>9</sup> I am not so nice,
To change true rules for old inventions.
SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 80.

CERVANTES SAAVEDRA, MIGUEL DE

<sup>10</sup> Cervantes smiled Spain's chivalry away;
A single laugh demolished the right arm
Of his own country.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 11.

<sup>11</sup> Cervantes on his galley sets the sword back in the sheath
(Don John of Austria rides homeward with a wreath.)

And sees across a weary land a straggling road in Spain,

Up which a lean and foolish knight forever rides in vain.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Lepanto.

<sup>12</sup> Alas! poor Knight! Alas! poor soul possessed!

Yet would to-day, when Courtesy grows chill,
And life's fine loyalties are turned to jest,
Some fire of thine might burn within us still!
Ah! would but one might lay his lance in
rest,

And charge in earnest—were it but a mill.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Don Quixote.

Thou wert a figure strange enough, good lack!
To make Wiseacredom, both high and low, Rub purblind eyes, and (having watched thee go),

Dispatch its Dogberrys upon thy track.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Don Quixote.

<sup>13</sup> Dearest of all the heroes! Peerless knight Whose follies sprang from such a generous blood!

Young, young must be the heart that in thy fight

Beholds no trace of its own servitude.

ARTHUR DAVISON FICKE, Don Quixote.

<sup>14</sup> The peerless knight of La Mancha, whom, by the bye, with all his follies, I love more, and would actually have gone farther to have paid a visit to, than the greatest hero of antiquity.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 10.

<sup>15</sup> I only desire to have follies that are amusing, and am sorry Cervantes laughed chivalry out of fashion.

WALPOLE, Letters: To Sir Horace Mann, 10
July, 1774.

CHANCE

I—Chance: Definitions

<sup>16</sup> Chance is a nickname of Providence. (Le hazard est un sobriquet de la Providence.)

SEBASTIAN-ROCH-NICHOLAS DE CHAMFORT.

1 The ancients . . . exalted Chance into a divinity.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

2 Chance is perhaps the pseudonym of God when He did not want to sign. (Le hasard c'est peut-être le pseudonyme de Dieu, quand il ne veut pas signer.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, Le Jardin d'Epicure, p. 132.

3 That Power Which erring men call Chance.

MILTON, Comus, l. 587.

4 All chance, direction, which thou canst not see.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 290.

5 What is chance but the rude stone which receives its life from the sculptor's hand? Providence gives us chance—and man must mould it to his own designs.

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act iii, sc. 9, l. 13.

6 Chance and valor are blended in one. (Fors et virtus miscetur in unum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 714.

7 To a sensible man, there is no such thing as chance. (Für den Vernünftigen Menschen giebt gar keinen Zufall.)

LUDWIG TIECK, Fortunat.

Chance is a word void of sense; nothing can exist without a cause.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary.

Things do not happen in this world—they are brought about.

WILL H. HAYS, Speech, during campaign of 1918. Featured in New York American, 10 Dec., 1922.

II—Chance: Apothegms

8 "I care not," said Richard, "hap as it hap will."

WILLIAM CAXTON, Sonnes of Aymon, 332. (1489)

Therefore hap good, or hap ill, I will walk on still.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 7. (1599)

9 One hopeless, dark idolater of Chance.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 296.

10 Probabilities direct the conduct of the wise man. (Probabilia . . . sapientis vita regeretur.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 5, sec. 12.

Almost all human life depends on probabilities.

VOLTAIRE, Essays: Probabilities.

11 Work and acquire, and thou hast chained the wheel of Chance.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

12 Chance fights ever on the side of the prudent. (Πάσιν γὰρ εὖ φρονούσι συμμαχεῖ τύχη.)

EURIPIDES, Pirithous. (Adapted.)

Chance usually favors the prudent. (Le hasard est ordinairement heureux pour l'homme prudent.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 147.

13 Chance cannot touch me! Time cannot hush me!

MARGARET WITTER FULLER, Dryad Song.

14 His own chance no man knoweth
But as Fortune it on him throweth.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, vi. (Hence: You never know your luck.)

15 He that leaveth nothing to Chance will do few things ill, but he will do very few things.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 247.

16 There is no chance which does not return.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. See also under OPPORTUNITY.

17 A certain man drew a bow at a venture, and smote the King of Israel.

Old Testament: I Kings, xxii, 34.

Let my disclaiming from a purposed evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house,
And hurt my brother.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 252.

I shot an arrow into the air
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.

LONGFELLOW, The Arrow and the Song.

I shot a rocket in the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where
Until next day, with rage profound,
The man it fell on came around.

TOM MASSON, Enough.

18 What Chance has made yours is not really yours. (Non est tuum, fortuna quod fecit tuum.)

LUCILIUS. (SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. viii, sec. 10.)

19 Chance contrives better than we ourselves. (Τὸ αὐτόματον ἡμῶν καλλίω βουλεύεται.)

MENANDER, Fragments.

20 Everything may happen. (Omnia fieri possent.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 9.

21 Whom chance often passes by, it finds at last. (Quem sæpe transit casus, aliquando invenit.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 328.

22 I shall show the cinders of my spirits

Through the ashes of my chance.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 173.

1 If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 143.

Even in the force and road of casualty.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 30.

2 The dice of Zeus have ever lucky throws. (Ἀεὶ γὰρ εὖ πῖπτουσιν οἱ Διὸς κύβοι.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. No. 763.

The dice of God are always loaded. (Οἱ κύβοι Διὸς δαὶ ἐνπλήττους.)

Proverbial form of the above.

3 A chance may win that by mischance was lost.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Times Go by Turns.

4 Whatever chance shall bring, we will bear it philosophically. (Quod fors feret feremus æquo animo.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 138. (Act i, sc. 2.)

5 Through divers mishaps, through so many perilous chances. (Per varios casus, per tot discrimina-rarum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 204.

6 Use thou thy chance. (Utere sorte tua.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 932.

Grasps the skirts of happy chance.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxiv.

III—Chance: Its Power

7 We do not what we ought,

What we ought not, we do,

And lean upon the thought

That Chance will bring us through.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Empedocles on Etna, l. 237.

Yet they, believe me, who await

No gifts from Chance, have conquer'd Fate.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Resignation, l. 245.

8 How slight a chance may raise or sink a soul!
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town.

And we cry, though it seems to our dearest of foes,

"God, give us another chance."

RICHARD BURTON, Song of the Unsuccessful.

9 Revolving in his altered soul
The various turns of chance below.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast. St. 4.

10 There is a master who, without an effort, surpasses us all, and that master is chance,

ÉMILE GABORIAU, File 113. Ch. 11.

11 Chances rule men and not men chances.

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, ch. 49.

12 Blind chance sweeps the world along. (Cum caeco rapiantur saecula casu.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 446.

Chance and whim govern the world. (La fortune et l'humeur gouvernent le monde.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 435.

Chance governs all.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 910.

Everlasting Fate shall yield to fickle Chance.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 232.

Chance everywhere has power. (Casus ubique valet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 425.

Chance is another master. (Magister alius casus.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis.

13 Chance dispenses life with unequal justice. (Fortuna arbitriis tempus dispensat iniquis.)

OVID, Consolatio ad Livium, l. 371.

All the affairs of men hang by a slender thread; and sudden chance brings to ruin what once was strong. (Omnis sunt hominum tenui pendentia filo, Et subito casu, quæ valere, ruunt.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 3, l. 35.

Chance is blind and is the sole author of creation.

J. X. B. SAINTINE, Picciola. Ch. 3.

14 How Chance whirls round the affairs of men!
(Quanti casus humana rotant!)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1123.

15 But as the unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, so we profess
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies
Of every wind that blows.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 548.

16 How often things occur by the merest chance, which we dared not even hope for! (Quam sæpe forte temere Eveniunt quæ non audeas optare!)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 757. (Act v, sc. 1.)

A lucky chance, that oft decides the fate
Of mighty monarchs.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1285.

17 Chance will not do the work—Chance sends the breeze;

But if the pilot slumber at the helm,
The very wind that wafts us towards the port
May dash us on the shelves.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 22. Quoted as from an old play.

18 What disturbance can result from the instability of Chance, if you are sure in the face of what is unsure?

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium, Epis. ci, sec. 9.

IV—Chance: The Main Chance

- 1 Let me stand to the main chance.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 104. (1580)
- 2 Always have an eye to the main, whatsoever thou art chanced at the buy.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 430. (1580)
- I know what's what, and have always taken care of the main chance.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 9.
- 3 Be careful still of the main chance, my son.
PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. vi. (Dryden, tr., l. 158.)

Itself is beauty, if not heaven.

E. A. ROBINSON, Llewellyn and the Tree.

6 They are the weakest-minded and the hardest-hearted men, that most love variety and change.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. ii, ch. 6, sec. 7.

O people keen
For change, to whom the new looks always green!

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. ii, No. 33.

7 Every change of scene becomes a delight. (Omnis mutatio loci jucunda fiet.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxviii, 4.

8 Nothing of him that doth fade
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 400.

9 Nought may endure but Mutability.

SHELLEY, Mutability. St. 4.

10 Times go by turns, and chances change by course,

From foul to fair, from better hap to worse. . . .

No joy so great but runneth to an end,
No hap so hard but may in fine amend.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Times Go by Turns.

In the course of time, we grow to love things we once hated and hate things we loved.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

11 Change lays not her hand upon truth.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Poems: Dedication.

12 Not in vain the distance beacons. Forward, forward let us range,

Let the great world spin for ever down the ringing grooves of change.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall. St. 91. Dr. Alfred Gatty (Notes and Queries, ser. viii, vol. 2, p. 387) states that the phrase "ringing grooves of change" was the result of a misconception on the part of Tennyson, who had been present at the opening of the railway between Manchester and Liverpool, and, being short-sighted, thought the wheels ran in grooved rails.

13 The world was never made;
It will change, but it will not fade. . . .

Nothing was born, Nothing will die;

All things will change.

TENNYSON, Nothing Will Die.

14 The old order changeth, yielding place to new,

And God fulfils himself in many ways,
Lest one good custom should corrupt the world.

TENNYSON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 408; The Coming of Arthur, l. 508, first line only.

15 All things change, creeds and philosophies and outward system—but God remains!

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. iv, ch. 27.

16 It is not now as it hath been of yore;—
Turn wheresoe'er I may,

By night or day,

The things which I have seen I now can see
no more.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St. 1.

CHANTICLEER

17 I heard nae mair, for Chanticleer
Shook off the pouthery snaw,

And hailed the morning with a cheer,
A cottage-rousing craw.

ROBERT BURNS, A Winter Night. St. 9.

18 A yard she had, enclosed all about
With sticks, and a dry ditch without,
In which she had a cock, hight Chauntecleer,
In all the land of crowing n'as his peer.

His voice was merrier than the merry organ
On mass-days that in the church gon.

CHAUCER, The Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 27.

19 Hail chanticleer! (Χαίρε δλέκτρον.)

DIOGENES, to a musician whose audience always deserted him, explaining that it was because the musician's song "made everybody get up." (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, 48.)

20 And hark! how clear bold chanticleer,
Warned with the new wine of the year,

Tells all in his lusty crowing!

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude.

1 While the cock with lively din
Scatters the rear of darkness thin,
And to the stack, or the barn door,
Stoutly struts his dames before.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 49.

2 Bold chanticleer proclaims the dawn
And spangles deck the thorn.

JOHN O'KEEFE, Tzar Peter. Act i, sc. 4.

3 Ah, God! Stab upward with your noise;
Tear at the sky.
With the day gone molten down his throat
And his spine a tilted flame,
What singer could not make one song
As fine as fire?

GEORGE O'NEIL, The White Rooster.

4 I recoil dazzled at beholding myself all rosy red, at having, I myself, caused the sun to rise. (Je recule Ébloui de me voir moi même tout vermeil Et d'avoir, moi, le coq, fait élever le soleil.)

EDMOND ROSTAND, Chanticleer. Act ii, sc. 3.

And sounding in advance its victory,
My song jets forth so clear, so proud, so peremptory,
That the horizon, seized with a rosy trembling,
Obeys me.

EDMOND ROSTAND, Chanticleer. Act ii, sc. 3.

He's welly like a cock as thinks the sun's rose
o' purpose to hear him crow.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 33.

5 Every cock is at his best on his own dung-hill. (Gallum in suo sterquilinio plurimum posse.)

SENECA, Apocolocyntosis, vii, 3.

Every cock will fight upon his own dunghill.

CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act ii, sc. 2.

Every cock is proud on his own dunghill.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

6 The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 150.

The early village cock

Hath twice done salutation to the morn.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 209.

7 Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 158.

8 Hark, hark! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticleer

Cry, Cock-a-diddle-dow.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 384.

9 He is the sun's brave herald
That, ringing his blithe horn,

Calls round a world dew-pearled
The heavenly airs of morn.

KATHARINE TYNAN, Chanticleer.

CHAOS

10 The wrecks of matter, and the crush of worlds.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1.

Temple and tower went down, nor left a site:—
Chaos of ruins!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 80.

The world was void,

The populous and the powerful was a lump,
Seasonless, herbless, treeless, manless, lifeless—
A lump of death—a chaos of hard clay.

BYRON, Darkness, l. 69.

11 The chaos of events.

BYRON, Prophecy of Dante. Canto ii, l. 6.

12 Star after star from heaven's high arch shall rush,

Suns sink on suns, and systems systems crush,

Headlong, extinct, in one dark centre fall,
And death, and night, and chaos, mingle all!

ERASMUS DARWIN, Economy of Vegetation.
Canto iv.

13 And the earth was without form, and void;
and darkness was upon the face of the deep.

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 2.

14 No arts, no letters, no society, and which is worst of all, continual fear and danger of violent death, and the life of man solitary, poor, nasty, brutish and short.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Ch. 18.

15 Even so, when the framework of the world is dissolved, and the final hour, closing so many ages, reverts to pristine chaos (antiquum chaos), then the fiery stars will drop into the sea, and earth will shake off the ocean, . . . and the whole distracted fabric of the shattered firmament will overthrow its laws.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 72.

16 Abomination of desolation.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 15; Mark, xiii, 14.

17 Chaos, that reigns here
In double night of darkness and of shades.

MILTON, Comus, l. 334.

Fate shall yield

To fickle Chance, and Chaos judge the strife.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 232.

18 Where eldest Night
And Chaos, ancestors of Nature, hold

Eternal anarchy amidst the noise
Of endless wars, and by confusion stand;
For hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions fierce,
Strive here for mast'ry.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 894.

Chaos umpire sits,
And by decision more embroils the fray
By which he reigns.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 907.

1 Then rose the seed of Chaos, and of Night,
To blot out order and extinguish light.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 13.

Lo! thy dread empire, Chaos! is restor'd;
Light dies before thy uncreating word:
Thy hand, great Anarch! lets the curtain fall,
And universal darkness buries all.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 653.

2 Nay, had I the power, I should
Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 97.

3 Chaos is come again.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 92.

CHARACTER

I—Character: Definitions

4 Our characters are the result of our conduct.
ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iii, ch. 5,
sec. 12.

5 A character is like an acrostic—read it forward, backward, or across, it still spells the same thing.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

6 Character,—a reserved force which acts directly by presence and without means.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

Character is centrality, the impossibility of being displaced or overset.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

Character is higher than intellect. . . . A great soul will be strong to live, as well as to think.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The American Scholar.

Character, that sublime health which values one moment as another, and makes us great in all conditions.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

Character is that which can do without success.
EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Character.

7 In my opinion the best character is generally that which is the least talked about.

SIR WILLIAM EARLE, Decision, Queen v. Rowton. (34 L.J.M.C. 63.)

8 A great character . . . is a dispensation of Providence, designed to have not merely an immediate, but a continuous, progressive, and never-ending agency. It survives the man who possessed it; survives his age,—perhaps his country, his language.

EDWARD EVERETT, Speech, 4 July, 1835.

9 Talent is nurtured aye in solitude,
But Character 'mid the tempests of the world.

(Es bildet ein Talent sich in der Stille, Sich ein Charakter in dem Strom der Welt.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act i, sc. 2, l. 66.

No talent, but yet a character. (Kein Talent, doch ein Charakter.)

HEINRICH HEINE, Atta Troll. Ch. 24.

10 Character is Destiny.

HERACLITUS. (MULLACH, Fragments of Greek Philosophy.)

Habits form character, and character is destiny.
JOSEPH KAINES, Address: Our Daily Faults and Failings.

Character is simply habit long continued. (Τὸ ἦθος ἕθος ἐστὶ πολυχρόνιον.)

PLUTARCH, Morals: On Moral Virtue. Sec. 4.
See also under HABIT.

11 We must have a weak spot or two in a character before we can love it much. People that do not laugh or cry, or take more of anything than is good for them, or use anything but dictionary-words, are admirable subjects for biographies. But we don't always care most for those flat pattern-flowers that press best in the herbarium.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 3.

12 Character is like a tree and reputation like its shadow. The shadow is what we think of it; the tree is the real thing.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (GROSS, Lincoln's Own Stories, p. 109.) See also under REPUTATION.

13 Character is what you are in the dark.

DWIGHT L. MOODY, Sermons: Character.

14 To my mind, the best and most faultless character is his who is as ready to pardon the rest of mankind, as though he daily transgressed himself; and at the same time as cautious to avoid a fault as if he never forgave one.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii, epis. 22.

15 Character is the governing element of life, and is above genius.

FREDERICK SAUNDERS, Stray Leaves: Life's Little Day.

16 It is energy—the central element of which is will—that produces the miracles of enthusiasm in all ages. Everywhere it is the main-spring of what is called force of character, and the sustaining power of all great action.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 5.

<sup>1</sup> Fame is what you have taken,
Character's what you give;
When to this truth you waken,
Then you begin to live.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Improvisations. Sec. 11.

<sup>2</sup> Character is a by-product; it is produced in the great manufacture of daily duty.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Arlington, 31 May, 1915.

II—Character: Apothegms

<sup>3</sup> No better than you should be.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Coxcomb. Act iv, sc. 3.

On ev'ry hand it will allow'd be
He's just—nae better than he should be.

BURNS, A Dedication to Gavin Hamilton.

The shepherd thought her no better than she should be, a little loose in the hilts, and free of her hips.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 3. (Motteux, tr.)

She's loose i' the hilts.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act ii, sc. 5.

She is no better than she should be.

FIELDING, The Temple Beau. Act iv, sc. 3.

Some might suspect the nymph not over good—
Nor would they be mistaken, if they should.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 75.

<sup>4</sup> Happiness is not the end of life: character is.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

<sup>5</sup> Some men are like pyramids, which are very broad where they touch the ground, but grow narrow as they reach the sky.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

Many men build as cathedrals were built—the part nearest the ground finished, but that part which soars toward heaven, the turrets and the spires, forever incomplete.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 8 Jan., 1750.

<sup>7</sup> Or if, once in a thousand years,
A perfect character appears.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iii, l. 207.

<sup>8</sup> "Hard," replied the Dodger. "As nails," added Charley Bates.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 9.

My landlord is as rich as a Jew and as hard as nails.

BERNARD SHAW, You Never Can Tell. Act i

<sup>9</sup> There is a great deal of unmapped country within us.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. iii, ch. 24.

What does Africa,—what does the West stand for? Is not our own interior white on the chart? black though it may prove, like the coast, when discovered.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

<sup>10</sup> Character gives splendor to youth and awe to wrinkled skin and gray hairs.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

<sup>11</sup> Use what language you will, you can never say anything but what you are.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

We pass for what we are. Character teaches above our wills.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Human character evermore publishes itself. The most fugitive deed and word, the intimated purpose, expresses character.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

Don't say things. What you are stands over you the while, and thunders so that I cannot hear what you say to the contrary.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

<sup>12</sup> The force of character is cumulative.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

No change of circumstances can repair a defect of character.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

<sup>13</sup> The Porcupine, whom one must Handle, gloved,

May be respected, but is never Loved.

ARTHUR GUTTERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs.

<sup>14</sup> Such a man, in truth, am I. (Nimirum hic ego sum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 15, l. 42.

<sup>15</sup> A very unclubbable man.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1764.)

Johnson was referring to Sir John Hawkins, and must have been proud of the remark for he repeated it to Fanny Burney, who recorded it in her diary (3 Aug., 1778) as "Sir John was a most unclubbable man."

<sup>16</sup> To be capable of respect is almost as rare as to be worthy of it. (Être capable de respect est aujourd'hui presque aussi rare qu'en être digne.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 247.

<sup>17</sup> No man can climb out beyond the limitations of his own character.

JOHN MORLEY, Miscellanies: Robespierre.

<sup>18</sup> Character is much easier kept than recovered.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. No. xv.

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Hence, "full of pep."

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 301. (Act i, sc. 2.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 286.

<sup>4</sup> It matters not what you are thought to be, but what you are.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 785.

It's not what you were, it's what you are to-day.

DAVID MARION. Title of song. (1898)

<sup>5</sup> See thou character.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 59.

Come, give us a taste of your quality.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 452.

Put thyself into the trick of singularity.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 164; act iii, sc. 4, l. 79.

<sup>6</sup> I'm called away by particular business. But I leave my character behind me.

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act. ii, sc. 2.

See also under REPUTATION.

<sup>7</sup> Put more trust in nobility of character than in an oath.

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Sec. 16.)

<sup>8</sup> "High characters," cries one, and he would see Things that ne'er were, nor are, nor e'er will be.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Goblins: Epilogue.

<sup>9</sup> A man should endeavor to be as pliant as a reed, yet as hard as cedar-wood.

Talmud: Taanith, xx.

<sup>10</sup> How can we expect a harvest of thought who have not had a seed-time of character?

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

<sup>11</sup> What thou art, that thou art; that God knoweth thee to be and thou canst be said to be no greater.

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 6.

<sup>12</sup> Happy for us if the grace of God enables us to live so that we retain innocency and freshness of character down to old age.

MARY ANN WENDELL, Private letter.

<sup>13</sup> So build we up the being that we are.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 1264.

<sup>14</sup> When wealth is lost, nothing is lost;
When health is lost, something is lost;
When character is lost, all is lost!

UNKNOWN. Motto on the wall of a school in Germany.

III—Character: Judgment of Character

<sup>15</sup> To judge human character rightly, a man may sometimes have very small experience, provided he has a very large heart.

BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do With It? Bk. v, ch. 4.

<sup>16</sup> We are firm believers in the maxim that, for all right judgment of any man or thing, it is useful, nay, essential, to see his good qualities before pronouncing on his bad.

CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe.

<sup>17</sup> Those who deserve a good character, ought to have the satisfaction of knowing that they have it, both as a reward and as an encouragement.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 March, 1747.

Colonel Chartres . . . was once heard to say that although he would not give one farthing for virtue, he would give ten thousand pounds for a character; because he should get a hundred thousand pounds by it.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 8 Jan., 1750.

<sup>18</sup> By nothing do men show their character more than by the things they laugh at.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

A man never shows his own character so plainly as by the way he portrays another's.

RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 110.

<sup>19</sup> Men are more lovable for the bad qualities they don't possess than for the good ones they do.

E. P. OPPENHEIM, Simple Peter Cradd, p. 60.

<sup>20</sup> O think not of his errors now; remember His greatness, his munificence, think on all The lovely features of his character, On all the noble exploits of his life, And let them, like an angel's arm, unseen, Arrest the lifted sword.

SCHILLER, The Death of Wallenstein. Act iii, sc. 8. (Coleridge, tr.)

<sup>21</sup> There is a kind of character in thy life, That to the observer doth thy history Fully unfold.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 1, l. 28.

IV—Character: Good and Bad

<sup>22</sup> In him, inexplicably mixed, appeared

Much to be loved and hated, sought and feared.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 17.

1
A man so various, that he seem'd to be
Not one, but all mankind's epitome;
Stiff in opinions, always in the wrong,
Was everything by starts, and nothing long;
But, in the course of one revolving moon,
Was chymist, fiddler, statesman, and buffoon.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 545.

So over violent, or over civil,
That every man, with him, was God or Devil.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 557.

2
This scholar, rake, Christian, dupe, gamester and poet.

DAVID GARRICK, Jupiter and Mercury.

3
A man not perfect, but of heart
So high, of such heroic rage,
That even his hopes became a part
Of earth's eternal heritage.

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, At the President's Grave. Referring to James Abram Garfield.

Captious, yet gracious, sweet and bitter too,
I cannot with thee live, nor yet without thee.
(Difficilis facilis, jucundus acerbus es idem: Nec tecum possum vivere, nec sine te.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, ep. 47, l. 1.

Thus neither with thee, nor without thee, can I live. (Sic ego non sine te, nec tecum vivere possum.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, elegy 11, l. 39.

In all thy humours, whether grave or mellow,
Thou'rt such a touchy, testy, pleasant fellow,
Hast so much wit, and mirth, and spleen about
thee,

There is no living with thee, nor without thee.
ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 68. A free translation of Martial.

5
Some squire, perhaps, you take delight to rack,

Whose game is whist, whose treat a toast in sack;

Who visits with a gun, presents you birds,
Then gives a smacking buss, and cries, No
words!

Or with his hounds comes hollowing from the stable,

Makes love with nods, and knees beneath a table.

POPE, Epistle to Mrs. Teresa Blount on Her Leaving Town, l. 23.

6
Many men have been capable of doing a wise thing, more a cunning thing, but very few a generous thing.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

7
His legs bestrid the ocean; his rear'd arm
Crested the world: his voice was propertied

As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake the
orb,

He was as rattling thunder.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 82.

8
Alas! 'tis true I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view,
Gored mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,

Made old offences of affections new;
Most true it is that I have looked on truth
Askance and strangely.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cx.

9
O, tell her, Swallow, thou that knowest each,
That bright and fierce and fickle is the South,
And dark and true and tender is the North.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 78.

10
I am as bad as the worst, but thank God I am as good as the best.

WALT WHITMAN.

Here's to you, as good as you are,
And here's to me, as bad as I am;
But as good as you are, and as bad as I am,
I am as good as you are, as bad as I am.

UNKNOWN. Old Scotch Toast.

Fair and foolish, little and loud,
Long and lazy, black and proud;
Fat and merry, lean and sad,
Pale and pettish, red and bad.

THOMAS WRIGHT, Passions of the Mind.
(1604)

If long, she is lazy, if little, she is loud;
If fair, she is sluttish, if foul, she is proud.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 189.

With a red man rede thy rede;
With a brown man break thy bread;
At a pale man draw thy knife;
From a black man keep thy wife.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 18.

3 The ideal of courtesy, wit, grace, and charm.
(Specimen fuisse humanitatis, salis, suavitatis, leporis.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 19, sec. 55

4 A man of letters, manners, morals, parts.
COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 673

5 Even children follow'd with endearing wile,
And pluck'd his gown, to share the good man's smile.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 183.

6 A nice unparticular man.
THOMAS HARDY, Far From the Madding Crowd.

7 Time could not chill him, fortune sway,
Nor toil with all its burdens tire.
O. W. HOLMES, F. W. C.

8 He is so good that no one can be a better man. (Est bonus, ut melior vir Non alius quisquam.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 32.

9 A Soul of power, a well of lofty Thought
A chastened Hope that ever points to Heaven.
JOHN HUNTER, A Replication of Rhymes.

10 One that feared God and eschewed evil.
Old Testament: Job, i, 1.
He was a good man, and a just.
New Testament: Luke, xxiii, 50.
Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright.
Old Testament: Psalms, xxxvii, 37.

Rich in good works.
New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 18.
He was his Maker's image undefaced.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Remorse. Act ii, sc. 1.

11 A frame of adamant, a soul of fire,
No dangers fright him, and no labours tire.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, *The Vanity of Human
Wishes*, l. 191.

12 Stiff-necked Glasgow beggar! I've heard he's prayed for my soul,
But he couldn't lie if you paid him, and he'd starve before he stole.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The "Mary Gloster"

13 Free from self-seeking, envy, low design,
I have not found a whiter soul than thine.
CHARLES LAMB, To Martin Charles Burney.

14 Other hope had she none, nor wish in life,
but to follow
Meekly, with reverent steps, the sacred feet of her Saviour.
LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. 5, l. 35.

15 His magic was not far to seek,—
He was so human! Whether strong or weak,
Far from his kind he neither sank nor soared,
But sate an equal guest at every board:
No beggar ever felt him condescend,
No prince presume; for still himself he bare
At manhood's simple level, and where'er
He met a stranger, there he left a friend.
J. R. LOWELL, Agassiz. Pt. ii, sec. 2.

16 The wisest man could ask no more of Fate
Than to be simple, modest, manly, true,
Safe from the Many, honored by the Few;
To count as naught in World, or Church, or State,
But inwardly in secret to be great.
J. R. LOWELL, Sonnet: Jeffries Wyman.

17 Who knows nothing base, Fears nothing
known.
OWEN MEREDITH, A Great Man. St. 8.

18 To those who know thee not, no words can paint;
And those who know thee know all words are faint.
HANNAH MORE, Sensibility.

19 He was straight; you could trust him. (Sed rectus, sed certus.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44.

20 Unlearn'd, he knew no schoolman's subtle art,
No language, but the language of the heart.
By nature honest, by experience wise,
Healthy by temperance, and by exercise.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 398.

But where's the man who counsel can bestow, Still pleas'd to teach, and yet not proud to know? . . .
Tho' learn'd, well bred; and tho' well bred, sincere;
Modestly bold, and humanly severe;
Who to a friend his faults can freely show,
And gladly praise the merit of a foe?
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 72.

21 Of manners gentle, of affections mild;
In wit a man; simplicity a child:
With native humour temp'ring virtuous rage,
Form'd to delight at once and lash the age;
Above temptation, in a low estate,

And uncorrupted ev'n among the great:
A safe companion, and an easy friend,
Unblamed thro' life, lamented in thy end.
POPE, Epitaph on John Gay.

<sup>1</sup> Devout yet cheerful, active yet resigned,
Grant me, like thee whose heart knew no disguise,
Whose blameless wishes never aimed to rise,
To meet the changes Time and Chance present,
With modest dignity and calm content.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. ii.

Devout, yet cheerful; pious, not austere;
To others lenient, to himself severe.
JOHN MILTON HARNEY, On a Friend.

<sup>2</sup> He preferred to be, rather than to seem, good; hence the less he sought fame, the more it pursued him.
SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. 54, sec. 6. Of Cato.

<sup>3</sup> Heaven never meant him for that passive thing
That can be struck and hammered out to suit
Another's taste and fancy. He'll not dance
To every tune of every minister.
It goes against his nature—he can't do it.
SCHILLER, Die Piccolomini. Act i, sc. 4. (Coleridge, tr.)

<sup>4</sup> Look here, upon this picture, and on this,
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow:
Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination and a form indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 53.

A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd;
Well fitted in arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc.
1, l. 44.

Manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 2,
l. 276.

<sup>5</sup> Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation coped withal.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 59.

<sup>6</sup> One of those happy souls
Which are the salt of the earth, and without whom

This world would smell like what it is—a tomb.

SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne, l. 209.

<sup>7</sup> Not a kindlier life or sweeter
Time, that lights and quenches men,
Now may quench or light again.
A. C. SWINBURNE, Epicede for J. L. Graham.

<sup>8</sup> She has more goodness in her little finger than he has in his whole body.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

<sup>9</sup> So his life has flowed
From its mysterious urn a sacred stream,
In whose calm depth the beautiful and pure
Alone are mirrored.

THOMAS NOON TALFOURD, Ion. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>10</sup> I would be true, for there are those who trust me;

I would be pure, for there are those that care.

I would be strong, for there is much to suffer,

I would be brave, for there is much to dare.
I would be friend to all—the foe, the friendless;

I would be giving, and forget the gift.

I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up—and laugh—and love—and lift.

HOWARD ARNOLD WALTER, My Creed.

<sup>11</sup> But God, who is able to prevail, wrestled with him, as the angel did with Jacob, and marked him; marked him for his own.

IZAACK WALTON, Life of John Donne.

<sup>12</sup> His daily prayer, far better understood
In acts than words, was simply doing good.
WHITTIER, Daniel Neall.

A silent, shy, peace-loving man,
He seemed no fiery partisan.

WHITTIER, The Tent on the Beach. St. 11.

<sup>13</sup> And therefore does not stoop, nor lie in wait

For wealth, or honours, or for worldly state.
WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 41.

And, through the heat of conflict, keeps the law
In calmness made, and sees what he foresaw.
WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 53.

Whom neither shape of danger can dismay,
Nor thought of tender happiness betray.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 72.

But who, if he be called upon to face
Some awful moment to which Heaven has joined Great issues, good or bad for human kind,
Is happy as a lover.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 48.

<sup>1</sup> Thy nature is not therefore less divine:
Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the year,
And worship'st at the Temple's inner shrine,
God being with thee when we know it not.

WORDSWORTH, It Is a Beauteous Evening.

<sup>2</sup> Horses he loved, and laughter, and the sun,
A song, wide spaces and the open air;
The trust of all dumb living things he won,
And never knew the luck too good to share:
Now, though he will not ride with us again,
His merry spirit seems our comrade yet,
Freed from the power of weariness and pain,
Forbidding us to mourn or to forget.

UNKNOWN, Our Comrade. (1916)

VI—Character: Bad

<sup>3</sup> A demd damp, moist, unpleasant body.
DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 34.

<sup>4</sup> Of these the false Achitophel was first,
A name to all succeeding ages curst.
For close designs and crooked counsels fit,
Sagacious, bold, and turbulent of wit,
Restless, unfixed in principles and place,
In pow'r unpleased, impatient of disgrace;
A fiery soul, which working out its way,
Fretted the pigmy body to decay.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 150.

Referring to Shaftesbury.

Crouching at home, and cruel when abroad.
DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 1.

<sup>5</sup> Three sorts of men my soul hateth: . . . a poor man that is proud, a rich man that is a liar, and an old adulterer that doateth.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxv, 2.

The Twelve Evils of the Age: 1, A wise man without good works; 2, An old man without religion; 3, A young man without obedience;
4, A rich man without charity; 5, A woman without modesty; 6, A lord without virtue; 7,
A quarrelsome Christian; 8, A poor man who is proud; 9, An unjust King; 10, A negligent Bishop; 11, A populace without discipline; 12,
A people without law.

S., xxiv, 107.)

Rawsness of judgment, wilfulness in folly,
Thoughts vagrant as the wind, and as uncertain.

JOHN FORD, The Broken Heart. Act ii, sc. 2.

<sup>7</sup> He was not a sweet-tempered man, nor one of gentle mood. (Οὐ γὰρ τι γλυκύθυμος ἀνὴρ ἦν οὐδ' ἀγαρόφρων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 467. Referring to Achilles.

<sup>8</sup> He was a scoundrel and a coward: a scoundrel for charging a blunderbuss against religion and morality; a coward, because he had not resolution to fire it off himself, but left half a crown to a beggarly Scotchman to draw the trigger at his death.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1754.)

Johnson is referring to Henry Saint-John, first Viscount Bolingbroke, whose works were edited by David Mallet after his death.

<sup>9</sup> He is awkward and out of place in the society of his equals . . . He cannot meet you on the square.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Old and the New Schoolmaster.

<sup>10</sup> In prosperity he is brave, in adversity a runaway. (Re secunda fortis est, dubia fugax.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 2, l. 13.

<sup>11</sup> I know him a notorious liar,
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward;
Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when virtue's steely bones
Look bleak i' the cold wind.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 111.

He is deformed, crooked, old and sere,
Ill-faced, worse-bodied, shapeless everywhere;
Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind,
Stigmatical in making, worse in mind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv,
sc. 2, l. 19.

A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 45.

I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 57.

A man whose blood
Is very snow-broth; one who never feels
The wanton stings and motions of the sense.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i,
sc. 4, l. 57.

A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 147.

<sup>12</sup> When he is best, he is a little worse than a man, and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 94.

A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 4.

<sup>13</sup> I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck, than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 127.

1 High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 1, l. 18.

2 He was a man
Hard, selfish, loving only gold,
Yet full of guile: his pale eyes ran
With tears, which each some falsehood told.
SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 248.

3 Lax in their gaiters, laxer in their gait.
HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: The Theatre.

4 A man of plots,
Craft, poisonous counsels, wayside ambushings.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 423.

I—Charity: Definitions

5 Charity is a virtue of the heart, and not of the hands.

ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 166.

6 The desire of power in excess caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall; but in charity there is no excess, neither can angel or man come in danger by it.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Goodness. See also AMBITION: ITS FOLLY.

7 For this I think charity, to love God for himself, and our neighbour for God.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 14.

True charity is sagacious, and will find out hints for beneficence.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 6.

8 Charity is, indeed, a great thing, and a gift of God, and when it is rightly ordered, likens us to God himself, as far as that is possible; for it is charity which makes the man.

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, True Almsgiving.

9 Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up. . . .

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xiii, 1-4, 13.

Meek and lowly, pure and holy,
Chief among the "blessed three."

CHARLES JEFFERYS, Charity.

In Faith and Hope the world will disagree,
But all mankind's concern is Charity.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 307.

Hell bade all its millions rise; Paradise sends three:

Pity, and Self-sacrifice, and Charity.

THEODOSIA GARRISON, These Shall Prevail.

10 True Charity, a plant divinely nurs'd.

COWPER, Charity, l. 573.

11 Charity is indeed a noble and beautiful virtue, grateful to man, and approved by God. But charity must be built on justice. It cannot supersede justice.

HENRY GEORGE, The Condition of Labor, p. 92.

12 The best form of charity is extravagance. . . . The prodigality of the rich is the providence of the poor.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Hard Times and the Way Out.

13 Charity, decent, modest, easy, kind,
Softens the high, and rears the abject mind;
Knows with just reins, and gentle hand to guide,

Betwixt vile shame and arbitrary pride.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Charity.

Soft peace she brings, wherever she arrives:
She builds our quiet, as she forms our lives:
Lays the rough paths of peevish Nature even,
And opens in each heart a little Heaven.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Charity.

14 Charity itself fulfills the law,
And who can sever love from charity?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 364.

Charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 68.

15 The charities that soothe and heal and bless
Are scattered at the feet of Man—like flowers.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 239.

16 What is faith? What you do not see.
What is hope? A great thing.

What is charity? A great rarity.

(Quid est fides? Quod non vides.

Quid est spes? Magna res.

Quid est caritas? Magna raritas.)

UNKNOWN, Facetiae Cantabrigiensis.

Alas! for the rarity, Of Christian charity
Under the sun!

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs.

II—Charity: Apothegms

1 Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this woman was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did.

New Testament: Acts, ix, 36.

2 It was the man and not his character that I pitied.

ARISTOTLE, when reproached for having given alms to a bad man. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec. 17.)

3 The living need charity more than the dead.

GEORGE ARNOLD, The Jolly Old Pedagogue.

4 He that defers his charity until he is dead is, if a man weighs it rightly, rather liberal of another man's than of his own.

FRANCIS BACON, Collection of Sentences. No. 55.

5 Be charitable before wealth make thee cov-etous, and lose not the glory of the mite.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i,
sec. 5.

6 He who bestows his goods upon the poor,
Shall have as much again, and ten times
more.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.
See also GIFTS: GIVING AND RECEIVING.

7 No sound ought to be heard in the church but the healing voice of Christian charity.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

8 Did universal charity prevail, earth would be a heaven, and hell a fable.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

9 Why, 'tis a point of faith. Whate'er it be,
I'm sure it is no point of charity.

RICHARD CRASEAW, On a Treatise of Charity.

10 Soft-handed Charity,
Tempering her gifts, that seem so free,
By time and place,
Till not a woe the bleak world see,
But finds her grace.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: The Sunday After Ascension Day.

11 He told me of Charity, the beautiful story of Charity.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, *Piers Plowman: Do-
Better*, l. 19.

12 With malice toward none; with charity for
all.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1865.

In charity to all mankind, bearing no malice or ill-will to any human being.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Letter to A. Bronson,
30 July, 1838.

13 Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 40.

14 In necessary things, unity; in doubtful things, liberty; in all things, charity. (In necessariis, unitas; in dubias, libertas; in omnibus, caritas.)

Attributed to Melanchthon by W. L. Bowles, who had it inscribed over the door of his house in Salisbury Close; also to Rupertus
Meldenius by Canon Farrar, Croyden
Church Conference, 1877.

15 I do not give alms; I am not poor enough for that.

FRIEDRICH NEITZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra: Introductory. Sec. 2.

Give no bounties: make equal laws: secure life and prosperity and you need not give alms.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

16 In this cold world where Charity lies bleat-
ing

Under a thorn, and none to give him greeting.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Love Sonnet.

17 Charity shall cover the multitude of sins.

New Testament: I Peter, iv, 8.

Charity creates a multitude of sins.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of Man under Socialism.

18 He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day for melting charity.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 31.

19 To do him any wrong was to beget
A kindness from him, for his heart was rich,

Of such fine mould that if you sowed therein
The seed of Hate, it blossomed Charity.

20 He is truly great who hath a great charity.

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi.
Pt. i, ch. 3.

21 All hearts confess the saints elect,
Who, twain in faith, in love agree,
And melt not in an acid sect

The Christian pearl of charity!

WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 670.

1 Whate'er we look on, at our side
Be Charity,—to bid us think
And feel, if we would know.
WORDSWORTH, Composed in One of the Catholic Cantons.

III—Charity Begins at Home

2 Help thy kin, Christ biddeth, for there beginneth Charity.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus
xviii, l. 61. (1362)

Charity beginneth first at itself.

THOMAS WILSON, Discourse Upon Usury, l.
235.

Charity should begin at himself.

JOHN WYCLIFFE, Works, p. 76. (c. 1380)

3 Charity begins at home. (Proximus sum egomet mihi.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 635. (Act iv, sc. 1.); BEAU-MONT AND FLETCHER, Wit Without Money;
ROBERT BROME, Jovial Crew, ii.

Charity well directed should begin at home.
(Charité bien ordonnée commence par soi même.)

MONTLUC, La Comédie de Proverbes. Act iii, 7.

Charity begins at home, and justice begins next door.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 27.

4 Let them learn first to show piety at home.
New Testament: I Timothy, v, 4.

5 Rowley: I believe there is no sentiment he has such faith in as that "charity begins at home."

Sir Oliver: And his, I presume, is of that domestic sort which never stirs abroad at all.

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act v, sc. 1.

6 Our charity begins at home,
And mostly ends where it begins.

HORACE SMITH, Horace in London. Bk. ii, ode 15.

IV—Charity: Organized Charity

7 And fevered him with dreams of doing good
For good-for-nothing people.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 645.

The worst of charity is, that the lives you are asked to preserve are not worth preserving.

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

8 No rich man's largesse may suffice his soul,
Nor are the plundered succored by a dole.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, From the Book of Extemporations.

9 This seems to me to be ambition, not charity.
(Hæc mihi videtur ambitio, non eleemosyna.)

ERASMUS, Convivium Religiosum. He is speaking of charitable bequests.

Charity and Pride have different aims, yet both feed the poor.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1084.

It is better that ten drones be fed than one bee be famished.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, 33.

10 I have no great confidence in organized charities. Money is left and buildings are erected and sinecures provided for a good many worthless people. Those in immediate control are almost, or when they were appointed were almost, in want themselves, and they naturally hate other beggars.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Organized Charities.

11 I deem it the duty of every man to devote a certain portion of his income for charitable purposes; and that it is his further duty to see it so applied as to do the most good of which it is capable. This I believe to be best insured by keeping within the circle of his own inquiry and information the subjects of distress to whose relief his contributions should be applied.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xi, p. 92.

12 I had much rather not to live at all, than to live by alms.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

13 The organized charity, scrimped and iced,
In the name of a cautious, statistical Christ.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, In Bohemia.

14 With one hand he put
A penny in the urn of poverty,

And with the other took a shilling out.

ROBERT POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk.
viii, l. 634.

15 God's servants making a snug living
By guiding Mammon in snug giving.

KEITH PRESTON, Professional Welfare Workers.

16 Cold is thy hopeless heart, even as charity.

SOUTHEY, The Soldier's Wife.

17 To be supported by the charity of friends or a government pension is to go into the almshouse.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 13 March, 1853.

CHARLES I and II

18 Mr. Dick had been for upwards of ten years endeavouring to keep King Charles the First out of the Memorial; but he had been constantly getting into it, and was there now.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 15.

19 Great, good, and just, could I but rate
My grief with thy too rigid fate,
I'd weep the world in such a strain

As it should deluge once again;
But since thy loud-tongued blood demands supplies

More from Briareus' hands than Argus' eyes,
I'll sing thy obsequies with trumpet sounds
And write thy epitaph in blood and wounds.

JAMES GRAHAM, MARQUIS OF MONTROSE, To Charles I.

Vanquished in life, his death
By beauty made amends:
The passing of his breath
Won his defeated ends.

LIONEL JOHNSON, By the Statue of King Charles at Charing Cross.

King, tried in fires of woe!
Men hunger for thy grace:
And through the night I go,
Loving thy mournful face.

LIONEL JOHNSON, By the Statue of King Charles at Charing Cross.

He nothing common did or mean
Upon that memorable scene;
But with his keener eye
The axe's edge did try.

ANDREW MARVELL, Execution of Charles I.

3
Old times were changed, old manners gone;
A stranger filled the Stuarts' throne;
The bigots of the iron time
Had called his harmless art a crime.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction.

4
The royal refugee our breed restores
With foreign courtiers and with foreign whores,
And carefully repeopled us again.
Throughout his lazy, long, lascivious reign.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman,
l. 234. Referring to Charles II.

5
He was utterly without ambition. He detested business, and would sooner have abdicated his crown than have undergone the trouble of really directing the administration.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 2.
Referring to Charles II.

6
A merry monarch, scandalous and poor.
JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, On the King.

7
Here lies our Sovereign Lord, the King,
Whose word no man relies on,
Who never said a foolish thing,
Nor ever did a wise one.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, Epitaph on Charles II. These lines are said to have been written by Rochester on the door of the king's bedchamber. The first line is sometimes quoted: "Here lies our mutton-eating king."

That is very true: for my words are my own,
my actions are my ministers'.

CHARLES II, In reply to the above. (HUME,
History of England. Vol. viii, p. 312.)

CHARM

I—Charm: Attraction

8
It's a sort of bloom on a woman. If you have it, you don't need to have anything else; if you don't have it, it doesn't much matter what else you have.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.

Act i. Referring to Charm.

It's that damned charm.

BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows. Act iii.

9
He touches nothing but he adds a charm.
FÉNELON, Eulogy of Cicero.

10
To me more dear, congenial to my heart,
One native charm, than all the gloss of art.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 253.

11
There are charms made only for distant admiration.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ii, p. 228.

12 Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 34.

13
All the charm of all the Muses.
TENNYSON, To Virgil.

Or loftier Mantuan, more divinely sweet,
Lord of the incommunicable charm.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ode. Referring to Vergil.

14
All charming people, I fancy, are spoiled. It is the secret of their attraction.

OSCAR WILDE, The Portrait of Mr. W. H.

When men give up saying what is charming, they give up thinking what is charming.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii.

II—Charm: Spell

15
They charmed it with smiles and soap.

LEWIS CARROLL, Hunting of the Snark.

16
Enter'd the very lime-twigs of his spells,
And yet came off.

MILTON, Comus, l. 646.

17
They are like the deaf adder that stoppeth her ear; which will not harken to the voice of charmers, charming never so wisely.

Old Testament: Psalms, lviii, 4, 5.

18
I know of a charm by way of a prayer that will preserve a man from the violence of guns and all manner of fire-weapons and engines, but it will do me no good because I do not believe it.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 42. A monk is speaking.

1 Fair is foul, and foul is fair.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 1, l. 11.

Eye of newt and toe of frog,
Wool of bat and tongue of dog.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 14.

2 Charm ache with air and agony with words.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 26.

3 The charm dissolves apace.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 64.

CHASE, THE, see Hunting

CHASTITY

See also Purity; Woman: Her Virtue

4 Who is the chaste woman? She about whom scandal fears to lie. (Quæ casta est? De qua mentiri fama veretur.)

BIAS. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 5.)

Chaste women are often proud and froward, as presuming upon the merit of their chastity.

BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and Single Life.

5 That chastity of honour which felt a stain like a wound.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

6 "Keep your good name, though Eve herself once fell."

"Nay," quoth the maid, "the Sultan's self shan't carry me, Unless his highness promises to marry me."

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 84.

But, whatso'er she wished, she acted right;
And whether coldness, pride, or virtue, dignity
A woman, so she's good, what does it signify?

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 57.

Be warm, but pure; be amorous, but be chaste.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers.

7 So a maiden, while she remains untouched, remains dear to her own; but when she has lost her chaste flower with sullied body, she remains neither lovely to boys nor dear to girls. (Sic virgo dum intacta manet, dum cara suis est; Cum castum amisit polluto corpore florem, Nec pueris jucunda manet nec cara puellis.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxii, l. 45.

8 There is no jewel in the world so valuable as a chaste and virtuous woman.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 33.

9 There said once a clerk in two verses: "what is better than gold? Jasper. What is better than jasper? Wisdom. And what is better than wisdom? Woman. And what is better than a good woman? No-thing."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, l. 2297.

A good woman is a hidden treasure; who discovers her will do well not to boast about it. (Une honnête femme est un trésor caché; celui qui l'a trouvé fait fort bien de ne s'en pas vanter.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 552.

God's rarest blessing is, after all, a good woman.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 34.

Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 10.

A good woman is worth, if she were sold,
The fairest crown that's made of purest gold.

WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, 484. (1623)

10 You see me with child, and you want me a virgin.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 41.

11 In vain to honour they pretend Who guard themselves with ramparts and with walls.

Them only fame the truly valiant calls
Who can an open breach defend.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Maidenhead.

12 Chastity and Beauty, which were deadly foes,
Live reconciled friends within her brow;

SAMUEL DANIEL, To Delia.

13 A foolish female nice and shy,
That never yet trod shoe awry.

THOMAS D'URFEX, Richmond Heiress. Act ii, sc. 2.

No woman . . . but such one as hath trod her shoe amiss. [i. e., lapsed from virtue.]

THOMAS HOCCKLEV, Minor Poems, xxiv, 66. (c. 1422)

14 For me it will be enough that a marble stone should declare that a queen having reigned such a time, lived and died a virgin.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, in answer to a petition from the House of Commons, in 1559, that she should consider marriage. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 38.)

15 Chastity, they admit, is very well—but then think of Mirabeau's passion and temperance!

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

16 Not lightly be thy citadel subdued;
Not ignobly, not untimely,
Take praise in solemn mood;
Take love sublimely.

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, Ah, Be Not False.

17 A woman's chastity consists, like an onion, of a series of coats.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 16 March, 1854.

18 Beware of lust: it doth pollute and foul. . . . Abstain wholly, or wed. Thy bounteous Lord Allows thee choice of paths: take no by-ways. . . .

Continenace hath his joy: weigh both; and so If rottenness have more, let Heaven go.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 3.

1 She who keeps chastely to her husband's side Is not for one but every night his bride: And stealing still with love and fear to bed, Brings him not one, but many a maidenhead.

ROBERT HERRICK, Julia's Churching.

2 Men are virtuous because women are; women are virtuous from necessity.

E. W. HOWE, A Letter from Mr. Biggs.

3 Chastity enables the soul to breathe a pure air in the foulest places. (Par la chasteté, l'âme respire un air pur dans les lieux les plus corrompus.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 78.

4 Whole towns worship the dog, but no one worships Diana (i.e., Chastity). (Oppida tota canem venerantur, nemo Dianam.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 8.

5 Chastity without charity lies chained in hell, It is but an unlighted lamp.

Many chaplains are chaste, but where is their charity?

There are no harder, hungrier men than men of Holy Church.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. ii.

6 Virtue in women is often merely love of their reputation and of their repose. (L'honnêteté des femmes est souvent l'amour de leur réputation et de leur repos.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 205.

There are few good women who are not weary of their trade. (Il y a peu d'honnêtes femmes qui ne soient lasses de leur métier.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 367.

7 And virtue flies when love once blows the sail.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, Cupid and Psyche.

8 Chaste in morals and spotless in modesty. (Casta moribus et integra pudore.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams.

9 Thy beauty shall no more be found, Nor, in thy marble vault, shall sound My echoing song: then worms shall try That long preserved virginity, And your quaint honour turn to dust, And into ashes all my lust:

The grave's a fine and private place, But none, I think, do there embrace.

ANDREW MARVELL, To His Coy Mistress.

10 And fifteen arms went round her waist.

(And then men ask, Are Barmaids chaste?)

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy.

11 Virgin me no virgins.

PHILIP MASSINGER, New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act iii, sc. 2.

12 'Tis chastity, my brother, chastity:

She that has that is clad in complete steel, And, like a quiver'd nymph with arrows keen, May trace huge forests, and unharbour'd heaths,

Infamous hills, and sandy perilous wilds; Where, through the sacred rays of chastity, No savage fierce, bandite, or mountaineer, Will dare to soil her virgin purity.

MILTON, Comus, l. 420.

Some say no evil thing that walks by night, In fog or fire, by lake or moorish fen, Blue meagre hag, or stubborn unlaid ghost That breaks his magic chains at curfew time, No goblin, or swart fairy of the mine, Hath hurtful power o'er true virginity.

MILTON, Comus, l. 432.

So dear to heav'n is saintly chastity, That when a soul is found sincerely so, A thousand liveried angels lackey her, Driving far off each thing of sin and guilt, And in clear dream and solemn vision, Tell her of things that no gross ear can hear, Till oft converse with heav'nly habitants Begin to cast a beam on th' outward shape.

MILTON, Comus, l. 453.

13 Belike we must be incontinent that we may be continent; burning is quenched by fire.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

14 Do I counsel you to chastity? Chastity is a virtue in some, but in many almost a vice. These, it is true, are abstinent; but from all that they do the bitch of sensuality looks out with envious eyes.

NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra.

15 Chaste is she whom no one has asked. (Casta est, quam nemo rogavit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 43.

She is chaste who was never asked the question.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iii, sc. 3.

An unattempted woman cannot boast of her chastity.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

16 If she is chaste when there is no fear of detection, she is truly chaste; she who sins not because she dares not, does the sin. (Siqua metu dempto casta est, ea denique casta est; Quæ, quia non liceat, non facit, illa facit!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 3.

17 Women always live chastely enough, so that they live charily enough.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, i, 32. (1576)

I learned this old saying in Latin, Caute, si non caste. Live charily, if not chastely.

UNKNOWN, Tinker of Turvey, 36. (1630)

If not chastely, at all events cautiously. (Nisi casta, saltem caute.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

1 What guards the purity of melting maids,
In courtly balls, and midnight masquerades,
Safe from the treacherous friend, the daring spark,

The glance by day, the whisper in the dark;
When kind occasion prompts their warm desires,

When music softens, and when dancing fires?
'Tis but their Sylph, the wise Celestials know,
Tho' Honour is the word with men below.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 71.

2 I envy not their bliss, if he or she
Think fit to live in perfect chastity:
Pure let them be, and free from taint or vice;

I for a few slight spots am not so nice.

POPE, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 36.

Full many a saint, since first the world began,
Lived an unspotted maid in spite of man:
Let such (a God's name) with fine wheat be fed,

And let us honest wives eat barley bread.

POPE, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 46.

3 Not that I mistrust her virtue, but—she is a woman. There lies the suspicion.

RABELAIS.

4 If she seem not chaste to me,
What care I how chaste she be?

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Shall I, Like a Hermit, Dwell?

5 They are thorns which produce roses.

SCHOPENHAUER, of virgins. (EMERSON, Journals, 1864.)

6 Helena: Man is enemy to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?

Parolles: Keep him out.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 123.

7 There was never virgin got till virginity was first lost . . . Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding its own stomach.
Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 140.

8 My chastity's the jewel of our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 2, l. 46.

9 A very honest woman, but something given
to lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 252.

Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the gods make me honest.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 3,
l. 34.

10 Run, run, Orlando: carve on every tree
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 9.

11 The very ice of chastity is in them.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 4,
l. 18.

Chaste as the icicle

That's curdied by the frost from purest snow.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 66.

As chaste as unsunn'd snow.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 14.

As chaste as a picture cut in alabaster.

HENRY WOODFALL, Darby and Joan.

Chaste as morning dew.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 600.

12 There my white stole of chastity I daff'd,
Shook off my sober guards and civil fears.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 297.

13 I will find you twenty lascivious turtles ere one chaste man.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 82.

14 You seem to me as Dian in her orb,

As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 58.

15 Her honour is an essence that's not seen;
They have it very oft that have it not.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 14.

16 Young budding virgin, fair and fresh and sweet,

Whither away, or where is thy abode?

Happy the parents of so fair a child;

Happier the man, whom favourable stars

Allot thee for his lovely bed-fellow!

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iv, sc. 5, l. 37.

Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive,

If you will lead these graces to the grave

And leave the world no copy.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 259.

Fruitless chastity,

Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns,

That on the earth would breed a scarcity

And barren dearth of daughters and of sons.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 751.

17 Women may, as Napoleon said, be the occupation of the idle man, just as men are the preoccupation of the idle woman; but the mass of mankind is too busy and too poor for the long and expensive sieges which the professed libertine lays to virtue.

BERNARD SHAW, Overruled: Preface.

1 Could women but our secret counsel scan—
Could they but reach the deep reserve of man—

To keep our love they'd rate their virtue high:

They live together, and together die.

SHERIDAN, A Trip to Scarborough. Act v, sc. 1.

2 O Chastity, the chief of heavenly lights,
Which mak'st us most immortal shape to wear,

Hold thou my heart, establish thou my sprites;

To only thee my constant course I bear.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii.

Who doth desire that chaste his wife should be,
First be he true, for truth doth truth deserve.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii.

3 A woman who has sacrificed her chastity will hesitate at no other iniquity. (Neque femina, amissa pudicitia, alia abnuerit.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 3.

4 Virginity is a life of angels, the enamel of the soul.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. ii, sec. 3.

Chastity is either abstinence or continence. Abstinence is that of virgins or widows; continence, of married persons.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. ii, sec. 3.

5 Then she rode forth, clothed on with chastity.

TENNYSON, Godiva, l. 53.

6 To lead sweet lives in purest chastity.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 471.

I know the Table Round, my friends of old;
All brave, and many generous, and some chaste.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 814.

7 Even from the body's purity, the mind
Receives a secret sympathetic aid.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1267.

8 I would wring your neck with my own hands rather than permit an attempt on your honor;
for, look you, I love you well enough for that. (Je te tordrai le cou de mes propres mains plutôt que de souffrir qu'on attente à ton honneur; car, vois-tu, je t'aime assez pour cela.)

VOLTAIRE, La Échange. Act ii, sc. 7. Le Baron de la Canardière to his daughter.

9 I have been so misused by chaste men with one wife

That I would live with satyrs all my life.
ANNA WICKHAM, Ship Near Shoals.

10 Acquainted with the world, and quite well-bred,

Drusa receives her visitants in bed;
But, chaste as ice, this Vesta, to defy
The very blackest tongues of calumny,
When from the sheets her lovely form she lifts,
She begs you just would turn you, while she shifts.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 36.

11 Beneath this stone I lie, the famous woman who loosed her zone to one man only. ("Αδ' ἐγὼ ἀ περιβωτος ὑπὸ πλακί τῆδε τέθαμμαι, μόνῳ ἐνὶ ζῶναι ἀνέρι λυσαμένα.")

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 324.)

CHAUCER, GEOFFREY

12 And Chaucer, with his infantine
Familiar clasp of things divine;
That mark upon his lip is wine.
E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 388.

13 Chaucer is glad and erect.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakespeare.

14 He is the poet of the dawn, who wrote
The Canterbury Tales, and his old age
Made beautiful with song; and as I read
I hear the crowing cock, I hear the note
Of lark and linnet, and from every page
Rise odors of ploughed field or flowery mead.

LONGFELLOW, Chaucer.

15 Sith on my language he was the lode-star. . . .

Sith he in Englishmaking was the best,
Pray unto God to give his soul good rest.

And in our tongue was well of eloquence.

UNKNOWN, The Book of Courtesye. St. 50. (c. 1470) The reference is also to Chaucer.

From purest wells of English undefiled

None deeper drank than he, the New World's child.

J. G. WHITTIER, James Russell Lowell.

1 Dan Chaucer, the first warbler, whose sweet breath

Preluded those melodious bursts that fill
The spacious times of great Elizabeth
With sounds that echo still.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women. St. 2.

2 Some kind person has sent me Chawcer's poems. Mr. C. had talent, but he couldn't spel. No man has a right to be a lit'rary man onless he knows how to spel. It is a pity that Chawcer, who had genevus, was so uneducated. He's the wus speller I know of.

ARTEMUS WARD, Chawcer's Poems.

CHEATING

3 Like strawberry wives, that laid two or three great strawberries at the mouth of their pot, and all the rest were little ones.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 54.

4 The first and worst of all frauds is to cheat one's self.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Anywhere.

He is most cheated who cheats himself. (Den sviges vaerst, som sviger sig selv.)

UNKNOWN. A Danish proverb.

5 This is a pretty flimflam.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act iii, sc. 3.

*Twas a most notorious flam.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 887.

6 Don't steal; thou'lt never thus compete Successfully in business. Cheat.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary: The Decalogue Revised.

Thou shalt not steal: an empty feat,
When it's so lucrative to cheat.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, The Latest Decalogue.

7 To suppose one cheat
Can gull all these, were more miraculous far
Than aught we should confess a miracle.

ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium."

8 Doubtless the pleasure is as great
Of being cheated, as to cheat;
As lookers-on feel most delight
That least perceive a juggler's sleight,
And still, the less they understand,
The more they admire his sleight of hand.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 3, l. 1.

First wish to be imposed on, and then are.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 290.

9 He is not cheated who knows he is being cheated. (Non decipitur qui scit se decipi.)

6 The child that is not clean and neat,
With lots of toys and things to eat,
He is a naughty child, I'm sure—
Or else his dear papa is poor.
R. L. STEVENSON, System.

7 It is very nice to think
The world is full of meat and drink,
With little children saying grace
In every Christian kind of place.
R. L. STEVENSON, A Thought.

8 A child should always say what's true
And speak when he is spoken to,
And behave mannerly at table;
At least as far as he is able.
R. L. STEVENSON, Whole Duty of Children.

9 Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For God hath made them so;
Let bears and lions growl and fight,
For 'tis their nature, too.

But, children, you should never let
Such angry passions rise;
Your little hands were never made
To tear each other's eyes.
ISAAC WATTS, Against Quarrelling and Fight- ing. The last word of the fourth line is persistently misquoted "to."

'Tis a shameful sight,
When children of one family
Fall out, and chide, and fight.
ISAAC WATTS, Love Between Brothers and Sisters.

10 While others early learn to swear,
And curse, and lie, and steal;
Lord, I am taught Thy name to fear,
And do Thy holy will.
ISAAC WATTS, Praise for Mercies Spiritual and Temporal.

V—Children: Their Training

See also Education of Children

11 You can do anything with children if you only play with them.
BISMARCK, Sayings of Bismarck.

12 Women know
The way to rear up children (to be just);
They know a simple, merry, tender knack
Of tying sashes, fitting baby-shoes,
And stringing pretty words that make no sense,
And kissing full sense into empty words;
Which things are corals to cut life upon,
Although such trifles.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 48.

He that coddles his child provides for his enemy.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A spoilt child never loves its mother.
SIR HENRY TAYLOR, Notes from Life, p. 123.

13 Go practise if you please
With men and women: leave a child alone
For Christ's particular love's sake!
ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. iii, l. 88.

14 Speak roughly to your little boy,
And beat him when he sneezes:
He only does it to annoy,
Because he knows it teases.
LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 6.

15 Respect the child. Be not too much his parent. Trespass not on his solitude.
EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Education.

16 Let thy child's first lesson be obedience, and the second will be what thou wilt.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard.

17 Children learn to creep ere they can learn to go.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

The wee birdie fa's when it tries ower soon to flee,
Folks are sure to tumble, when they climb ower hie;

They wha cannot walk right are sure to come to wrang,

Creep awa', my bairnie, creep afore ye gang.

JAMES BALLANTINE, Creep Afore Ye Gang.

Children have more need of models than of critics. (Les enfants ont plus besoin de modèles que de critiques.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 261.

Whilst that the child is young, let him be instructed in virtue and literature.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues: Of the Education of Youth.

Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 150.

See also under TREE.

Give thy child what he will crave,
And thy whelp what he will have,
Then mayst thou make you a stounde,
A foul child and a fair hounde.

ROBERT MANNYNG (ROBERT DE BRUNNE),
Handlyng Synne, l. 7240. (1303)

Give a child his will and a whelp his fill,
Both will surely turn out ill.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, p. 70.

Children are to be won to follow liberal studies by exhortations and rational motives and on no account to be forced thereto by whipping.

PLUTARCH, Of the Training of Children.

Those that do teach young babes
Do it with gentle means and easy tasks.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 111.

Train up a child in the way he should go;
and when he is old, he will not depart from it.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 6.

Why does the nurse tell the child of Raw-head and Bloody-bones? To keep it in awe.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Priests of Rome.

Better a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 3, l. 11.

It is better to bind your children to you by respect and gentleness, than by fear. (Pudore et liberalitate liberos Retinere satius esse credo quam metu.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 57. (Act i, sc. 1.)

As each one wishes his children to be, so they are. (Ut quisque suum volt esse, itast.)
TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 399. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

VI—Children: Spare the Rod and Spoil the Child

Diogenes struck the father when the son swore.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 5.

O ye! who teach the ingenuous youth of nations,

Holland, France, England, Germany, or Spain,

I pray ye flog them upon all occasions,
It mends their morals, never mind the pain.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 1.

He that will not use the rod on his child, his child shall be used as a rod on him.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Parent.

Better the child should cry than the father. (Es ist besser das Kind weine, denn der Vater.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

He never spoils the child and spares the rod,
But spoils the rod, and never spares the child.

THOMAS HOOD, The Irish Schoolmaster. St. 12.

That sour tree of knowledge—now a birch.

THOMAS HOOD, The Irish Schoolmaster. St. 6.

There is now less flogging in our great schools than formerly,—but then less is learned there; so that what the boys get at one end they lose at the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

Whoso spareth the spring spoileth his children.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus v, l. 41. (1377)

They spare the rod and spoil the child.

RALPH VENNING, Mysteries and Revelations, p. 5. (1649)

Spare the rod and spoil the child.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 45. (1664)

The man that's ne'er been flogged has ne'er been taught. ( $\Delta\mu\eta\ \delta\alpha\pi\epsilon\iota\varsigma\ \alpha\upsilon\theta\epsilon\rho\omega\pi\omicron\varsigma\ \sigma\upsilon\ \pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\upsilon\epsilon\tau\alpha\iota$ .)

MENANDER, Rapizomene. Frag. 422. (The Girl Who Gets Flogged.)

He that spareth his rod hateth his son.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiii, 24.

As he spared his rod, he hated his child.

ÆLFRIC, Homilies. Bk. ii, l. 324. (c. 1000)

Who spareth the yard hateth the child. (Qui parsit virge odit filium.)

UNKNOWN, Governance of Princes, 161. (1422)
Quoted as a precept of Solomon.

If you strike a child, take care that you strike it in anger, even at the risk of maiming it for life. A blow in cold blood neither can nor should be forgiven.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

There is nothing that more displeaseth God, Than from their children to spare the rod.
JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 1954.

VII—Children: Little Pitchers

1 Teach your child to hold his tongue; he'll learn fast enough to speak.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

2 Children have wide ears and long tongues.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1097.

3 The child says nothing but what it heard by the fire.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 Avoid your children: small pitchers have wide ears.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants.

JOHN LACY, Sauny the Scot. Pt. iv.

Pitchers have ears.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 52. Richard III. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 37.

5 Children pick up words as pigeons peas, And utter them again as God shall please.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 213. (1670)

VIII—Children and Parents

See also Father, Mother, Parents

6 "Late children," says the Spanish proverb, "are early orphans."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to John Alleen, on early marriages.

7 Happy is he that is happy in his children.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1787.

8 He that wipes the child's nose kisseth the mother's cheek.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

9 Lost in the children of the present spouse, They slight the pledges of their former vows.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 25. (Pope, tr.)

Put another man's child in your bosom and he'll creep out at your elbow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10 This child is not mine as the first was,

I cannot sing it to rest,

I cannot lift it up fatherly

And bliss it upon my breast:

Yet it lies in my little one's cradle

And sits in my little one's chair,

And the light of the heaven she's gone to Transfigures its golden hair.

J. R. LOWELL, The Changeling.

11 Never a head is dimmed with gray but another is sunned with curls;

She was a girl and he was a boy, but yet there are boys and girls.

COSMO MONKHOUSE, A Dead March.

12 A mother's pride, a father's joy.

WALTER SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 15.

13 A child and weak,

Mine, a delight to no man, sweet to me.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon.

14 Oh, how very thankful I always should be, That I have kind parents to watch over me, Who teach me from wickedness ever to flee!

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, Poor Children.

15 Children begin by loving their parents. After a time they judge them. Rarely, if ever, do they forgive them.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act ii.

16 And when with envy time transported,

Shall think to rob us of our joys,

You'll in your girls again be courted,

And I'll go wooing in my boys.

UNKNOWN, Winifreda. Claimed for Gilbert Cooper by JOHN AIKIN (Collection of English Songs) and WALTER THORNBURY (Two Centuries of Song). First appeared in Miscellaneous Poems by Several Hands, 1726. Included in PERCY'S Reliques, bk. iii, No. 13.

IX—Children: The Lad That Is Gone

17 When I was as you are now, towering in the confidence of twenty-one, little did I suspect that I should be at forty-nine, what I now am.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Bennet Langton. (BOSWELL, Life, 1758.)

18 Across the fields of yesterday

He sometimes comes to me,

A little lad just back from play—

The lad I used to be.

And yet he smiles so wistfully

Once he has crept within,

I wonder if he hopes to see

The man I might have been.

THOMAS S. JONES, JR., Sometimes.

19 Each one has been a little child,

A little child with laughing look,

A lovely white unwritten book;

A book that God will take, my friend,

As each goes out at journey's end.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. St. 27.

20 Where is the promise of my years,

Once written on my brow?

Ere errors, agonies, and fears

Brought with them all that speaks in tears,

Ere I had sunk beneath my peers;

Where sleeps that promise now?

ADAM ISAACS MENKEN, Infelix.

21 How different is the man you are from the child you were. (Dissimiles hic vir et ille puer.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ix, l. 24.

1 Looking on the lines
Of my boy's face, methoughts I did recoil Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbreech'd,

In my green velvet coat, my dagger muzzled,
Lest it should bite its master, and so prove,
As ornaments oft do, too dangerous.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 153.

2 Sing me a song of a lad that is gone;
Say, could that lad be I?

Merry of soul he sailed on a day
Over the sea to Skye.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Lad That is Gone.

3 I called the boy to my knee one day,
And I said: "You're just past four;
Will you laugh in the same lighthearted way
When you've turned, say, thirty more?"

Then I thought of a past I'd fain erase—
More clouded skies than blue—

And I anxiously peered in his upturned face
For it seemed to say: "Did you?"

CARL WERNER, The Questioner.

4 But still I dream that somewhere there must be

The spirit of a child that waits for me.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The Poet's Journal: Third Evening.

CHIVALRY

5 The world's male chivalry has perished out,
But women are knight-errants to the last.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vii, l. 224.

6 The age of chivalry is gone; that of sophisters, economists, and calculators has succeeded.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

The unbought grace of life, the cheap defence of nations, the nurse of manly sentiment and heroic enterprise, is gone!

BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

"The age of chivalry is past," said Miss Dacre.
"Bores have succeeded to dragons."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Young Duke. Bk. ii, ch. 5.

Some say that the age of chivalry is past, that the spirit of romance is dead. The age of chivalry is never past so long as there is a wrong left unredressed on earth.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Life. Vol. ii, ch. 28.

For now I see the true old times are dead,
When every morning brought a noble chance,
And every chance brought out a noble knight.

TENNYSON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 397.

7 The Knight of the Rueful Countenance. (El Caballero de la Triste Figura.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 19. See also CERVANTES.

8 A Knight there was, and that a worthy man,
That from the time that he first began
To ride out, he loved chivalry, Truth and honour, freedom and courtesy. . . .

And though that he was worthy, he was wise,
And of his port as meek as is a maid.

He never yet no villany had said

In all his life, unto no manner wight.

He was a very parfit gentle knight.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 43.

The Knight's bones are dust,

And his good sword rust;—

His soul is with the saints, I trust.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Knight's Tomb.

9 The whole of heraldry and of chivalry is in courtesy.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

10 And hearts were soft, though blows were hard;
But when the fight was over,

A brimming goblet cheered the board,

His Lady's smile the lover.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Chivalry at a Discount.

11 Chivalry is an ingredient
Sadly lacking in our land.

Sir, I am your most obedient,

Most obedient to command!

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act i.

12 He loved the twilight that surrounds
The border-land of old romance;

Where glitter hauberk, helm, and lance,

And banner waves, and trumpet sounds,

And ladies ride with hawk on wrist,

And mighty warriors sweep along,

Magnified by the purple mist,

The dusk of centuries and of song.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. i,
Prelude, l. 130.

13 Forward, each gentleman and knight!
Let gentle blood show generous might,
And chivalry redeem the fight!

SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto vi, st. 24.

For lady's suit, and minstrel's strain,
By knight should ne'er be heard in vain.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 13.

14 His square-turned joints, and strength of limb,
Showed him no carpet knight so trim,
But, in close fight, a champion grim,

In camps, a leader sage.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 5.

For CARPET KNIGHT, see under FOP.

1 So faithful in love, and so dauntless in war,
There never was knight like the young Loch-invar.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, st. 12.

2 Dread thou to speak presumptuous doom
On noble Marmion's lowly tomb;
But say, "He died a gallant knight,
With sword in hand, for England's right."

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 37.

3 I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 94.

4 And there at Venice gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 97.

And on his breast a bloody cross he bore,
The dear remembrance of his dying Lord,
For whose sweet sake that glorious badge he wore.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 2.

For I was of Christ's choosing, I God's knight,
No blinkard heathen stumbling for scant light.
SWINBURNE, Laus Veneris. St. 53.

5 A true knight,
Not yet mature, yet matchless, firm of word,
Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provoked nor being provoked soon
calm'd;

His heart and hand both open and both free.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc.
5, l. 96.

6 Thy necessity is yet greater than mine.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, as he lay mortally wounded on the battlefield of Zutphen, 22 July, 1586, and passed a bottle of water to a wounded soldier. (Authority of FULKE GREVILLE; also HUME, History of England. Ch. 18.)

Battles nor songs can from oblivion save,
But Fame upon a white deed loves to build:
From out that cup of water Sidney gave,
Not one drop has been spilled.

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Immortality.

Ay, not yet may the land forget that bore and loved thee and praised and wept,
Sidney, lord of the stainless sword, the name of names that her heart's love kept.

SWINBURNE, Astrophel. Pt. ii, l. 4. After reading Sidney's Arcadia.

7 A gentle knight was pricking on the plain.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 1.

Yet was he but a squire of low degree.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto vii, st. 15.

8 A kingly flower of knights, a sunflower,
That shone against the sunlight like the sun.
SWINBURNE, The Complaint of Lisa.

9 And indeed he seems to me
Scarce other than my own ideal knight,
"Who revered his conscience as his king;
Whose glory was, redressing human wrong;
Who spake no slander, no, nor listened to it."

TENNYSON, Idylls of the King: Dedication, l. 6.

10 Oh for a knight like Bayard,
Without reproach or fear;
My light glove on his casque of steel,
My love-knot on his spear! . . .

But now life's slumberous current
No sun-bowed cascade wakes;
No tall, heroic manhood
The level dulness breaks.
J. G. WHITTIER, The Hero.

11 Who passes by this road so late?

Compagnon de la Majolaine!

Who passes by this road so late?
Always gay!

Of all the king's knights 'tis the flower,
Compagnon de la Majolaine,
Of all the king's knights 'tis the flower,
Always gay!

UNKNOWN, Compagnon de la Majolaine. An old French song quoted by DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Ch. 1.

12 Knight without fear and without reproach.
(Chevalier sans peur et sans reproche.)

Applied to PIERRE DU TERRAIL, CHEVALIER DE BAYARD.

Mourn, Columbia! for one of thy brightest stars has set, a son without fear and without reproach.

UNKNOWN, National Intelligencer, 24 Mar., 1820, on the death of Stephen Decatur, as the result of a duel with Capt. Barron.

CHOICE

13 My death and life,
My bane and antidote, are both before me.
ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1.

14 White shall not neutralize the black, nor good Compensate bad in man, absolve him so:
Life's business being just the terrible choice.
BROWNING, The Ring and the Book: The Pope, l. 1236.

15 The strongest principle of growth lies in human choice.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. vi, ch. 42.

16 God offers to every mind its choice between truth and repose.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

And but two ways are offered to our will,
Toil with rare triumph, ease with safe disgrace,
The problem still for us and all of human race.
LOWELL, Under the Old Elm. Pt. vii, st. 3.

1
I say, do not choose.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

2
Everything has two handles, by one of which it ought to be carried and by the other not. (Πάν πρᾶγμα δύο ἔχει λαβὰς, τὴν μὲν φορητὴν, τὴν δὲ ἀφορητὴν.)

EPICTETUS, Encheiridion. Sec. 43. Quoted by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, 2, 3.

3
The king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way.

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xxi, 21.

4
Any color, so long as it's red,
Is the color that suits me best,
Though I will allow there is much to be said
For yellow and green and the rest.

EUGENE FIELD, Red.

5
But it is said and ever shall,
Between two stools lieth the fall.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis: Prologue, l. 336. (1390)

While between two stools, my tail go to the ground.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

One falls to the ground in trying to sit between two stools. (S'asseoir entre deux selles le cul à terre.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 2.

6
Or fight or fly,
This choice is left you to resist or die.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 79. (Pope, tr.)

7
God had sifted three kingdoms to find the wheat for this planting.

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. iv, st. 8.

God sifted a whole nation that he might send choice grain over into this wilderness.

WILLIAM STOUGHTON, Election Sermon. Boston, 29 April, 1669.

8
But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

New Testament: Luke, x, 42.

The Sons of Mary seldom bother, for they have inherited that good part;

But the Sons of Martha favour their Mother of the careful soul and the troubled heart.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Sons of Martha.

9
Where there is no choice, we do well to make no difficulty.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Sir Gibbie. Ch. xi.

10
I never knows the children. It's just six of one and half-a-dozen of the other.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, The Pirate. Ch. iv.

11
Many are called but few are chosen.

New Testament: Matthew, xxii, 14.

12
Rather than be less
Car'd not to be at all.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 47.

13
The difficulty in life is the choice.

GEORGE MOORE, Bending of the Bough. Act iv.

14
There's small choice in rotten apples.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 138.

15
There is such a choice of difficulties that I am myself at a loss how to determine.

JAMES WOLFE, Despatch, to Pitt, 2 Sept., 1759.

Hobson's choice.

Tobias Hobson (d. 1630) was the first man in England that let out hackney horses. When a man came for a horse, he was led into the stable, where there was a great choice, but he obliged him to take the horse that stood next to the stable-door; . . . from whence it became a proverb when what ought to be your election was forced upon you, to say, "Hobson's choice."—RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator, No. 509. Hobson's first name was really Thomas, he was born in 1544, and died at Cambridge in 1631.

I had Hobson's choice, either be a Hobson or nothing.

UNKNOWN, Somers Tracts, vii, 87. (1649)

Where to elect there is but one,
'Tis Hobson's choice,—take that or none.

THOMAS WARD, England's Reformation. Ch. 4. (1630)

II—Choice: Of Evils

17
Of evils we must choose the least. (Τὰ ἐλάχιστα ληπτέον τῶν κακῶν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 4. Quoted as a saying.

Of harmes two the less is for to choose.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 470.

Of two evils, the lesser should be chosen. (E duobus malis minimum eligendum.)

ERASMUS, Adagia.

Of two evils we take the less.

RICHARD HOOKER, Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity. Bk. v, ch. 81.

Of two evils, the less is always to be chosen. (De duobus malis, minus est semper eligendum.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 13, sec. 3.

18
I have learned from philosophers that among evils one ought not only to choose the least, but also to extract even from these any element of good that they may contain. (Quia sic ab hominibus doctis accepimus, non solum ex malis eligere minima oportere, sed etiam excerpere ex his ipsis, si quid inesset boni.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 1, sec. 3.

1 Life often presents us with a choice of evils, rather than of goods.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, p. 362.

When better choices are not to be had,
We needs must take the seeming best of bad.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The History of the Civil War.
Bk. ii, st. 24.

2 When compelled to choose one of two evils, no one will choose the greater when he may choose the lesser. ("Ὅταν τε ἀναγκασθῇ δύοιν κακοῖν, τὸ ἕτερον αἰρεῖσθαι, οὐδεὶς τὸ μείζον αἰρήσεται ἐξὸν τὸ ἑλαττον.")

SOCRATES. (PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 358 D.)

3 Of two evils, choose neither.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman.

CHRIST

I—Christ: His Birth

4 Trumpets! Lightnings! The earth trembles!
But into the Virgin's womb thou didst descend with noiseless tread.

AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS, On the Birth of Christ. (Greek Anthology. Bk. i, epig. 37.)

The manger is Heaven, yes, greater than Heaven.
Heaven is the handiwork of this child.

AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS, On the Birth of Christ. (Greek Anthology. Bk. i, epig. 38.)

5 Of the offspring of the gentleman Jafeth come Abraham, Moses, Aaron, and the prophets, also the King of the right line of Mary, of whom that gentleman Jesus was borne.

JULIANA BERNERS, Blasyng of Armys. (c. 1375)

6 To work a wonder, God would have her shown,

At once, a Bud, and yet a Rose full-blown.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Virgin Mary.

7 Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel.

Old Testament: Isaiah, vii, 14.

Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.

New Testament: Matthew, i, 23.

8 He is despised and rejected of men: a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.

Old Testament: Isaiah, liii, 3.

9 "Isn't this Joseph's son?"—ay, it is He;
Joseph the carpenter—same trade as me.

CATHERINE C. LIDDELL, Jesus the Carpenter.

10 A virgin shall conceive, a virgin bear a son!
From Jesse's root behold a branch arise,

Whose sacred flower with fragrance fills the skies.

POPE, Messiah, l. 8.

Hark! a glad voice the lonely desert cheers:

Prepare the way! a God, a God appears!

A God, a God! the vocal hills reply;

The rocks proclaim th' approaching Deity.

Lo, earth receives him from the bending skies!

Sink down, ye mountains, and, ye valleys, rise;

With heads declin'd, ye cedars, homage pay;

Be smooth, ye rocks; ye rapid floods, give way!

The Saviour comes, by ancient bards foretold!

Hear him, ye deaf, and all ye blind, behold!

POPE, Messiah, l. 29.

Now the Virgin returns, and the reign of Saturn;

Now descends from heaven a new generation. . . .

His shall be the gift of life divine, and empire

Over a world to which his father's virtues have brought peace.

(Jam redit et Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna;

Jam nova progenies cælo demittitur alto. . . .

Ille deum vitam accipiet . . .

Pacatumque reget patriis virtutibus orbem.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. iv, l. 6. Vergil's reference is to Astrea, or Justice, last of the immortals to leave the earth.

11 Little Jesus, was Thou shy
Once, and just so small as I?

And what did it feel like to be

Out of Heaven, and just like me?

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Ex Ore Infantium.

The Christ-child stood at Mary's knee,
His hair was like a crown,

And all the flowers looked up at Him,

And all the stars looked down.

G. K. CHESTERTON, A Christmas Carol.

12 Mother and maiden Was never none but she!
Well might such a lady God's mother be.

UNKNOWN, A Carol.

II—Christ: His Life

13

The best of men

That e'er wore earth about him was a sufferer;

A soft, meek, patient, humble, tranquil spirit,

The first true gentleman that ever breathed.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act 1, sc. 12.

14

Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man! (Ecce homo.)

New Testament: John, xix, 5.

15

Into the woods my Master went,

Clean forspent, forspent.

Into the woods my Master came,

Forspent with love and shame.

SIDNEY LANIER, A Ballad of Trees and the Master.

16

It is I; be not afraid.

New Testament: Matthew, xiv, 27.

1 Two thousand years ago there was One here on this earth who lived the grandest life that ever has been lived yet,—a life that every thinking man, with deeper or shallower meaning, has agreed to call divine.

F. W. ROBERTSON, Lectures and Addresses: Skeptical Publications.

2 He went about, he was so kind,
To cure poor people who were blind;
And many who were sick and lame,
He pitied them and did the same.

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, About Jesus Christ.

III—Christ: His Death

3 There is a green hill far away,
Without a city wall,
Where the dear Lord was crucified,
Who died to save us all.

CECIL FRANCES ALEXANDER, There Is a Green Hill.

4 Now he is dead. Far hence he lies
In the lorn Syrian town;
And on his grave, with shining eyes,
The Syrian stars look down.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Obermann Once More, l. 173.

Where Life was slain and Truth was slandered
On that one holier hill than Rome.

G. K. CHESTERTON, To F. C. in Memoriam Palestine.

Lovely was the death
Of Him whose Life was Love!
S. T. COLERIDGE, Religious Musings, l. 29.

5 When Jesus came to Golgotha,
They hanged him on a tree,
They drove great nails through hands and feet,

And made a Calvary;
They crowned him with a crown of thorns,
Red were his wounds and deep,
For those were crude and cruel days,
And human flesh was cheap.

G. A. STUDDERT-KENNEDY, Indifference.

6 By the Cross, on which suspended,
With his bleeding hands extended,
Hung that Son she so adored,
Stood the mournful Mother weeping,
She whose heart, its silence keeping,
Grief had cleft as with a sword.

(Stabat mater dolorosa
Iuxta crucem lacrimosa,
Dum pendebat filius,
Cuius animam gementem,
Contristantem et dolentem
Pertransivit gladius.)

JACOPONE DA TODI, Stabat Mater. (D. F. MacCarthy, tr.)

7 The man, the Christ, the soldier,

Who from his cross of pain
Cried to the dying comrade,
"Lad, we shall meet again!"

WILLARD WATTLES, Comrades of the Cross.

8 Had Christ the death of death to death
Not given death by dying,
The gates of life had never been
To mortals open lying.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph. On Tombstone in Castle-Camps churchyard, Cambridgeshire, England.

Death when to death a death by death hath given
Then shall be oped the long-shut gates of Heaven.
(Mors, mortis morti mortem nisi morte dedisset.)
THOMAS HEYWOOD, Of the Sybells.

9 God bought men here with His heart's blood expense;
And man sold God here for base thirty pence.
ROBERT HERRICK, God's Price and Man's Price.

Betrayer of the Master,
He sways against the sky
A black and broken body,
Iscaiot—or I?
CAROLINE GILTINAN, Identity.

IV—Christ: His Influence

10 Speak low to me, my Saviour, low and sweet
From out the hallelujahs, sweet and low,
Lest I should fear and fall, and miss Thee so
Who art not missed by any that entreat.
E. B. BROWNING, Comfort.

11 In every pang that rends the heart
The Man of Sorrows has a part.
MICHAEL BRUCE, Christ Ascended.

12 The difference between Socrates and Jesus Christ? The great Conscious; the immeasurably great Unconscious.
THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 28 Oct., 1833.

13 He was the Word, that spake it;
He took the bread and brake it;
And what that Word did make it,
I do believe and take it.
JOHN DONNE, On the Sacrament. (1633)

Christ was the word that spake it;
He took the bread and brake it;
And what that word did make it,
That I believe and take it.
Attributed to QUEEN ELIZABETH, of England, when, before her coronation in 1558, twenty-five years before Donne was born, she parried the question of a Catholic priest as to whether she believed in the real Presence in the communion bread.

14 The vine-wreathed god
Rising, a stifed question from the silence, Fronts the pierced Image with the crown of thorns.
GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i, l. 103.

1 Christ preached the greatness of man: We preach the greatness of Christ. The first is affirmative; the last negative.
EMERSON, Journals, 1867.

2 Jesus, whose name is not so much written as ploughed into the history of this world.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Address.

3 Jesus was Jesus because he refused to listen to another and listened at home.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion; also The Sovereignty of Ethics.

An era in human history is the life of Jesus, and its immense influence for good leaves all the perversion and superstition that has accrued almost harmless.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.

4 He is a path, if any be misled;
He is a robe, if any naked be;
If any chance to hunger, he is bread;
If any be a bondman, he is free;
If any be but weak, how strong is he!
To dead men life is he, to sick men health;
To blind men sight, and to the needy wealth;
A pleasure without loss, a treasure without stealth.

GILES FLETCHER, Excellency of Christ.

5 I have prayed in her fields of poppies,
I have laughed with the men who died—
But in all my ways and through all my days
Like a friend He walked beside.

I have seen a sight under Heaven
That only God understands,
In the battle's glare I have seen Christ there
With the Sword of God in His hand.

GORDON JOHNSTONE, On Fields of Flanders.

Now we remember over here in Flanders,
(It isn't strange to think of You in Flanders!)
This hideous warfare seems to make things clear.
We never thought about You much in England,
But now that we are far away from England
We have no doubts, we know that You are here.

MRS. C. T. WHITMELL, Christ in Flanders.

6 In darkness there is no choice. It is light that enables us to see the differences between things; and it is Christ that gives us light.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

7 Shepherd of mortals, here behold
A little flock, a wayside fold
That wait thy presence to be blest—
O Man of Nazareth, be our guest.

DANIEL HENDERSON, Hymn for a Household.

8 Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;

He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword;

His truth is marching on.

JULIA WARD HOWE, Battle-Hymn of the Republic.

9 Whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

New Testament: John, i, 27.

10 He that lends
To Him, need never fear to lose his venture.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act ii, sc. 8.

11 But Thee, but Thee, O sovereign Seer of time,
But Thee, O poets' Poet, Wisdom's Tongue,
But Thee, O man's best Man, O love's best Love,

O perfect life in perfect labor writ,
O all men's Comrade, Servant, King, or Priest,—

Oh, what amiss may I forgive in Thee,
Jesus, good Paragon, thou Crystal Christ?

SIDNEY LANIER, The Crystal. Last lines.

12 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

New Testament: Luke, xxiii, 6.

Thou hast conquered, O Galilean! (Vicisti, Galilæe!)

EMPEROR JULIAN, "The Apostate," his dying words, addressed to the Christ he had denied. (THEODORET, Historia Eccles., iii, 20.) The story is probably without authenticity. Gibbon (Ch. 23) affirms that Julian remained a Platonist to the last. Montaigne (Bk. ii, ch. 19) states that the words are also given, "Content thyself, O Nazarean."

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; the world has grown grey from thy breath;
We have drunken of things Lethean, and fed on the fullness of death.

Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day;

But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.

SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 35.

13 Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.

New Testament: Matthew, xxviii, 20.

14 With this ambiguous earth
His dealings have been told us. There abide:
The signal to a maid, the human birth,
The lesson, and the young Man crucified.

ALICE MEYNELL, Christ in the Universe.

15 The hands of Christ seem very frail,
For they were broken by a nail.
But only they reach Heaven at last
Whom these frail, broken hands hold fast.

JOHN RICHARD MORELAND, His Hands.

Love cannot die, nor truth betray;
Christ rose upon an April day.

JOHN RICHARD MORELAND, Resurgam.

1 Ah! what if some unshamed iconoclast
Crumbling old fetish raiments of the past,
Rises from dead ceremonies the Christ at last?
What if men take to following where He leads,

Weary of mumbling Athanasian creeds?

RODEN NOËL, The Red Flag.

2 Only a Christ could have conceived a Christ.

JOSEPH PARKER, Ecce Deus. Ch. 11.

3 To live is Christ, and to die is gain.

New Testament: Philippians, i, 21.

4 I see His blood upon the rose
And in the stars the glory of His eyes,
His body gleams amid eternal snows,
His tears fall from the skies.

JOSEPH M. PLUNKETT, I See His Blood.

5 Therefore, friends,
As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross
We are impressed and engaged to fight . . .
To chase these pagans in those holy fields
Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet,
Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd

For our advantage on the bitter cross.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 18.

6 Our fair father Christ.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 559.

7 And so the Word had breath, and wrought
With human hands the creed of creeds
In loveliness of perfect deeds,
More strong than all poetic thought.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. xxxvi.

8 All His glory and beauty come from within,
and there He delights to dwell, His visits
there are frequent, His conversation sweet,
His comforts refreshing; and His peace passing all understanding.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

His love, at once, and dread, instruct our thought;

As man He suffer'd, and as God He taught.

EDMUND WALLER, Of Divine Love. Canto iii, l. 41.

9 This ae nighte, this ae nighte,
Every nighte and all;
Fire and sleete, and candle lighte,

And Christe receive thy saule.

V—Christ: Hymns of Praise

10 Hail, O bleeding Head and wounded,
With a crown of thorns surrounded.

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, Passion Hymn. (Coles, tr.)

11 Just as I am, without one plea
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bid'st me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come!

CHARLOTTE ELLIOTT, Just As I Am.

12 Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Jesus' love;

JOHN FAWCETT, Blest Be the Tie That Binds.

13 The Son of God goes forth to war,
A kingly crown to gain;
His blood-red banner streams afar!
Who follows in His train?

REGINALD HEBER, The Son of God Goes Forth to War.

14 One Name above all glorious names
With its ten thousand tongues
The everlasting sea proclaims,
Echoing angelic songs.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Septuagesima Sunday. St. 9.

Sun of my soul! Thou Saviour dear,
It is not night if Thou be near.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Evening.

15 The head that once was crowned with thorns
Is crowned with glory now.

THOMAS KELLEY, Hymn.

16 Near, so very near to God,
Nearer I cannot be;
For in the person of his Son
I am as near as he.

CATESBY PAGET, Hymn.

17 All hail the power of Jesus' name!
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
To crown Him Lord of all!

EDWARD PERRONET, Coronation.

18 Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly,
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high!

CHARLES WESLEY, In Temptation.

I—Christianity: Apothegms

19 If a man cannot be a Christian in the place where he is, he cannot be a Christian anywhere.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

1 A Christian is one who rejoices in the superiority of a rival.

EDWIN BOOTH, (W. L. PHELPS, Jealousy.)

2 I dare without usurpation assume the honourable style of a Christian.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, 1.

3 And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.

New Testament: Acts, xi, 26.

4 Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian.

New Testament, Acts, xxvi, 28.

5 His Christianity was muscular.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 14.

6 The whole religious complexion of the modern world is due to the absence from Jerusalem of a lunatic asylum.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. iii, p. 130.

7 A local thing called Christianity.

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts: Spirit of the Years. Sc. 6.

8 That Christian principle, conciliation.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 417.

What was invented two thousand years ago was the spirit of Christianity.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Bk. ii, ch. 18.

9 You are Christians of the best edition, all picked and culled.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 50.

10 Bend thy neck, meek Sicambrian: adore what thou hast burned, burn what thou hast adored.

ST. REMI, at the baptism of Clovis I, 496.

(GREGORY OF TOURS, Ecclesiastical History of the Franks, ii, ch. 31.) By a curious change of meaning, "meek" has become "proud," in the French proverb, "Fléchis le cou, fier Sicambre!"

11 Neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan or man.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 34.

Some Christians have a comfortable creed.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 86.

12 The Hebrew will turn Christian: he grows kind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 179.

13 This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs: if we grow all to be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 24.

In converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 38.

14 It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 1, l. 103.

Christ bless thee, brother, for that Christian speech!

SOUTHEY, Roderick. Sec. 5.

15 As to the Christian creed, if true

Or false, I never questioned it;

I took it as the vulgar do.

SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 512.

16 A Christian is the highest style of man.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 788.

A Christian is God Almighty's gentleman.

A. W. AND J. C. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

His tribe were God Almighty's gentlemen.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 645.

17 Scratch the Christian and you find the pagan—spoiled.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Children of the Ghetto. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

A pagan heart, a Christian soul had he.

He followed Christ, yet for dead Pan he sighed.

As if Theocritus in Sicily

Had come upon the Figure crucified.

MAURICE FRANCIS EGAN, Maurice de Guérin.

II—Christianity: Its Virtues

18 There was never law, or sect, or opinion did so much magnify goodness, as the Christian religion doth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Goodness.

Philosophy makes us wiser, but Christianity makes us better men.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. viii, ch. 13.

19 That though you hunt the Christian man

Like a hare in the hill-side,

The hare has still more heart to run

Than you have heart to ride.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Ballad of the White Horse.

20 Two inestimable advantages Christianity has given us; first the Sabbath, the jubilee of the whole world; . . . and secondly, the institution of preaching.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Address.

21 He who shall introduce into public affairs the principles of primitive Christianity will change the face of the world.

FRANKLIN, Letter, to the French ministry, March, 1778.

22 To the corruptions of Christianity I am, indeed, opposed; but not to the genuine precepts of Jesus himself. I am a Christian in the only sense in which he wished any one to be; sincerely attached to his doctrines in preference to all others; ascribing to himself every human excellence; and believing he never claimed any other.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. x, p. 379.

Of all the systems of morality, ancient or modern, which have come under my observation, none appear to me so pure as that of Jesus.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 377.

In extracting the pure principles which [Jesus] taught, we should have to strip off the artificial vestments in which they have been muffled by priests, who have travestied them into various forms, as instruments of riches and power to themselves . . . there will be found remaining the most sublime and benevolent code of morals which has ever been offered to man.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 389.

The doctrines which flowed from the lips of Jesus himself are within the comprehension of a child; but thousands of volumes have not yet explained the Platonisms engrafted on them.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 149.

Christianity is the highest perfection of humanity.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. Vol. ii, p. 27.)

A wise man will always be a Christian, because the perfection of wisdom is to know where lies tranquillity of mind, and how to attain it, which Christianity teaches.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Marvel and Parker.

Silence the voice of Christianity, and the world is well-nigh dumb, for gone is that sweet music which kept in order the rulers of the people, which cheers the poor widow in her lonely toil, and comes like light through the windows of morning, to men who sit stooping and feeble, with failing eyes and a hungering heart.

THEODORE PARKER, Critical and Miscellaneous Writings: A Discourse of the Transient and Permanent in Christianity.

In the ethic of Christianity, it is the relation of the soul to God that is important, not the relation of man to his fellow man.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Marriage and Morals, p. 175.

Whatever makes men good Christians, makes them good citizens.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, Plymouth, 22 Dec., 1820.

III—Christianity: Its Faults

See also Church: Its Faults; Religion: Its Dissensions

I hold that the Christian religion is the best yet promulgated, but do not thence infer that it is not susceptible of improvement; nor do I wish to confound its doctrines with its founder, and to worship one of my fellow-beings.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Diary.

Christians and camels receive their burdens kneeling.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

The religion of Jesus is a threat, that of Mohammed is a promise.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

Mohammed's truth lay in a holy Book,
Christ's in a sacred Life.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Mohammedanism.

We all have known . . .
Good popes who brought all good to jeopardy,
Good Christians who sat still in easy chairs
And damned the general world for standing up.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 498.

Christians have burnt each other, quite persuaded
That all the Apostles would have done as they did.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 83.

Millions of innocent men, women and children, since the introduction of Christianity, have been burned, tortured, fined and imprisoned, yet we have not advanced one inch toward uniformity. What has been the effect of coercion? To make one-half of the world fools and the other half hypocrites.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Virginia.

He who begins by loving Christianity better than Truth will proceed by loving his own sect of church better than Christianity, and end in loving himself better than all.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Aids to Reflection: Aphorisms.

Every Stoic was a Stoic; but in Christendom, where is the Christian?

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Yes,—rather plunge me back in Pagan night,
And take my chance with Socrates for bliss,
Than be the Christian of a faith like this,
Which builds on heavenly cant its earthly sway,

And in a convert mourns to lose a prey.

THOMAS MOORE, Intolerance, l. 68.

Christianity has ever been the enemy of human love. . . . Christianity has made of death a terror which was unknown to the gay calmness of the Pagan.

OUIDA, The Failure of Christianity.

1 Christianity is the world's monumental fraud if there be no future life.

MARTIN J. SCOTT, Religion and Commonsense, p. 120.

2 O father Abram, what these Christians are, Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect

The thoughts of others!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 161.

3 Many Christians are like chestnuts—very pleasant nuts, but enclosed in very prickly burrs, which need various dealings of Nature and her grip of frost before the kernel is disclosed.

HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet: Christians.

4 Christian, what of the night?—
I cannot tell; I am blind.

I halt and hearken behind
If haply the hours will go back
And return to the dear dead light,
To the watchfires and stars that of old
Shone where the sky now is black,
Glowed where the earth now is cold.

SWINBURNE, Watch in the Night. St. 10.

5 "See," they say, "how these Christians love one another," for themselves hate one another; "and how they are ready to die for each other," for themselves will be readier to kill each other. (Vide, inquit, ut invicem se diligant; ipsi enim invicem oderunt; et ut pro alterutro mori sint parati; ipsi enim ad accidendum alterutrum paratiores erunt.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 19, sec. 7.

6 You say that you believe the Gospel: you live as if you were sure not one word of it is true.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 44.

7 Great God! I'd rather be
A Pagan, suckled in a creed outworn;
So might I, standing on the pleasant lea,
Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn;

Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea,
Or hear old Triton blow his wreathèd horn.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i, No. 33.

From thy dead lips a clearer note is born
Than ever Triton blew from wreathèd horn.

O. W. HOLMES, The Chambered Nautilus.

IV—Christianity: The Cross

8 Onward, Christian soldiers!

Marching as to war,
With the Cross of Jesus

Going on before.

SABINE BARING-GOULD, Onward, Christian Soldiers.

9 Through this sign thou shalt conquer. (In hoc signo vinces.)

CONSTANTINE THE GREAT. Motto which he is said to have seen in the sky in his march toward Rome, and which he placed upon the Laburum, or Roman standard over the monogram of Christ, after his victory over Maxentius, at Saxa Rubra, near Rome, 27 Oct., 312.

10

The Cross!

There, and there only (though the deist rave,
And atheist, if Earth bear so base a slave);
There, and there only, is the power to save.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 613.

11

The cross is the ladder of heaven.

THOMAS DRAXE, Biblioth. Scholas. Instr., 36.

Crosses are the ladders that lead to heaven.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help, p. 341.

12

But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ.

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 14.

Nothing except in the cross. (Nil nisi cruce.)

Motto founded on the text from Galatians.

In the cross there is safety. (In cruce salus.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 12.

13

Take up the Cross if thou the Crown would'st gain. (Tolle crusem, qui vis auferre coronam.)

Attributed to St. PAULINUS, BISHOP OF NOLA.

14

No pain, no palm; no thorns, no throne; no gall, no glory; no cross, no crown.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. (1668)

The way to bliss lies not on beds of down,
And he that has no cross deserves no crown.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Esther.

There are no crown-wearers in heaven who were not cross-bearers here below.

C. H. SPURGEON, Gleanings Among the Sheaves: Cross-Bearers.

See also under COMPENSATION.

15

The moon of Mahomet Arose, and it shall set:
While blazoned as on Heaven's immortal
noon,

The cross leads generations on.

SHELLEY, Hellas, l. 221.

16

Christianity without the Cross is nothing. The Cross was the fitting close of a life of rejection, scorn, and defeat. But in no true sense have these things ceased or changed. Jesus is still He whom man despiseth, and the rejected of men.

JAMES THOMSON, The Great Argument.

CHRISTMAS

I—Christmas: Bethlehem.

17

Oh, the Shepherds in Judea!—

Do you think the Shepherds know

How the whole round world is brightened
In the ruddy Christmas glow?

MARY AUSTIN, The Shepherds in Judea.

1
O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, O Little Town of Bethlehem.

2
No trumpet-blast profaned
The hour in which the Prince of Peace was
born;

No bloody streamlet stained
Earth's silver rivers on that sacred morn.
BRYANT, Christmas in 1875.

3
The King of Kings, He is so sweet and small.
GERALD BULLETT, Carol.

4
Christians awake, salute the happy morn
Whereon the Saviour of the world was born.
JOHN BYROM, Hymn for Christmas Day.

5
When 'twas bitter winter,
Houseless and forlorn
In a star-lit stable
Christ the Babe was born.
WILLIAM CANTON, Carol.

Welcome, heavenly lambkin;
Welcome, golden rose;
Alleluia, Baby,
In the swaddling clothes!
WILLIAM CANTON, Carol.

6
Glory to God, this wondrous morn,
On earth the Saviour Christ is born.
BLISS CARMAN, Bethlehem.

7
There fared a mother driven forth
Out of an inn to roam;
In the place where she was homeless
All men are at home.
The crazy stable close at hand,
With shaking timber and shifting sand,
Grew a stronger thing to abide and stand
Than the square stones of Rome.
G. K. CHESTERTON, The House of Christmas.

8
The night that erst no name had worn,
To it a happy name is given;
For in that stable lay new-born
The peaceful Prince of Earth and Heaven,
In the solemn midnight Centuries ago.
ALFRED DOMETT, A Christmas Hymn.

9
Run, shepherds, run where Bethlehem blest appears,
We bring the best of news; be not dismay'd:
A Saviour there is born, more old than years, Amidst heaven's rolling heights this earth who stay'd.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Flowers of Sion. No. 9.

10
What babe new born is this that in a manger cries?

Near on her lowly bed his happy mother lies.
Oh, see the air is shaken with white and heavenly wings—

This is the Lord of all the earth, this is the King of Kings.

R. W. GILDER, A Christmas Hymn.

Fra Lippo, we have learned from thee
A lesson of humanity:
To every mother's heart forlorn,
In every house the Christ is born.

R. W. GILDER, A Madonna of Fra Lippo Lippi.

11
There's a song in the air!
There's a star in the sky!
There's a mother's deep prayer
And a Baby's low cry!
And the star rains its fire where the Beautiful sing.

For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King.
J. G. HOLLAND, A Christmas Carol.

12
When mother-love makes all things bright,
When joy comes with the morning light,
When children gather round their tree,
Thou Christmas Babe, we sing of thee!
TUDOR JENKS, A Christmas Song

13
I sing the birth was born to-night,
The author both of life and light.
BEN JONSON, A Hymn of the Nativity.

14
Hail to the King of Bethlehem,
Who weareth in his diadem
The yellow crocus for the gem
Of his authority!
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend: The Nativity. Pt. ix.

15
"What means this glory round our feet,"
The Magi mused, "more bright than morn?"
And voices chanted clear and sweet,
"To-day the Prince of Peace is born!"
J. R. LOWELL, A Christmas Carol.

16
Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.
New Testament, Luke, ii, 11.

17
Away in a manger, no crib for a bed,
The little Lord Jesus laid down His sweet
head.

MARTIN LUTHER, Cradle Hymn.

18
They all were looking for a king
To slay their foes and lift them high;
Thou cam'st, a little baby thing,
That made a woman cry.
GEORGE MACDONALD, That Holy Thing. From
Paul Faber.

1
New every year,
New born and newly dear,
He comes with tidings and a song,
The ages long, the ages long.
ALICE MEYNELL, Unto Us a Son is Given.

2
This is the month, and this the happy morn
Wherein the Son of Heaven's Eternal King,
Of wedded maid and virgin mother born,
Our great redemption from above did bring.
MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity.

3
God rest ye, little children; let nothing you
affright,
For Jesus Christ, your Saviour, was born this happy night;
Along the hills of Galilee the white flocks
sleeping lay,
When Christ, the Child of Nazareth, was born on Christmas day.
DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Christmas Carol.

4
Peace to the byre, peace to the fold,
For that they housed Him from the cold!
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, A Christmas Folk-Song.

5
Born in a stable,
Cradled in a manger,
In the world His hands had made,
Born a stranger.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Before the Paling of the Stars.

6
It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old.
EDMUND HAMILTON SEARS, Christmas Carols.

Calm on the listening ear of night
Came Heaven's melodious strains,
Where wild Judea stretches far
Her silver-mantled plains.
EDMUND HAMILTON SEARS, Christmas Song.

7
All glory be to God on high,
And to the earth be peace;
Good-will henceforth, from Heaven to men,
Begin and never cease.
NAHUM TATE, While Shepherds Watched.

8
To-day He makes his entrance here,
But not as monarchs do.
No gold, nor purple swaddling-bands,
Nor royal shining things;
A manger for His cradle stands,
And holds the King of Kings.
ISAAC WATTS, Shepherds, Rejoice.

Hark the herald angels sing,
Glory to the new-born King;
Peace on earth, and mercy mild,
God and sinners reconciled!
CHARLES WESLEY, Christmas Hymn.

Hark how all the welkin rings,
Glory to the King of kings!
CHARLES WESLEY, Christmas Hymn. (The original version of the first two lines.)

10
God rest you merry, gentlemen,
Let nothing you dismay,
For Jesus Christ, our Saviour,
Was born upon this day,
UNKNOWN, Old Carol.

11
He came all so still
Where His mother was,
As dew in April
That falleth on the grass.
UNKNOWN, Old Carol.

12
As Joseph was a-waukin',
He heard an angel sing,
"This night shall be the birthnight
Of Christ our heavenly King."
UNKNOWN, Christmas Carol.

II—Christmas: Its Celebration

13
I have often thought, says Sir Roger, it happens very well that Christmas should fall out in the middle of winter.
ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 269.

14
The mistletoe hung in the castle hall,
The holly branch shone on the old oak wall.
THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, The Mistletoe Bough.

15
Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies. . . . Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those which neither children nor men can see. No Santa Claus! Thank God!
he lives and he lives forever.

FRANK CHURCH, Is There a Santa Claus?
(N. Y. Sun, 21 Sept., 1897.)

16
Many merry Christmases, friendships, great accumulation of cheerful recollections, affection on earth, and Heaven at last for all of us.

CHARLES DICKENS, Christmas Message, to John Forster, 1846. (FORSTER, Life of Dickens; also in Dickens's Dr. Marigold's Prescription.)

17
'Most all the time, the whole year round,
there ain't no flies on me,
But jest 'fore Christmas I'm as good as I kin
be!

EUGENE FIELD, Jest 'fore Christmas.

18
How bless'd, how envied, were our life.
Could we but scape the poulterer's knife!
But man, curs'd man, on Turkeys preys,
And Christmas shortens all our days:
Sometimes with oysters we combine,
Sometimes assist the savoury chine;

From the low peasant to the lord,
The Turkey smokes on every board.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Turkey and the Ant.

1 They talk of Christmas so long that it comes.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Coming! ay, so is Christmas.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial i.

2 Come, bring with a noise,
My merry, merry boys,
The Christmas log to the firing;
While my good dame, she
Bids ye all be free;
And drink to your hearts' desiring.

ROBERT HERRICK, Ceremonies for Christmas.

3 Glorious time of great Too-Much, . . .
Right thy most unthrifty glee,
And pious thy mince-piety.

LEIGH HUNT, Christmas.

4 On Christmas day in the morning.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Sketch Book: The Sunny Bank. Quoting an old Worcestershire song.

5 While rich men sigh and poor men fret,
Dear me! we can't spare Christmas yet!

EDWARD S. MARTIN, Christmas, 1898.

6 I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old, familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat

Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

LONGFELLOW, Christmas Bells.

7 'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse.

CLEMENT CLARKE MOORE, A Visit from St. Nicholas. Erroneously claimed for Henry Livingston by his descendants. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

8 Have you seen God's Christmas tree in the sky,

With its trillions of tapers blazing high?

ANGELA MORGAN, Christmas Tree of Angels.

9 After a Christmas comes a Lent.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10 Heap on more wood!—the wind is chill;
But let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our Christmas merry still.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto vi, Introduction, l. 1.

England was merry England, when Old Christmas brought his sports again.

'Twas Christmas broached the mightiest ale,
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale;

A Christmas gambol oft could cheer
The poor man's heart through half the year.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto vi, Introduction, l. 80.

11 And after him came next the chill December:
Yet he, through merry feasting which he made

And great bonfires, did not the cold remember;

His Saviour's birth his mind so much did glad.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vii, canto vii, st. 41.

12 A hot Christmas makes a fat churchyard.

SWAN, Speculum Mundi, 161. (1635)

A green Christmas is neither handsome nor healthful.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Of Time-Serving.
(1642)

13 Christmas is here:

Winds whistle shrill,

Icy and chill,

Little care we:

Little we fear

Weather without,

Sheltered about

The Mahogany-Tree.

THACKERAY, The Mahogany-Tree.

As fits the holy Christmas birth,
Be this, good friends, our carol still—
Be peace on earth, be peace on earth,
To men of gentle will.

THACKERAY, The End of the Play.

14 At Christmas play and make good cheer,
For Christmas comes but once a year.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Hundreth Good Pointes of Husbandrie. Ch. 12. (1557)

You merry folk, be of good cheer,
For Christmas comes but once a year.
From open door you'll take no harm
By winter if your hearts are warm.

GEOFFREY SMITH, At the Sign of the Jolly Jack.

For Christmas comes but once a year,
And then they shall be merry.

GEORGE WITHER, Christmas Carol.

15 They keep Christmas all the year.

EDWARD WALKER, Paræmiologia, 25. (1672)

16 Life still hath one romance that naught can bury—

Not Time himself, who coffins Life's romances—

For still will Christmas gild the year's mis-chances,

If Childhood comes, as here, to make him
merry.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Christmas Tree.

17 Blow, bugles of battle, the marches of peace;
East, west, north, and south let the long quarrel cease;

Sing the song of great joy that the angels began,

Sing the glory of God and of good-will to man!

WHITTIER, A Christmas Carmen.

1 So now is come our joyfull'st feast;
Let every man be jolly;
Each room with ivy leaves is drest,
And every post with holly.

GEORGE WITHER, Christmas Carol.

2 Christmas is coming, the geese are getting fat,
Please to put a penny in the old man's hat;
If you haven't got a penny, a ha'penny will do,

If you haven't got a ha'penny, God bless you!

UNKNOWN, Beggar's Rhyme.

CHURCH

I—Church: Apothegms

3 They build not castles in the air who would build churches on earth: and though they leave no such structures here, may lay good foundations in Heaven.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 23.

Who builds a church to God, and not to Fame,
Will never mark the marble with his name.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 285.

4 We are ready to proclaim in Italy this principle, A free church in a free state.

CAVOUR, Speech, 1860. His last words to the priest in attendance upon him were, "Frate, frate, libera chiesa in libero stato."

5 Bred to the church, and for the gown decreed,
Ere it was known that I should learn to read.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 342.

6 What is a church?—Our honest sexton tells,
" 'Tis a tall building, with a tower and bells."

CRABBE, The Borough. Letter ii, l. 11.

7 Let the church have leave to stand in the churchyard.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3192.

8 When once thy foot enters the church, be bare;

God is more there than thou.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 68.

Kneeling ne'er spoiled silk stocking: quit thy state.

All equal are within the church's gate.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 68.

9 Nothing lasts but the Church.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

10 To be of no church is dangerous.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton.

11 And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

New Testament: Matthew, xvi, 18.

It was founded upon a rock.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 25; Luke, vi, 48.

Christ's famous pun, "Upon this rock I will build my church."

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island: Preface.

See the Gospel Church secure,

And founded on a Rock!

All her promises are sure;

Her bulwarks who can shock?

CHARLES WESLEY, The Church. St. 9.

12

Some to church repair

Not for the doctrine, but the music there.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 142.

Constant at Church and 'Change.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 347.

13

An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a pepper-corn.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 9.

14

The itch of disputation will prove the scab of the Church.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, Panegyric to King Charles.

He directed the stone over his grave to be thus inscribed:

Hic jacet hujus Sententiæ primus Author:

Disputandi pruritus ecclesiarum scabies.

Nomen alias quære.

Here lies the first author of this sentence:

"The itch of disputation will prove the scab of the Church." Inquire his name elsewhere.

IZAACK WALTON, Life of Wotton.

The itch of disputation will break out into a scab of error.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma Sine Fumo: The New Illiterate Late Teachers.

II—Church: Its Virtues

See also Christianity: Its Virtues

15

A church is God between four walls.

VICTOR HUGO, Ninety-Three. Pt. ii, bk. iii, ch. 2.

Why where's the need of Temple, when the walls O' the world are that?

ROBERT BROWNING, Dramatis Personæ: Epilogue.

16

Bless all the churches, and blessed be God, who, in this our great trial, giveth us the churches.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, attributed to him in replying to a Methodist delegation, 14 May, 1864.

17

No silver saints, by dying misers giv'n,
Here brib'd the rage of ill-requited Heav'n;
But such plain roofs as Piety could raise,

And only vocal with the Maker's praise.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 137.

III—Church: Its Faults

See also Christianity: Its Faults; Religion: Its Dissensions

<sup>1</sup> The multitude of false churches accredits the true religion.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

If I should go out of church whenever I hear a false sentiment I could never stay there five minutes. But why come out? The street is as false as the church.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

<sup>2</sup> The church alone beyond all question
Has for ill-gotten goods the right digestion.
(Die Kirch' allein, meine lieben Frauen,
Kann ungerechtes Gut verdauen.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 9, l. 35.

<sup>3</sup> The nearer the church, the farther from God.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. Quoted by Bishop Andrews in sermon before James I, 1622; by FULLER, Worthies, ii, 5; and by many others.

It is common for those that are farthest from God, to boast themselves most of their being near to the Church.

MATHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Jeremiah vii.

To kerke the narre, from God more farre,
Has bene an old-sayd sawe.

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: Julye, l. 97.

<sup>4</sup> Go tell the Church it shows
What's good, and doth no good.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.

<sup>5</sup> You have made
The cement of your churches out of tears
And ashes, and the fabric will not stand.

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, Captain Craig.

<sup>6</sup> The Churches must learn humility as well as teach it.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan: Preface.

<sup>7</sup> The church and clergy here, no doubt,
Are very much akin;

Both weather-beaten are without,
Both empty are within.

SWIFT, Extempore Verses.

<sup>8</sup> Christian love among the Churches look'd the twin of heathen hate.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After,
l. 86.

But the churchmen fain would kill their church,
As the churches have killed their Christ.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 266.

IV—Church: The Spire

<sup>9</sup> An instinctive taste teaches men to build their churches in flat countries with spire-steeples, which, as they cannot be referred to any other object, point as with silent finger to the sky and stars.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Friend. Sec. i, No. 14.

And O, ye swelling hills and spacious plains!
Besrent from shore to shore with steeple-towers,
And spires whose "silent finger points to heaven."
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vi, l. 17.

Accepts the village church as part of the sky.

EMERSON, Journals, 1867.

<sup>10</sup> A beggarly people, A church and no steeple.

EDMUND MALONE. (PRIOR, Life of Swift, p.
381.) The reference is to St. Ann's church, Dublin.

<sup>11</sup> Who taught that heaven-directed spire to rise?

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 261.

<sup>12</sup> How the tall temples, as to meet their gods,
Ascend the skies!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 781.

V—Church and Chapel

<sup>13</sup> For commonly, wheresoever God buildeth a church, the devil will build a chapel just by.

THOMAS BECON, Catechism, 361. (1560)

Where Christ erecteth his church, the devil in the same churchyard will have his chapel.

RICHARD BANCROFT, Sermon Against Puritans,
9 Feb., 1588.

<sup>14</sup> Where God hath a temple, the Devil will have a chapel.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 7.

<sup>15</sup> Wherever God erects a house of prayer,
The Devil always builds a chapel there;
And 'twill be found, upon examination,
The latter has the largest congregation.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman.
Pt. i, l. 1.

<sup>16</sup> God never had a church but there, men say,
The Devil a chapel hath rais'd by some wiles.

I doubted of this saw, till on a day
I westward spied great Edinburgh's Saint Giles.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, A Proverb.

<sup>17</sup> No sooner is a temple built to God, but the Devil builds a chapel hard by.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

<sup>18</sup> For where God built a church there the Devil would also build a chapel. . . . Thus is the Devil ever God's ape.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk: Of God's Works.
No. 67.

1 As, like a church and an ale-house, God and the Devil they many times dwell near to either.

THOMAS NASHE, Have with You to Saffron-Walden.

2 There can be no church in which the demon will not have his chapel.

CARDINAL PALEOTTI. (DIGBY, Compitum. Vol. ii, p. 297.)

CIRCLES

3 Do not disturb my circles. (Noli disturbare circulos meos.)

ARCHIMEDES, to the Roman soldier who, during the siege of Syracuse, 212 B. C., burst into his study to find him figuring some circles, and, being unable to obtain a satisfactory reply to his questions, put him to death. (VALERIUS MAXIMUS, viii, 7.)

4 The nature of God is a circle whose centre is everywhere and its circumference nowhere. ST. AUGUSTINE. (EMERSON, Essays: Circles.)

5 Circles and right lines limit and close all bodies, and the mortal right-lined circle* must conclude and shut up all.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v. (*The character of death.)

6 We all of us live too much in a circle.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

7 A circle may be small, yet it may be as mathematically beautiful and perfect as a large one.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Miscellanies.

8 Circles are prais'd, not that abound In largeness, but th' exactly round: So life we praise, that does excel Not in much time, but acting well.

EDMUND WALLER, Long and Short Life.

Circles though small are yet complete.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on a monument to two children, Northleigh Church, Oxon.

Round as the O of Giotto.

Pope Benedict XI once asked Giotto for a proof of his skill. Giotto sent him in reply an O drawn with a free sweep of the brush.

9 The eye is the first circle; the horizon which it forms is the second; and throughout nature this primary figure is repeated without end. It is the highest emblem in the cipher of the world.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

Nature centers into balls, And her proud ephemerals, Fast to surface and outside, Scan the profile of the sphere.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

10 Every man is the center of a circle, whose fatal circumference he can not pass.

JOHN JAMES INGALLS, Eulogy on Benjamin Hill, U. S. Senate, 23 Jan., 1882.

11 He drew a circle that shut me out— Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.

But Love and I had the wit to win: We drew a circle that took him in!

EDWIN MARKHAM, Outwitted.

12 As the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake; The centre mov'd, a circle straight succeeds, Another still, and still another spreads.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 364.

As on the smooth expanse of crystal lakes, The sinking stone at first a circle makes; The trembling surface by the motion stirr'd, Spread in a second circle, then a third; Wide, and more wide, the floating rings advance, Fill all the wat'ry plain, and to the margin dance.

POPE, Temple of Fame, l. 436.

I watch'd the little circles die;

They passed into the level flood.

TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter. St. 10.

13 I'm up and down and round about, Yet all the world can't find me out; Though hundreds have employed their leisure,

They never yet could find my measure.

SWIFT, On a Circle.

CIRCUMSTANCE

See also Chance, Destiny, Fate, Providence

14 He fixed thee 'mid this dance Of plastic circumstance.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 28.

15 Circumstance, that unspiritual god And miscreator, makes and helps along Our coming evils.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 125.

16 Men are the sport of circumstances, when The circumstances seem the sport of men.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 17.

I am the very slave of circumstance.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act iv, sc. 1.

Man is the creature of circumstance.

ROBERT OWEN, The Philanthropist.

Man, without religion, is the creature of circumstances.

THOMAS HARDY, Guesses at Truth.

Man is not the creature of circumstances, circumstances are the creatures of men. We are free agents, and man is more powerful than matter.

CITIES

I—Cities: Apothegms

18 Cities should be walled with the courage of their inhabitants.

AGESILAÛS II. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms: Agesilaüs.) When shown a walled city, he said: "It is for women, not men, to live in." To a stranger visiting Sparta, he showed the citizens in arms, saying: "These are the walls of Sparta."

Fighting men are the city's fortress.

ALCÆUS, Fragment. No. xxii.

A city will be well fortified which is surrounded by brave men and not by bricks. (Οὐκ ἂν εἴν ἀτείχιστος πόλις ἀτὶς ἀνδρεσσιν, καὶ οὐ πλὴν θούσι ἐστρεφάνωται.)

LYCURGUS, when asked to fortify the city. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Lycurgus. Ch. 19, sec. 4.)

If the inhabitants are of good morals I consider the place handsomely fortified. (Si incolæ bene sunt morati, pulchre munitum arbitror.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 554. (Act iv, sc. 3.)

19 The Bible shows how the world progresses. It begins with a garden, but ends with a holy city.

PHILLIPS BROOKS. (ALLEN, Life and Letters.)

1 If you would be known and not know, live in a village; if you would know and not be known, live in a city.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 334.

2 The first requisite to a man's happiness is birth in a famous city. (Χρῆναι τῷ εὐδαίμονι πρῶτον ὑπάρξαι τὰν πόλιν εὐδόκιμον.)

EURIPIDES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 1, sec. 1.)

Surely in toil or fray, Under an alien sky,
Comfort it is to say, "Of no mean city am I!"

RUDYARD KIPLING, Seven Seas: Dedication.

I live in a small city, and I prefer to dwell there that it may not become smaller still.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 2, sec. 2.

3 Where are the cities of old time?

EDMUND GOSSE, The Ballade of Dead Cities.

Even cities have their graves!

LONGFELLOW, Amalfi.

4 Cities are immortal.

GROTIVS, De Jure Belli et Pacis. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

5 Your weakness, city,

Is that you have a soul.

LAURENCE HARTMUS, City.

6 The chicken is the country's, but the city eats it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The city is recruited from the country.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

7 Far from gay cities and the ways of men.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 410. (Pope, tr.)

8 Farmer Jake Bentley talks some o' movin' to the city so he kin keep a son.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast.

9 The zenith city of the unsalted seas.

JAMES PROCTOR KNOTT, Speech, in House of Representatives, 27 Jan., 1871, referring to Duluth, Minn.

10 City of magnificent vistas.

PIERRE CHARLES L'ENFANT, the architect-engineer who planned the city of Washington and began its building. The phrase was afterwards corrupted to "City of magnificent distances."

11 A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 14.

Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, . . . the city of the great King.

Old Testament: Psalms, xlviii, 2.

12 Where now the city stands, there was once naught but the city's site. (Hic, ubi nunc urbs est, tum locus urbis erat.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 280.

13

The people are the city.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 200.

A great city is that which has the greatest men and women,

If it be a few ragged huts it is still the greatest city in the whole world.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Broad-Axe. Sec. 4.

14

That city is the best to live in, in which those who are not wronged, no less than those who are wronged, exert themselves to punish the wrongdoers.

15

Unless the Lord keepeth the city, the watchman waketh in vain. (Nisi Dominus frustra.)

Motto of the city of Edinburgh.

II—Cities: Their Virtues

16

And the need of a world of men for me.

ROBERT BROWNING, Parting at Morning.

17

Match me such marvel save in Eastern clime—

A rose-red city, half as old as time.

JOHN WILLIAM BURGON, Petra.

18

I love capitals. Everything is best at capitals.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1749.

The centre of a thousand trades.

COWPER, Hope, l. 246.

Golden towns where golden houses are.

JOYCE KILMER, Roofs.

19

Cities and Thrones and Powers

Stand in Time's eye

Almost as long as flowers,

Which daily die:

But, as new buds put forth

To glad new men,

Out of the spent and unconsidered Earth,

New Cities rise again.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Cities and Thrones and Powers. (Puck of Pook's Hill: Prelude.)

20

Let them sing who will of the gurgling rill,

Or the woodbird's note so wild;

My heart still sticks to the good red bricks—

For I was a city child.

WALTER LINDSAY, O Patria Mia.

21

I said, "Let me walk in the fields;"

He said, "Nay, walk in the town;"

I said, "There are no flowers there;"

He said, "No flowers, but a crown."

GEORGE MACDONALD, What Christ Said.

22

Towered cities please us then,

And the busy hum of men.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 117.

In the busy haunts of men.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Tale of the Secret Tribunal, l. 203.

'Midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 26.

1 For students of the troubled heart
Cities are perfect works of art.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, John Mistletoe, p. 27.

O praise me not the country—

The meadows green and cool,
The solemn glow of sunsets, the hidden silver pool!

The city for my craving,
Her lordship and her slaving,
The hot stones of her paving
For me, a city fool!

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, O Praise Me Not the Country.

All cities are mad: but the madness is gallant. All cities are beautiful: but the beauty is grim.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Where the Blue Begins, p. 55.

2 A house is much more to my taste than a tree,
And for groves, O! a good grove of chimneys for me.

CHARLES MORRIS, The Contrast.

3 Though the latitude's rather uncertain,
And the longitude also is vague,
The persons I pity who know not the City,
The beautiful City of Prague.

W. J. PROWSE, The City of Prague.

4 Fields and trees teach me nothing, but the people in a city do. (Τὰ μὲν οὖν χωρία καὶ τὰ δένδρα οὐδὲν μ' ἐθέλει διδάσκειν, οἱ δ' ἐν τῷ ἀστυ ἀνθρώποι.)

SOCRATES, explaining why he rarely left the city. PLATO, Phædrus. Sec. 230.

5 The city is built
To music, therefore never built at all,
And therefore built for ever.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 272.

6 For the earth that breeds the trees
Breeds cities, too, and symphonies.

JOHN HALL WHEELOCK, Earth.

III—Cities: Their Faults

7 Cambridge people rarely smile,
Being urban, squat, and packed with guile.

RUPERT BROOKE, The Old Vicarage, Grantchester.

8 How fast the flitting figures come!

The mild, the fierce, the stony face;
Some bright with thoughtless smiles, and some

Where secret tears have left their trace.

These struggling tides of life that seem
In wayward, aimless course to tend,
Are eddies of the mighty stream
That rolls to its appointed end.

BRYANT, The Crowded Street.

9 High mountains are a feeling, but the hum
Of human cities torture.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 72.

10 To fly from the town to the country as though from chains. (Evolare rus ex urbe tanquam ex vinculis.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 6.

11 Well then; I now do plainly see
This busy world and I shall ne'er agree;
The very honey of all earthly joy
Does of all meats the soonest cloy;
And they, methinks, deserve my pity,
Who for it can endure the stings,
The crowd, the buzz, the murmurings
Of this great hive, the city.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Wish.

From cities humming with a restless crowd,
Sordid as active, ignorant as loud,
Whose highest praise is that they live in vain,
The dupes of pleasure or the slaves of gain;
Where works of man are clustered close around,
And works of God are hardly to be found.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 21.

12 In cities vice is hidden with most ease,
Or seen with least reproach.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 689.

13 Cities give not the human senses room enough.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

Cities force growth and make men talkative and entertaining, but they make them artificial.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming.

14 The modern town-dweller has no God and no Devil; he lives without awe, without admiration, without fear.

DEAN WILLIAM RALPH INGE, Outspoken Essays: Ser. i, Our Present Discontents.

15 The mobs of great cities add just so much to the support of pure government as sores do to the strength of the human body.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. ii, p. 229.

16 Who's ground the grist of trodden ways—
The gray dust and the brown—
May love red tiling two miles off,
But cannot love a town.

LESLIE NELSON JENNINGS, Highways.

17 The gloom and glare of towns.

ANDREW LANG, Ballade of the Midnight Forest.

1 When ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them.

New Testament: Luke, ix, 5.

2 Go down into the city. Mingle with the details; . . . your elation and your illusion vanish like ingenuous snowflakes that have kissed a hot dog sandwich on its fiery brow.

DON MARQUIS, The Almost Perfect State.

3 As one who long in populous city pent,
Where houses thick and sewers annoy the air.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 445.

4 To cities and to courts repair,
Flattery and falsehood flourish there;
There all thy wretched arts employ,
Where riches triumph over joy.
Where passion does with interest barter,
And Hymen holds by Mammon's charter;
Where truth by point of law is parried,
And knaves and prudes are six times married.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Turtle and Sparrow, l. 437.

5 I have, I said, found in Holy Scripture that Cain was the first builder of towns. (J'ay, dis je, trouvé en Ecriture sacrée que Cayn fut le premier bâtisseur de villes.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 35.

God the first garden made, and the first city Cain.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Garden.

Divine Nature gave us fields; man's art built cities. (Divina natura dedit agros, ars humana ædificavit urbes.)

VARRO, De Re Rustica, iii. 1.

God made the country and man made the town.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 749.

6 Cities are the sink of the human race. (Les villes sont le gouffre de l'espèce humaine.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. i.

7 The City is of Night, but not of Sleep;
There sweet sleep is not for the weary brain;
The pitiless hours like years and ages creep,
A night seems termless hell.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night. Pt. i, st. 11.

8 As for these communities, I think I had rather keep bachelor's hall in hell than go to board in heaven.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 March, 1841.

9 In great cities culture is diffused but vulgarized. . . . In great cities proud natures become vain. . . . If you want to submerge your own "I," better the streets of a great city than the solitudes of the wilderness.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies, p. 127.

A great city, a great loneliness. (Magna civitas, magna solitudo.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb taken from the Greek.

CIVILIZATION

I—Civilization: Definitions

10 The three great elements of modern civilization, gunpowder, printing, and the Protestant religion.

CARLYLE, Essays: German Literature.

Increased means and increased leisure are the two civilizers of man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 3 April, 1872.

11 There is nothing so fragile as civilization, and no high civilization has long withstood the manifold risks it is exposed to.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. i, p. 105.

12 What is civilization? I answer, the power of good women.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: Woman.

13 The true test of civilization is, not the census, nor the size of cities, nor the crops,—no, but the kind of man the country turns out.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

The test of civilization is the power of drawing the most benefit out of cities.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

A decent provision for the poor is the true test of civilization.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 130.)

14 The highest civility has never loved the hot zones.

Wherever snow falls there is usually civil freedom.

Where the banana grows, man is sensual and cruel.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

15 Civilization is paralysis.

PAUL GAUGUIN. (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 43.)

16 Civilization is simply a series of victories over nature.

WILLIAM HARVEY, Where Are We and Whither Tending? Lect. 1.

17 No one is so savage that he cannot become civilized, if he will lend a patient ear to culture. (Nemo adeo ferus est, ut non mitescere possit, Si modo culturæ patientem com-monet aurem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 39.

18 Jesus wept; Voltaire smiled. Of that divine tear and of that human smile is composed the sweetness of the present civilization.

VICTOR HUGO, Centenary Oration on Voltaire, 30 May, 1878.

<sup>1</sup> The true civilization is where every man gives to every other every right that he claims for himself.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Interview, Washington Post, 14 Nov., 1880.

The history of civilization is the history of the slow and painful enfranchisement of the human race.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Declaration of Independence.

Civilization was thrust into the brain of Europe on the point of a Moorish lance.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Address, New York, 24 Jan., 1888.

<sup>2</sup> Civilization is the making of civil persons.

JOHN RUSKIN, The Crown of Wild Olive.

<sup>3</sup> Does the thoughtful man suppose that . . . the present experiment in civilization is the last the world will see?

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason. Vol. ii, p. 127.

<sup>4</sup> Our existing civilisations, described quite justifiably by Ruskin as heaps of agonizing human maggots, struggling with one another for scraps of food.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

Those who admire modern civilization usually identify it with the steam engine and the electric telegraph.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

<sup>5</sup> Civilization is a progress from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity toward a definite, coherent heterogeneity.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles. Ch. 16, par. 138.

II—Civilization: Its Faults

<sup>6</sup> Civilization degrades the many to exalt the few.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table-Talk: Pursuits.

<sup>7</sup> Wealth may not produce civilization, but civilization produces money.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

<sup>8</sup> It is a law of life and development in history that where two national civilizations meet they fight for ascendancy.

BERNHARD VON BÜLOW, Imperial Germany.

<sup>9</sup> They revenged themselves on tyranny by destroying civilisation.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. v, ch. 12.

<sup>10</sup> Every prison is the exclamation point and every asylum is the question mark in the sentences of civilization.

S. W. DUFFIELD, Essays: Righteousness.

<sup>11</sup> The civilized man has built a coach, but has lost the use of his feet.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

<sup>12</sup> As long as our civilization is essentially one of property, of fences, of exclusiveness, it will be mocked by delusions.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

<sup>13</sup> Comfort, opportunity, number, and size are not synonymous with civilization.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 40.

<sup>14</sup> Civilization is being poisoned by its own waste products.

<sup>15</sup> Our civilization is a dingy ungentlemanly business: it drops so much out of a man.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letters.

CLEANLINESS

<sup>16</sup> Cleanness of the body was ever deemed to proceed from a due reverence to God.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Slovenliness is no part of religion; neither this, nor any text of Scripture, condemns neatness of apparel. Certainly this is a duty, not a sin; "cleanliness is, indeed, next to godliness."

JOHN WESLEY, Sermons: No. xciii, On Dress.

The text referred to is I Peter, iii, 3-4, "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning," etc. Wesley puts the last phrase into quotation marks, indicating that it did not originate with him, but gives no indication as to its source.

<sup>17</sup> He that toucheth pitch shall be defiled therewith.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xiii, 7.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xvii, ch. 5, sec. 14. Referred to as a proverb, meaning irreverently.

<sup>19</sup> Beauty will fade and perish, but personal cleanliness is practically undying, for it can be renewed whenever it discovers symptoms of decay.

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act ii.

<sup>20</sup> Cleanliness is a fine life-preserver.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

One keep-clean is better than ten make-cleans.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>21</sup> Unless the vessel is clean, whatever you pour into it turns sour. (Sincerum est nisi vas, quodcumque infundis acescit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 54.

1 Above all things, keep clean. It is not necessary to be a pig in order to raise one.

R. G. INGERSOLL, About Farming in Illinois.

2 Be thou clean.

New Testament: Luke, v, 13. Mundane.—Vulgate.) Christ to the leper.

God loveth the clean.

The Koran. Ch. 9.

3 Empty, swept, and garnished.

New Testament: Matthew, xii, 44; Luke, xi, 25.

4 Bid them wash their faces
And keep their teeth clean.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 68.

5 I'll purge and leave sack and live cleanly.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 168.

6 The doctrines of religion are resolved into carefulness; carefulness into vigorousness; vigorousness into guiltlessness; guiltlessness into abstemiousness; abstemiousness into cleanliness; cleanliness into godliness.

Talmud: Division of Mishna. (Dr. A. S. Bettelheim, tr.)

Religious zeal leads to cleanliness, cleanliness to purity, purity to godliness.

RABBI PHINEHAS-BEN-JAIR, Commentary on the Talmud.

Poverty comes from God, but not dirt.

The Talmud.

7 To have not only clean hands, but clean minds. (Non solum manus, sed etiam mentes puras habere.)

THALES. (VALERIUS MAXIMUS. Bk. vii, ch. 2, sec. 8.)

8 Keep clean, bear fruit, earn life, and watch
Till the white-wing'd reapers come!

HENRY VAUGHAN, The Seed Growing Secretly.

CLEVELAND, GROVER

9 Tell the truth.

GROVER CLEVELAND, to Charles W. Goodyear, when asked what should be done about the story of his liaison with Maria Halpin, sprung by the Republicans during the Presidential campaign of 1884. (NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 163.) See under POLITICS: SLOGANS.

10 The other side can have a monopoly of all the dirt in this campaign.

GROVER CLEVELAND, during the campaign of 1884, when destroying a packet of "evidence" relating to the private life of James G. Blaine. (NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 169.)

11 I feel like a locomotive hitched to a boy's express wagon.

GROVER CLEVELAND, in 1897, when asked how he felt with no Senate to fight and no official responsibility to bear. (McELROY, Grover Cleveland, ii, 269.)

12 I have tried so hard to do right.

GROVER CLEVELAND, last words. (McELROY, Grover Cleveland, ii, 385.)

13 They love him, gentlemen, and they respect him, not only for himself, but for his character, for his integrity and judgment and iron will; but they love him most for the enemies he has made.

GEN. EDWARD S. BRAGG, Governor of Wisconsin, Speech, seconding the nomination of Grover Cleveland for the Presidency, at the Democratic National Convention, Chicago, 9 July, 1884. (See Wisconsin State Journal, 10 July, 1884.) "They" referred to the young men of Wisconsin; "enemies" to Tammany Hall, which was bitterly fighting Cleveland's nomination. The phrase became one of the slogans of the campaign, and was usually quoted, "We love him for the enemies he has made." (McELROY, Grover Cleveland, i, 81.)

14 For his was that best courage peace tries best,—

Sedate defiance of all clamors shrill;

Scorn of mere shows; stern putting to the test

Of men and causes, and unconquered will.

WM. GOLDSMITH BROWN, Grover Cleveland.

15 So long as the helm of state is entrusted to his hands we are sure that, should the storm come, he will say with Seneca's Pilot, "O Neptune! you may save me if you will; you may sink me if you will; but whatever happens I shall keep my rudder true."

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, Address, at celebration of 250th anniversary of Harvard College, 1886.

16 Let who has felt compute the strain
Of struggle with abuses strong,

The doubtful course, the helpless pain

Of seeing best intents go wrong;

We, who look on with critic eyes

Exempt from action's crucial test,

Human ourselves, at least are wise

In honoring one who did his best.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, Verses, sent to Grover Cleveland, 10 December, 1889, with his regrets for non-attendance at a meeting in Boston which Cleveland had addressed.

17 He restored honesty and impartiality to government at a time when the service had become indispensable to the health of the republic. . . . To have bequeathed a nation such an example of iron fortitude is better than to have swayed parliaments or to have won battles or to have annexed provinces.

ALLAN NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 766.

1 To nominate Grover Cleveland would be to march through a slaughter house into an open grave.

HENRY WATTERSON, Editorial, Louisville Courier-Journal, referring to nomination of 1892.

CLEVERNESS

See also Intelligence

2 Cleverness is serviceable for everything, sufficient for nothing.

AMIEL, Journal. 16 Feb., 1868.

3 And nobody calls you a dunce,
And people suppose me clever.

ROBERT BROWNING, Youth and Art.

Clever to a fault.

BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Too clever is dumb.

OGDEN NASH, When the Moon Shines.

4 Clever men are good, but they are not the best.

CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe.

I never heard tell of any clever man that came of entirely stupid people.

CARLYLE, Inaugural Address, Edinburgh, 1865.

5 "Brooks of Sheffield": "Somebody's sharp." "Who is?" asked the gentleman, laughing. I looked up quickly, being curious to know. "Only Brooks of Sheffield," said Mr. Murdstone. I was glad to find it was only Brooks of Sheffield; for at first I really thought that it was I.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 2.

I know that man; he comes from Sheffield.

SYDNEY GRUNDY, A Pair of Spectacles.

6 Be good, sweet maid, and let who can be clever.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, A Farewell.

Here is a startling alternative which to the English, alone among great nations, has been not startling but a matter of course. Here is a casual assumption that a choice must be made between goodness and intelligence; that stupidity is first cousin to moral conduct, and cleverness the first step into mischief; that reason and God are not on good terms with each other.

JOHN ERSKINE, The Moral Obligation to be Intelligent.

7 It's clever, but is it art?

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Conundrum of the Workshops.

8 The wish to appear clever often prevents one from being so. (Le désir de paraître habile empêche souvent de le devenir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 199.

The supreme cleverness consists in knowing perfectly the price of things. (La souveraine habilité consiste à bien connaître le prix des choses.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 244.

It is great cleverness to know how to conceal one's cleverness. (C'est une grande habilité que de savoir cacher son habilité.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 245.

9 Cleverness is an attribute of the selecter missionary lieutenants of Satan.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 1.

10 The Athenians do not mind a man being clever, so long as he does not impart his cleverness to others.

PLATO, Euthyphro. Sec. 3.

11 Mr. Hannaford's utterances have no meaning; he's satisfied if they sound clever.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Walls of Jericho. Act i.

12 The wicked are always surprised to find ability in the good. (Les méchants sont toujours surpris de trouver de l'habileté dans les bons.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 103.

13 If all good people were clever,
And all clever people were good,
The world would be nicer than ever
We thought that it possibly could.

But somehow, 'tis seldom or never
The two hit it off as they should;
The good are so harsh to the clever,
The clever so rude to the good.

ELIZABETH WORDSWORTH, St. Christopher and Other Poems: The Clever and the Good.

CLOUDS

14 I saw two clouds at morning
Tinged by the rising sun,
And in the dawn they floated on
And mingled into one.

JOHN G. C. BRAINARD, I Saw Two Clouds at Morning.

15 Were I a cloud I'd gather
My skirts up in the air,
And fly I well know whither,
And rest I well know where.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Elegy: The Cliff Top.

16 Our fathers were under the cloud.

New Testament: I Corinthians, x, 1.

17 The Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire.

Old Testament: Exodus, xiii, 21.

The Pillar of the Cloud.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN. Title of hymn beginning, "Lead, kindly Light."

1 One cloud may hide all the sun.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

2 When clouds appear like rocks and towers,
The earth's refreshed by frequent showers.

WILLIAM HONE, Year Book, 1831, p. 300.

When mountains and cliffs in the clouds appear,
Some sudden and violent showers are near.

INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 96.

A round-topped cloud with flattened face
Carries rainfall in its face.

INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 96.

3 The clouds,—the only birds that never sleep.

VICTOR HUGO, The Vanished City.

4 "Only disperse the cloud," they cry,
"And if our fate be death, give light, and let us die."

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Sixth Sunday after Epiphany.

5 Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand.

Old Testament: I Kings, xviii, 44.

6 The sun is set; and in his latest beams
Yon little cloud of ashen gray and gold,
Slowly upon the amber air unrolled,
The falling mantle of the Prophet seems.

LONGFELLOW, A Summer Day by the Sea.

7 The clouds in thousand liveries dight.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 62.

8 The low'ring element
Scowls o'er the darken'd landscape.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 490.

9 So clouds replenish'd from some bog below,
Mount in dark volumes, and descend in snow.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 363.

10 Who maketh the clouds his chariot.

Old Testament: Psalms, civ, 3.

Oh that a chariot of cloud were mine!
Of cloud which the wild tempest weaves in air.

SHELLEY, Fragment: A Cloud-Chariot.

In the clouds. (In nubibus.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

11 If there were no clouds, we should not enjoy the sun.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12 We often praise the evening clouds,
And tints so gay and bold,
But seldom think upon our God,
Who tinged these clouds with gold.

SCOTT, On the Setting Sun.

13 A little gale will soon disperse that cloud . . .

For every cloud engenders not a storm.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 10.

When clouds appear, wise men put on their cloaks.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 32.

14 The more fair and crystal is the sky,
The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 1, l. 41.

15 I bring fresh showers for the thirsting flowers,
From the seas and the streams;
I bear light shade for the leaves when laid
In their noonday dreams.

From my wings are shaken the dews that waken

The sweet buds every one,

When rocked to rest on their mother's breast,
As she dances about the sun.

I wield the flail of the lashing hail,
And whiten the green plains under,
And then again I dissolve it in rain,
And laugh as I pass in thunder.

SHELLEY, The Cloud.

16 The clouds consign their treasures to the fields,

And, softly shaking on the dimpled pool
Prelusive drops, let all their moisture flow
In large effusion, o'er the freshen'd world.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 173.

17 A cloud lay cradled near the setting sun,
A gleam of crimson tinged its braided snow; . . .

Tranquil its spirit seemed and floated slow!
Ev'n in its very motion there was rest;
While every breath of eve that chanced to blow

Wafted the traveller to the beauteous west.

JOHN WILSON, The Evening Cloud.

The clouds that gather round the setting sun
Do take a sober colouring from an eye
That hath kept watch o'er man's mortality.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 200.

18 I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills.

WORDSWORTH, Poems of the Imagination, xii.

II—Clouds: Their Shape

19

The fair, frail palaces,
The fading Alps and archipelagoes,
The great cloud-continents of sunset-seas.

T. B. ALDRICH, Sonnet: Miracles.

20

Didst thou never espy a cloud in the sky
Which a centaur or leopard might be,
Or a wolf, or a cow?

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 346.

Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish;
A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,

A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 14, l. 2.

Hamlet: Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Polonius: By the mass, and 't is like a camel, indeed.

Hamlet: Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Polonius: It is backed like a weasel.

Hamlet: Or like a whale?

Polonius: Very like a whale. . . .

Hamlet: They fool me to the top of my bent.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 393.

O, it is pleasant, with a heart at ease,
Just after sunset, or by moonlight skies,
To make the shifting clouds be what you please,
Or let the easily persuaded eyes Own each quaint likeness issuing from the mould
Of a friend's fancy.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Fancy in Nubibus.

2
Thou must have marked the billowy clouds,
Edged with intolerable radiancy,
Towering like rocks of jet
Crowned with a diamond wreath. . . .
When those far clouds of feathery gold,
Shaded with deepest purple, gleam
Like islands on a dark-blue sea. . . .

Yet not the golden islands
Gleaming in yon flood of light,
Nor the feathery curtains
Stretching o'er the sun's bright couch,
Nor the burnished ocean-waves
Paving that gorgeous dome,
So fair, so wonderful a sight
As Mab's ethereal palace could afford.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. ii, l. 9.

3
Becalmed along the azure sky,
The argosies of cloudland lie,
Whose shores, with many a shining rift,
Far off their pearl-white peaks uplift.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Midsummer.

III—Clouds: The Silver Lining

4
Was I deceiv'd, or did a sable cloud
Turn forth her silver lining on the night?
MILTON, Comus, l. 221.

I expand, I open, I turn my silver lining outward, like Milton's cloud.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 18.

Don't let's be down-hearted! There's a silver lining to every cloud.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

5
Though outwardly a gloomy shroud,
The inner half of every cloud
Is bright and shining:

I therefore turn my clouds about

And always wear them inside out
To show the lining.

ELLEN THORNEVCROFT FOWLER, The Wisdom of Folly.

6 Nature is always kind enough to give even her clouds a humorous lining.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Thoreau.

7
every cloud has its silver lining but it is sometimes a little difficult to get it to the mint

DON MARQUIS, certain maxims of archy.

8
There's a silver lining
Through the dark cloud shining,
Turn the dark cloud inside out,
Till the boys come home.

IVOR NOVELLO AND LENA GUILBERT FORD, Keep the Home Fires Burning. (1915)

9
After the greatest clouds the sun. (Post maxima nubila Phœbus.)

ALANUS DE INSULIS, Liber Parabolarum.

After clouds black, we shall have weather clear.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

After clouds comes clear weather.

SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 10.

10
No cloud across the sun
But passes at the last, and gives us back
The face of God once more.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act
iii, sc. 2.

11
Be still, sad heart! and cease repining;
Behind the clouds is the sun still shining.

LONGFELLOW, The Rainy Day.

Never once, since the world began,
Has the sun ever stopped shining;
His face very often we could not see,
And we grumbled at his inconstancy,
But the clouds were really to blame, not he,
For behind them he was shining.

JOHN OXENHAM, God's Sunshine.

12
Behind the cloud the starlight lurks,
Through showers the sunbeams fall;
For God, who loveth all His works,
Has left His hope with all!

WHITTIER, A Dream of Summer.

13
Wait till the clouds roll by, Jenny,
Wait till the clouds roll by;
Jenny, my own true loved one,
Wait till the clouds roll by.

J. T. WOOD, Wait Till the Clouds Roll By.
(1881)

CLOVER

14
Crimson clover I discover

By the garden gate,
And the bees around her hover,
But the robins wait.
DORA REED GOODALE, Red Clover.

<sup>1</sup> Clouds of bees are giddy with clover.
JEAN INGELow, Divided.

<sup>2</sup> The clover blossoms kiss her feet,
She is so sweet, she is so sweet.
While I, who may not kiss her hand,
Bless all the wild flowers in the land.
OSCAR LAUGHTON, Clover Blossoms.

<sup>3</sup> To be in clover.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 57.

<sup>4</sup> The clover is a homely little flower, but which flower has more honey?
JOHN A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 36.

<sup>5</sup> Flocks thick-nibbling through the clovered vale.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1234.

<sup>6</sup> With airs outblown from ferny dells
The clover-bloom and sweetbrier smells.
WHITTIER, The Last Walk in Autumn.

COAL

<sup>7</sup> Salt to Dysart, or coals to Newcastle.
SIR JAMES MELVILLE, Autobiography, i, 163.
(1583)

To send you our news from England, were to carry coals to Newcastle.

Thoresby Correspondence, i, 16. (1682) Newcastle is a great British coal port.

So far from being needless pains, it may bring considerable profit to carry char-coals to Newcastle.

THOMAS FULLER, Pisgah Sight, 128. (1650)

Labour in Vain, or Coals to Newcastle.

UNKNOWN. Title of sermon announced in
Daily Courant, London, 6 Oct., 1709.

To bring owls to Athens. (Γλαῦκ' εἰς Ἀθήνας.)
ARISTOPHANES, Aves, l. 301. The Athenian coins were stamped with an owl.

To bear pots to Samos isle, . . . owls to Athens, crocodiles to Nile.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso, xl, 1.

It is foolish to carry timber to a wood. (In silvam non ligna feras insanius.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 34.

<sup>8</sup> We may well call in black diamonds. Every basket is power and civilization. For coal is a portable climate. It carries the heat of the tropics to Labrador and the polar circle; and it is the means of transporting itself whither-soever it is wanted.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

<sup>9</sup> The best sun we have is made of Newcastle coal, and I am determined never to reckon upon any other.

WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 15 June, 1768.

COLERIDGE, SAMUEL TAYLOR

<sup>10</sup> Stop, Christian passer-by!—Stop, child of God,

And read with gentle breast. Beneath this sod
A poet lies, or that which once seem'd he.
O, lift one thought in prayer for S. T. C.;
That he who many a year with toil of breath Found death in life, may here find life in death!

Mercy for praise—to be forgiven for fame
He ask'd, and hoped, through Christ. Do thou the same!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Epitaph. Six manuscript versions of this epitaph are extant, all showing minor variations.

<sup>11</sup> He talked on for ever; and you wished him to talk on for ever.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, The Living Poets: Coleridge.

<sup>12</sup> He was a mighty poet and
A subtle-souled psychologist;
All things he seemed to understand,
Of old or new, on sea or land,
Save his own soul, which was a mist.
CHARLES LAMB, Coleridge.

<sup>13</sup> It [The Ancient Mariner] is marvellous in its mastery over that delightfully fortuitous inconsequence that is the adamant logic of dreamland.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Coleridge.

<sup>14</sup> You will see Coleridge—he who sits obscure
In the exceeding lustre and the pure
Intense irradiation of a mind
Which, with its own internal lightning blind,
Flags wearily through darkness and despair—
A cloud-encircled meteor of the air,
A hooded eagle among blinking owls.

SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne, l. 202.

Those songs half-sung that yet were all-divine—
That woke Romance, the queen, to reign afresh—
Had been but preludes from that lyre of thine, Could thy rare spirit's wings have pierced the mesh

Spun by the wizard who compels the flesh,
But lets the poet see how heav'n can shine.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, Coleridge.

<sup>15</sup> A noticeable man with large grey eyes,
And a pale face that seemed undoubtedly
As if a blooming face it ought to be;
Heavy his low-hung lip did oft appear,

Deprest by weight of musing Phantasy;
Profound his forehead was, though not severe.

WORDSWORTH, Stanzas, Written in My Pocket Copy of Thomson's "Castle of Indolence."

COLUMBUS, CHRISTOPHER

1 O patient master, seer,
For whom the far is near,
The vision true, and the mere present pales.
LOUIS JAMES BLOCK, The New World.

2 Columbus! Other title needs he none.
FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Columbus.

3 Every ship that comes to America got its chart from Columbus.
EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

4 Columbus discovered no isle or key so lonely
as himself.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude.

5 He dreads no tempests on the untravell'd deep,
Reason shall steer, and skill disarm the gale.
PHILIP FRENEAU, Columbus to Ferdinand.

6 Well! but I saw It. Wait! the Pinta's gun!
Why look, 'tis dawn, the land is clear: 'tis
done!

Two dawns do break at once from Time's full
hand—

God's, East—mine, West: good friends, behold my Land!

SIDNEY LANIER, Hymn of the West.

7 Would that we had the fortunes of Columbus.

Sailing his caravels a trackless way,
He found a Universe—he sought Cathay.
God give such dawns as when, his venture o'er,
The Sailor looked upon San Salvador.
God lead us past the setting of the sun
To wizard islands, of august surprise;
God make our blunders wise.

VACHEL LINDSAY, Litany of the Heroes.

8 He gained a world; he gave that world
Its grandest lesson: "On! sail on!"
JOAQUIN MILLER, Columbus.

He gave the world another world, and ruin
Brought upon blameless, river-loving nations,
Cursed Spain with barren gold, and made the Andes

Fleets of Saint Peter.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Odes.

9 Into Thy hands, O Lord,

Into Thy hands I give my soul.

EDNA DEAN PROCTOR, Columbus Dying. "In manus tuas, Domine, commendo spiritum meum," were Columbus's last words.

10 Columbus found a world, and had no chart,
Save one that faith deciphered in the skies;
To trust the soul's invincible surmise
Was all his science and his only art.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, O World.

11 Then first Columbus, with the mighty hand
Of grasping genius, weigh'd the sea and land.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The West Indies. Pt. i,
l. 31.

Steer, bold mariner, on! albeit witlings deride
thee,
And the steersman drop idly his hand at the helm.
Ever and ever to westward! there must the coast
be discovered,
If it but lie distinct, luminous lie in thy mind.
Trust to the God that leads thee, and follow the sea that is silent;
Did it not yet exist, now would it rise from the flood.

SCHILLER, Steer, Bold Mariner, On!

12 Courage, World-finder! Thou hast need!
In Fate's unfolding scroll

Dark woes and ingrate wrongs I read
That rack the noble soul.

LYDIA HUNTLEY SIGOURNEY, Columbus.

13 From his adventurous prime
He dreamed the dream sublime:
Over his wandering youth

It hung, a beckoning star.

At last the vision fled,
And left him in its stead
The scarce sublimer truth,
The world he found afar.

WILLIAM WATSON, Columbus.

When shall the world forget
The glory and our debt;

Indomitable soul,
Immortal Genoese?

WILLIAM WATSON, Columbus.

14 What treasure found he? Chains and pains and sorrow—

Yea, all the wealth those noble seekers find Whose footfalls mark the music of mankind!

'Twas his to lend a life: 'twas Man's to borrow;

'Twas his to make, but not to share, the morrow.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, Columbus.

COMFORT

15 It's grand, and you canna expect to be baith grand and comfortable.

BARRIE, The Little Minister. Ch. 10.

<sup>1</sup> We have all sinned and come short of the glory of making ourselves as comfortable as we easily might have done.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, The Way of All Flesh, p. 82.

<sup>2</sup> The villager, born humbly and bred hard,
Content his wealth, and Poverty his guard,
In action simply just, in conscience clear,
By guilt untainted, undisturb'd by fear,
His means but scanty, and his wants but few,
Labour his business, and his pleasure too,
Enjoys more comforts in a single hour
Than ages give the wretch condemn'd to power.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. iii, l. 117.

They have most satisfaction in themselves, and consequently the sweetest relish of their creature comforts.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven. St. 15.

<sup>4</sup> Miserable comforters are ye all.

<sup>5</sup> Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxiii, 4.

<sup>6</sup> Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 182.

O, my good lord, that comfort comes too late;
'Tis like a pardon after execution;
That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me;
But now I am past all comforts here but prayers.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 120.

I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait,
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 7, l. 42.

He receives comfort like cold porridge.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 10.

<sup>7</sup> Most of the luxuries and many of the so-called comforts of life are not only not indispensable, but positive hindrances to the elevation of mankind.

<sup>14</sup> Trade which, like blood, should circularly flow.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 2.

<sup>15</sup> And where they went on trade intent

They did what freemen can,

Their dauntless ways did all men praise,

The merchant was a man.

The world was made for honest trade—

To plant and eat be none afraid.

EMERSON, Boston.

<sup>16</sup> The craft of the merchant is this bringing a thing from where it abounds, to where it is costly.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

There are geniuses in trade, as well as in war, or the State, or letters. . . . Nature seems to authorize trade, as soon as you see a natural merchant, who appears not so much a private agent as her factor and Minister of Commerce.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

<sup>17</sup> Commerce is of trivial import; love, faith, truth of character, the aspiration of man, these are sacred.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

Trade, that pride and darling of our ocean, that educator of nations, that benefactor in spite of itself, ends in shameful defaulting, bubble, and bankruptcy, all over the world.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

1 The most advanced nations are always those who navigate the most.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

The greatest meliorator of the world is selfish, huckstering trade.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

Commerce is the great civilizer. We exchange ideas when we exchange fabrics.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Reply to the Indianapolis Clergy.

2 No nation was ever ruined by trade.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Thoughts on Commercial Subjects.

Commerce proudly flourish'd through the state;
At her command the palace learn'd to rise,
Again the long-fall'n column sought the skies;
The canvas glow'd beyond e'en Nature warm,
The pregnant quarry teem'd with human form;
Till, more unsteady than the southern gale,
Commerce on other shores display'd her sail.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 134.

3 And honour sinks where commerce long prevails.

WILLIAM COLLINS, Ode to Liberty, l. 42.

A true-bred merchant is the best gentleman in the nation.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe: Farther Adventures.

6 The merchant has no country.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 119.

7 Is it not a common proverb amongst us when any man hath cozened or gone beyond us, to say, He hath played the merchant with us?

THOMAS NASHE, Works, iv, 240. (1593)

Merchant and pirate were for a long period one and the same person. Even today mercantile morality is really nothing but a refinement of piratical morality.

NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra.

8 What war could ravish, commerce could bestow,

And he returned a friend, who came a foe.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 205.

9 The merchant, to secure his treasure,
Conveys it in a borrow'd name.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Ode, l. 1.

10 A merchant of great traffic through the world.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 12.

Traffic's thy god; and thy god confound thee!
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 1, l. 246.

11 Hence Commerce springs, the venal interchange

Of all that human art or Nature yield; . . .
Commerce! beneath whose poison-breathing shade

No solitary virtue dares to spring,
But Poverty and Wealth with equal hand
Scatter their withering curses.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto v, l. 38.

12 The propensity to truck, barter, and exchange one thing for another . . . is common to all men, and to be found in no other race of animals.

ADAM SMITH, Wealth of Nations. Bk. i, ch. 2.

13 No man is a better merchant than he that lays out his time upon God and his money upon the poor.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living and Dying. Ch. i. Quoted.

14 Generous commerce binds
The round of nations in a golden chain.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 138.

I—Companions: Apothegms

15 A crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

16 Endeavour, as much as you can, to keep company with people above you.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

Join the company of lions rather than assume the lead among foxes.

Talmud: Aboth, iv, 20.

I love good creditable acquaintance; I love to be the worst of the company.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 17 Apr., 1710.

17 Take the tone of the company you are in.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747.

18 Pleasures afford more delight when shared with others; to enjoy them in solitude is a dreary thing.

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 96.

There is no satisfaction in any good without a companion. (Nullius boni sine socio jucunda possessio est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. vi, sec. 4.

Who can enjoy alone,

Or all enjoying, what contentment find?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 365.

1 It brings comfort and encouragement to have companions in whatever happens.

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 103.

MISERY LOVES COMPANY, see under MISERY.

2 We are in the same boat.

POPE CLEMENT I, Epistle to the Church of Corinth.

3 Ah, hideous company! but, in church with saints,

And with guzzlers in the taverns.

(Ahi fiera compagnia! ma nella chiesa Coi santi ed in taverna coi ghiottoni.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxii, l. 14.

4 Two are better than one.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 9.

Two is company, three is none.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. (1546)

Two is company, three is a crowd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. (1732)

One's too few, three too many.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Two is company, three is trumpery, as the proverb says.

EDNA LYALL, Wayfaring Men. Ch. 24.

5 Men who know the same things are not long the best company for each other.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

6 Better your room than your company.

SIMON FORMAN, Marriage of Wit and Wisdom. (c. 1570)

His room is better than his company.

ROBERT GREENE, Works. Vol. xi, p. 255.

7 The company makes the feast.

HACKWOOD, Good Cheer, p. 361. See under DINING.

8 Ez soshubble ez a baskit er kittens.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Legends of the Old Plantation. Ch. 3.

9 He cleaves to me like Alcides' shirt.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act iii, sc. 2.

10 To no man make yourself a boon companion:
Your joy will be less, but less will be your grief.

(Nulli te facias nimis sodalem:
Gaudibis minus et minus dolebis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 34.

11 For we were nursed upon the self-same hill.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 23.

12 Present company excepted.

JOHN O'KEEFFE, The London Hermit. (1793)

13 Companionship with a powerful person is never to be trusted. (Numquam est fidelis cum potente societas.)

PHLEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 5, l. 1.

14 We still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together;
And whereso'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupl'd and inseparable.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 3, l. 75.

15 To make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself
Till supper-time alone.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 42.

16 Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 1, l. 51.

Lion and stoat have isled together, knave,
In time of flood.
TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 871.

17 I thought you and he were hand-in-glove.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

18 No man can be provident of his time that is not prudent in the choice of his company.
JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living and Dying. Ch. i, sec. 1.

19 Good company and good discourse are the very sinews of virtue.
IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 2.

20 Company keeps our rind from growing too coarse and rough.
WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 22 Sept., 1765.

21 When a university course convinces like a slumbering woman and child convince,
When the minted gold in the vault smiles like the night-watchman's daughter,
When warrantee deeds loafe in chairs opposite and are my friendly companions,
I intend to reach them my hand, and make as much of them as I do of men and women like you.
WALT WHITMAN, A Song for Occupations. Sec. 6.

II—Companions: A Man is Known By

<sup>1</sup> Tell me what company thou keepest, and I'll tell thee what thou art. (Dime con quien Andas, decirte he quien eres.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 10.

There is a Spanish proverb, which says very justly, Tell me who you live with and I will tell you who you are.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

<sup>2</sup> Every man is like the company he is wont to keep.

EURIPIDES, Phæmissæ. Frag. 809.

He is known by his companions. (Noscitur a sociis.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

<sup>3</sup> If one wishes to be esteemed, one must live with estimable people. (Si l'on voulait être estimé, il faudrait vivre avec des personnes estimables.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. ii, No. 58.

<sup>4</sup> A man's mind is known by the company it keeps.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Pope.

JOHN A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 19.

<sup>6</sup> "A man is known by the company he keeps"—it is the motto of a prig. Little men with foot rules six inches long, applied their measuring sticks in this way to One who lived nineteen centuries ago. "He sits at meat with publicans and sinners," they tauntingly said, assuming that his character was smirched thereby.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xii, p. 62.

III—Companions: Evil Communications

<sup>7</sup> Keep good men company, and thou wilt become one of them. (Júntate á los Buenos y serás uno dellos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 32.

<sup>8</sup> Go with mean people and you think life is mean.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plutarch.

<sup>9</sup> Company makes cuckolds.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1132.

<sup>10</sup> Keep not ill men company lest you increase the number.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

MENANDER, Thais: Fragment.

Evil communications corrupt good manners.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 33.

Evil communications corrupt good mutton.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, Nile Notes of a Howadji. Ch. 3.

See also under MANNERS.

<sup>12</sup> This forbids a good man to consort for any purpose with an evildoer. (Interdecit ne cum maleficio Usum bonus consociet ullius rei.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 10, l. 20.

<sup>13</sup> If you live with a lame person you will learn to limp. (Si claudio cohabites, subclaudicare disces.)

PLUTARCH, Morals. Bk. i. Quoted.

<sup>14</sup> The more closely you associate yourself with the good, the better. (Quam ad probos propinquitate proxime te adjunxeris, Tam optimum est.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 236. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

<sup>15</sup> Live with a hangman, and you will never be rid of your cruelty; if an adulterer be your club-mate, he will kindle the baser passions. If you would be stripped of your faults, leave far behind you the patterns of the faults. (Numquam sævitiam in tortoris contubernio pones. Incident libidines tuas adulterorum sodalicia. Si velis vitiis exui, longe a vitiorum exemplis recedendum est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ., 21.

<sup>16</sup> O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal; God forgive thee for it! Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing; and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 101.

I have forsworn his company hourly, any time this two-and-twenty years, and yet I am bewitch'd with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 16.

Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 11.

<sup>17</sup> It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 83.

Therefore it is meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduced?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 315

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, 60.)

<sup>19</sup> Ill company is like a dog, who dirt's those most whom he loves best.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

IV—Companions: Like to Like

<sup>1</sup> Like to like; jackdaw to jackdaw. (Τὸν ὁμοῖον ὡς τὸν ὁμοῖον, καὶ κολοῖον ποτὶ κολοῖον.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. vii, ch. 1, sec. 6.

Like to like. (Ὡς αἰεὶ τὸν ὁμοῖον.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. i, ch. 11, sec. 25. Quoted as a proverb.

As ever, the god is bringing like and like together. (Ὡς αἰεὶ τὸν ὁμοῖον ἄγει θεὸς ὡς τὸν ὁμοῖον.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 218.

How universally God joineth like to like!

MENANDER, The Man from Sicyon: Fragment. Like with like most readily foregatherers. (Pares cum paribus facillime congregantur.)

CATO, quoting an old proverb. (CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. iii, sec. 7.)

Like will to like.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

Like to like, the proverb saith.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, The Lover Complaineth.

<sup>2</sup> Beast knows beast; birds of a feather flock together. ("Ἐγὼ δὲ θῆρ θῆρα, αἶε κολοῖος παρὰ κολοῖον.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. i, ch. 11, sec. 25. Quoted as proverbs.

Birds of a feather best fly together.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, Promos and Cassandra. (1578)

Birds of a feather will gather together.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. 2, subs. 1.

Then let's flock hither,

Like birds of a feather.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Aristippus.

<sup>3</sup> Things that have a common quality quickly seek their kind. ("Ὅσα κοινὸν τινος μετέχει, πρὸς τὸ ὁμογενὲς σπεύδει.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 9.

For as saith the proverb notable,

Each thing seeketh its semblable.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Re-cured Lover. (1525)

V—Companions on a Journey

<sup>4</sup> Good company is a good coach.

JOHN CLARKE, Par. Anglo-Latina, 291. (1639)

Good company upon the road, says the proverb, is the shortest cut.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 18.

Good company in a journey makes the way to seem the shorter.

ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 1.

A proverb in all languages.

<sup>5</sup> A man knows his companion in a long journey and a little inn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 284.

<sup>6</sup> A merry companion is as good as a wagon.

JOHN LYLX, Woman in the Moon. Act. iv. (1597)

A merry companion is music in a journey.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

With merry company, the dreary way is endured. (Con alegre compania se sufre la triste via.)

UNKNOWN. A Spanish proverb.

<sup>7</sup> A witty comrade at your side,

To walk's as easy as to ride.

(Comes facundus in via pro vehiculo est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 104.

<sup>8</sup> Most people sulk in stage-coaches; I always talk.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sayings. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i.)

VI—Companions Lost

<sup>9</sup> Whene'er with haggard eyes I view
This dungeon that I'm rotting in,

I think of those companions true
Who studied with me at the U-Niversity of Göttingen.

GEORGE CANNING, Song: Of One Eleven Years in Prison.

<sup>10</sup> Dear lost companions of my tuneful art,

Dear as the light that visits these sad eyes,
Dear as the ruddy drops that warm my heart.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 39.

<sup>11</sup> I have had playmates, I have had companions,
In my days of childhood, in my joyful school-days.

All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

CHARLES LAMB, The Old Familiar Faces.

<sup>12</sup> And the bright faces of my young companions
Are wrinkled like my own, or are no more.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act iii, sc. 3.

<sup>13</sup> When, musing on companions gone,
We doubly feel ourselves alone.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto ii, Introduction, l. 134.

COMPARISONS

<sup>14</sup> To liken them to your auld-warld squad,
I must needs say comparisons are odd.

ROBERT BURNS, The Brigs of Ayr, l. 177.

<sup>15</sup> Some say, compared to Bononcini,
That Mynheer Handel's but a ninny;
Others aver that he to Handel

Is scarcely fit to hold a candle.

Strange all this difference should be

'Twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee.

JOHN BYROM, On the Feud Between Handel and Bononcini. The original version which appeared in the London Journal, 5 June, 1725, differs slightly from this. It was published with the heading: "The Contest. By the Author of the Celebrated Pastoral, My Time, O Ye Muses, Was Happily Spent." The last two lines were attributed to Swift and Pope in Scott's edition of the former and Dyce's edition of the latter. (See Notes and Queries, Ser. x, 2, 7; 8, 47; and 11, 426.)

Est-ce Gluck, est-ce Piccini,
Que doit couronner Polymnie?
Donc, entre Gluck et Piccini
Tout le Parnasse est désuni;
L'un soutient ce que l'autre nie,
Et Cléo veut battre Uranie.
Pour moi, qui crains toute manie,
Plus irrésolu que Babouç,
N'épousant Piccini ni Gluck,
Je n'y connais rien; ergo, Gluck.

C. C. DE LA RUTHIERE, Epigram. This followed Byrom by fifty years, and was evoked by the quarrel between the followers of Gluck and Piccini in Paris.

1 Is it possible your pragmatism should not know that the comparisons made between wit and wit, courage and courage, beauty and beauty, birth and birth, are always odious and ill taken?

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

All comparisons are odious. (Toda Comparacion es odiosa.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 23.

She, and comparisons are odious.

JOHN DONNE, Elegies: No. 8, The Comparison.

Comparisons are odious.

JOHN FORTESCUE, De Laudibus Legum Angliæ. Ch. 19. (1471); BURTON, Anat. of Melancholy, iii, iii, l. 2; MARLOWE, Lust's Dominion, iii, '4; CAREW, Describing Mt. Edgumbe; HARVEY, Archaica, ii, 23; HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum; HEYWOOD, Woman Killed with Kindness, i, 2; and many others.

2
Odious of old been comparisons.

JOHN LYDGATE, Political Poems. No. xxii. (c. 1440)

Comparisons are odorous.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 18.

We own your verses are melodious,
But then comparisons are odious.

SWIFT, Answer to Sheridan's Simile.

3
Half-happy, by comparison of bliss,
Is miserable.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. ii, l. 371.

4
Comparisons do ofttime great grievance.

JOHN LYDGATE, Bochas. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (c. 1440)

5
Comparisons make enemies of our friends.
(Ἐχθροὺς ποιοῦσι τοὺς φίλους αἱ συγκρίσεις.)

PHILEMON, Fabulæ Incerta. Frag. 17.

6
Another, yet the same.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 40.

In a deep pool, by happy chance we saw
A twofold Image; on a grassy bank
A snow-white Ram, and in the crystal flood
Another and the same!

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 439.

7
Comparing what thou art,
With what thou mightst have been.
WALTER SCOTT, The Field of Waterloo, l. 396.

8
Hyperion to a satyr.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 140.

My father's brother, but no more like my father
Than I to Hercules.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 152.

9
I have been studying how I may compare
This prison where I live unto the world:
And for because the world is populous
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it; yet I'll hammer it out.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 1.

No caparisons, miss, if you please. Caparisons don't become a young woman.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iv, sc. 2.

10
Knowing pups are like dogs and kids like goats,
So used I to compare great things with small.
(Sic canibus catulos similes, sic matribus hædos

Noram; sic parvis componere magna solebam.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 23.

If we may compare small things with great.
(Si parva licet componere magnis.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 176.

To compare Great things with small.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 921.

Nought so vile that on the earth doth live
But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair
use

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 3,
l. 17.

Life may change, but it may fly not;
Hope may vanish, but can die not;
Truth be veiled, but still it burneth;
Love repulsed,—but it returneth!

SHELLEY, Hellas, l. 34.

Them ez wants, must choose.
Them ez hez, must lose.
Them ez knows, won't blab.
Them ez guesses, will gab.
Them ez borrows, sorrows.
Them ez lends, spends.
Them ez gives, lives.
Them ez keeps dark, is deep.
Them ez kin earn, kin keep.
Them ez aims, hits.
Them ez hez, gits.
Them ez waits, win.
Them ez will, kin.

EDWARD ROWLAND SILL, *A Baker's Duzzen Uv
Wize Sawz*.

There is no felicity upon earth, which carries not its counterpoise of misfortunes; no happiness which mounts so high, which is not depressed by some calamity.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Contemplation of the State of Man. Bk. i, ch. 2.

If you rightly bear your cross, it will bear you.
(Si libenter crucem portas, portabit te.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk.
2, ch. 5.

"The cross, if rightly borne, shall be
No burden, but support to thee;"
So, moved of old time for our sake,
The holy monk of Kempen spake.

J. G. WHITTIER, The Cross.

Though good things answer many good intents,
Crosses do still bring forth the best events.

ROBERT HERRICK, Crosses.

Since I must be old and have the gout, I have long turned those disadvantages to my own account, and plead them to the utmost when they will save me from doing anything I dislike.

WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 30 Oct., 1785.

12
And light is mingled with the gloom,
And joy with grief;
Divinest compensations come,
Through thorns of judgment mercies bloom
In sweet relief.

WHITTIER, Anniversary Poem. St. 15.

God's ways seem dark, but, soon or late,
They touch the shining hills of day.

As high as we have mounted in delight,
In our dejection do we sink as low.

WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence,
l. 24.

II—Compensation: Sun and Rain

14
There is a day of sunny rest
For every dark and troubled night:
And grief may bide an evening guest.
But joy shall come with early light.
BRYANT, Blessed Are They That Mourn.

15
Somewhere the sun is shining,
Somewhere a little rain.
CHARLES K. HARRIS, Somewhere. (1906)

Tho' the rain is on the river,
Yet the sun is on the hill.
F. WYVILLE HOME, Sunshine and Rain.

16
The world goes up, and the world goes down,
And the sunshine follows the rain;
And yesterday's sneer, and yesterday's frown

Can never come over again.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Dolcino to Margaret.

1 Under the storm and the cloud to-day,
And to-day the hard peril and pain—
To-morrow the stone shall be rolled away,
For the sunshine shall follow the rain.
Merciful Father, I will not complain,
I know that the sunshine shall follow the rain.
JOAQUIN MILLER, For Princess Maud.

2 If you count the sunny and cloudy days throughout a year, you will find that the sunshine predominates. (Si numeres anno soles et nubilia toto, Invenies nitidum sæpius esse diem.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 8, l. 31.

O don't be sorrowful, darling!

And don't be sorrowful, pray;

Taking the year together, my dear,

There isn't more night than day.

REMBRANDT PEALE, Don't Be Sorrowful, Darling.

3 Day follows on the murkiest night, and, when the time comes, the latest fruits will ripen.
(Tag wird es auf die dickste Nacht, und, kommt Die Zeit, so reifen auch die spät'sten Früchte.)

SCHILLER, Jungfrau von Orleans. Act iii, sc. 2.

COMPLIMENT

See also Flattery, Praise

4 You're exceedingly polite,
And I think it only right
To return the compliment.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

5 A compliment is usually accompanied with a bow, as if to beg pardon for paying it.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

6 Compliments cost nothing, yet many pay dearly for them.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 What honour that,
But tedious waste of time, to sit and hear
So many hollow compliments and lies.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 122.

I have heard say that complimenting is lying.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

8 When quality meets compliments pass.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Compliments fly when gentlefolk meet.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 28.

What compliments fly when beggars meet!

NORTHALL, Folk Phrases, 12.

9 Manhood is melted into courtesies, valour into compliment.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 321.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke: but farewell compliment!
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 2,
l. 88.

'Twas never merry world
Since lowly feigning was called compliment.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1,
l. 109.

10 Though compliments should arise naturally out of the occasion, they should not appear to be prompted by the spur of it; for then they seem hardly spontaneous. Applaud a man's speech at the moment when he sits down and he will take your compliment as exacted by the demands of common civility; but let some space intervene, and then show him that the merits of his speech have dwelt with you when you might have been expected to have forgotten them, and he will remember your compliment for a much longer time than you have remembered his speech.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, p. 237.

11 This barren verbiage, current among men,
Light coin, the tinsel clink of compliment.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 40.

12 I can live for two months on a good compliment.

MARK TWAIN. (PAINE, Mark Twain.)

COMPROMISE

13 The common problem, yours, mine, every one's,

Is—not to fancy what were fair in life

Provided it could be,—but, finding first

What may be, then find how to make it fair
Up to our means.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

And finds, with keen, discriminating sight,
Black's not so black,—nor white so very white.

GEORGE CANNING, The New Morality.

14 All government—indeed, every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue and every prudent act—is founded on compromise and barter.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America, 22 March, 1775.

The concessions of the weak are the concessions of fear.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America.

15 Every compromise was surrender and invited new demands.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: American Civilization.

16 Everything yields. The very glaciers are viscous, or regellate into conformity, and the stiffest patriots falter and compromise.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: The Fortune of the Republic.

1 A lean compromise is better than a fat lawsuit.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

2 Life cannot subsist in society but by reciprocal concessions.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 1766.

3 Man, a bear in most relations—worm and savage otherwise,—

Man propounds negotiations, Man accepts the compromise.

Very rarely will he squarely push the logic of a fact.

To its ultimate conclusion in unmitigated act.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Female of the Species.

4 Heaven forbids, it is true, certain gratifications, but there are ways and means of compounding such matters. (Le Ciel défend, de vrai, certains contentements; Mais on trouve avec lui des accommodements.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act iv, sc. 5.

5 Basely yielded upon compromise
That which his noble ancestors achieved with blows.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 253.

6 All great alterations in human affairs are produced by compromise.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: The Catholic Question.

7 Is not Compromise of old a god among you?
SWINBURNE, A Word from the Psalmist. St. 4.

8 From compromise and things half done,
Keep me with stern and stubborn pride;
And when at last the fight is won,
God, keep me still unsatisfied.

LOUIS UNTERMEYER, Prayer.

10 Conceit is the most incurable disease that is known to the human soul.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

11 The world tolerates conceit from those who are successful, but not from anybody else.

JOHN BLAKE, Uncommon Sense.

Every man has a right to be conceited until he is successful.

BENJAMIN DISRAËLI, The Young Duke.

CONCEIT

12 Thus when we fondly flatter our desires
Our best conceits do prove the greatest liars.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Barons' Wars. Bk. vi, st. 94.

13 I laugh at the lore and the pride of man,
At the sophist schools, and the learned clan;
For what are they all, in their high conceit,
When man in the bush with God may meet?
RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Good-Bye.

Conceit, which destroys almost all the fine wits.
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

14 We can bear to be deprived of everything but our self-conceit.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 421.

15 Conceit is the finest armour a man can wear.

16 Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit?
there is more hope of a fool than of him.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 12.

Wiser in his own conceit than seven men that can render a reason.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 16.

Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 16.

When Christian saw that the man was wise in his own conceit, he said to Hopeful whisperingly,
There is more hopes of a fool than of him.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

17 Conceit may puff a man up, but never prop him up.

RUSKIN, True and Beautiful: Morals and Religion.

18 Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 114.

There are a sort of men whose visages
Do cream and mantle like a standing pond,
And do a wilful stillness entertain,
With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion
Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 1, l. 88.

Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,
Brags of his substance, not of ornament.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 30.

19 Thy conceit is soaking.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 224.

Pontus, 47 B. C.

In announcing the swiftness and fierceness of this battle to one of his friends at Rome, Amantius, Cæsar wrote three words: "Came, saw, conquered." (ἤλθον, εἶδον, ἐνίκησα.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar. Ch. 50, sec. 2.

In his Pontic triumph he displayed an inscription of but three words, "I came, I saw, I conquered" (Veni, Vidi, Vici), not indicating the events of the war, but the speed with which it was finished.

SUETONIUS, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius. Ch. 37, sec. 2. There is no authority for the frequent misstatement that the words were applied by Cæsar to his expedition to Britain
(55 B. C.), which was only partly successful.

5 I came, I saw, God conquered.

JOHN SOBIESKI, to the Pope, with the Mussulman standards captured before Vienna.

The enemy came, was beaten, I am tired, goodnight.

TURENNE, announcing his victory over the Spaniards at Dunkirk, June 14, 1658.

Hurrah! Prague! Suwarrow!

SUWARROW, announcing the capture of Prague, in 1794, to Catherine of Russia. Catherine's answer was, "Bravo! Field-marshal! Catherine!"

Peccavi!

SIR CHARLES NAPIER, announcing his victory at Hyderabad in 1843, meaning "I have Scinde."

6 Never shall the insolent barbarian say, "I came, I saw, I conquered." (Ne insolens barbarus dicat "Veni, vidi, vici.")

MARCUS ANNÆUS SENECA, Suasoriæ. Bk. ii,
sec. 19. The earliest occurrence of the saying in literature, written by Seneca the Elder shortly before his death about A. D. 32.

7 Cæsar's thrasonical brag of 'I came, saw, and overcame.'

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 2,
l. 34.

I may justly say, with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, "I came, saw, and overcame."

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 44.

He it was that might rightly say, Veni, vidi, vici; which to annothanize in the vulgar,—O base and obscure, vulgar!—videlicet, He came, saw, and overcame.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc.
1, l. 67.

CONSCIENCE

I—Conscience: Definitions

8 Conscience and reputation are two things.
Conscience is due to yourself, reputation to your neighbor. (Duæ res sunt conscientia et fama. Conscientia tibi, fama proximo tuo.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Works. Vol. xxi, p. 347.

There be two things that are necessary and needful, and that is good conscience and good report; that is to say, good conscience in thine own person inward, and good report for thy neighbour outward.

CHAUCER, Melibeus. Sec. 52. Quoting St. Augustine.

9 Conscience, which is a sparkle of the purity of his first estate.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire, called Conscience.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Moral Maxims: Conscience.

10 The great beacon light God sets in all,
The conscience of each bosom.

ROBERT BROWNING, Strafford. Act iv, sc. 2.

11 Conscience was born when man had shed his fur, his tail, his pointed ears.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. v,
st. 19.

12 Yet still there whispers the small voice within,
Heard through Gain's silence, and o'er Glory's din;

Whatever creed be taught or land be trod,
Man's conscience is the oracle of God.

BYRON, The Island. Canto i, st. 6.

Inexorable conscience holds his court,
With still, small voice the plot of guilt alarms.

ERASMUS DARWIN, Mores Concluded.

A still small voice spake unto me.

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 1.

There is another man within me that's angry with me.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii.

13 Conscience, good my lord,
Is but the pulse of reason.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapola. Act i.

14 Conscience emphasizes the word ought.

JOSEPH COOK, Boston Monday Lectures: Conscience.

Our secret thoughts are rarely heard except in secret. No man knows what conscience is until he understands what solitude can teach him concerning it.

JOSEPH COOK, Boston Monday Lectures: Conscience.

1 In early days the Conscience has in most A quickness which in later life is lost.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 109.

But at sixteen the conscience rarely gnaws
So much as when we call our old debts in
At sixty years, and draw the accounts of evil,
And find a deuced balance with the devil.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 167.

2 Oh! Conscience! Conscience! man's most faithful friend,
Him canst thou comfort, ease, relieve, defend;

But if he will thy friendly checks forego,
Thou art, oh! woe for me, his deadliest foe!

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: No. xiv, The Struggles of Conscience. Last lines.

3 We must not harbor disconsolate consciences, borrowed too from the consciences of other nations. We must set up the strong present tense against all the rumors of wrath, past or to come.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

The prosperous and beautiful
To me seem not to wear
The yoke of conscience masterful,
Which galls me everywhere.

EMERSON, The Park.

4 The man who acts never has any conscience; no one has any conscience but the man who thinks.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

5 A man's conscience and his judgement is the same thing, and as the judgement, so also the conscience, may be erroneous.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 29.

6 A man's vanity tells him what is honour; a man's conscience what is justice.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Peter Leopold and President.

7 Conscience is a God to all mortals. (Ἐποιοῖς ἀπαντὶ ἡ συνείδησις θεός.)

MENANDER, Monostikoi. No. 564.

8 The laws of conscience, which we pretend are born of nature, are born of custom. (Les lois de la conscience, que nous disons naître de nature, naissent de la coutume.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22.

9 I ever understood an impartial liberty of conscience to be the natural rights of all men.

. . . Liberty of conscience is the first step to having a religion.

WILLIAM PENN, The People's Ancient and Just Liberties Asserted. (1673)

10 Conscience is the voice of the soul, the passions are the voice of the body. (La conscience est la voix de l'âme, les passions sont la voix du corps.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iv.

11 I know thou art religious,
And hast a thing within thee called conscience,

With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies,
Which I have seen thee careful to observe.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1, l. 74.

12 The conscience has morbid sensibilities; it must be employed but not indulged, like the imagination or the stomach.

R. L. STEVENSON, Ethical Studies, p. 84.

13 Conscience is, in most men, an anticipation of the opinion of others.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, p. 63.

14 Conscience is instinct bred in the house,
Feeling and Thinking propagate the sin
By an unnatural breeding in and in.

H. D. THOREAU, Conscience. (A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.)

A conscience worth keeping,
Laughing not weeping;
A conscience wise and steady,
And forever ready;
Not changing with events,
Dealing in compliments;
A conscience exercised about
Large things that one may doubt.

H. D. THOREAU, Conscience. (A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.)

15 In matters of conscience that is the best sense which every wise man takes in before he hath sullied his understanding with the designs of sophisters and interested persons.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Ductor Dubitantium. Bk. i, ch. 1, rule 6. (1660)

16 The conscience is a thousand witnesses.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. 29. (1539)

II—Conscience: Apothegms

17 He that loses his conscience has nothing left that is worth keeping.

CAUSSIN. (WALTON, Compleat Angler. Ch. 21.)

He who has no conscience has nothing. (Qui n'a conscience n'a rien.)

RABELAIS, Works: Bk. ii, Prologue.

18 Conscience, avaunt! Richard's himself again!
COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act v, sc. 3.

1 Sell not your conscience; thus are fetters wrought.

What is a Slave but One who can be Bought?
ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 80.

2 It is always term time in conscience court.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Why should not Conscience have vacation
As well as other Courts o' th' nation?
Have equal power to adjourn,
Appoint appearance and return?

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 317.

3 Some make a conscience of spitting in church,
and yet rob the altar.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Once a year a man may say, "On his conscience."
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 There is a spectacle more grand than the sea;
it is heaven: there is a spectacle more grand than heaven; it is the conscience.

VICTOR HUGO, Les Misérables: Fantine. Bk. vii, ch. 3.

5 And crowneth Conscience king.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xxii, l. 256.

6 It is neither safe nor prudent to do aught against conscience.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk.

7 Help us to save free conscience from the paw
Of hireling wolves, whose gospel is their maw.

MILTON, Sonnet: To Cromwell.

8 Not as of the conscience of an angel or a horse, but of a man. (Non comme de la conscience d'un ange ou d'un cheval, mais comme de la conscience d'un homme.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

9 According to the state of a man's conscience, so do hope and fear on account of his deeds arise in his mind. (Conscia mens ut cuique sua est, ita concipit intra Pectora pro facto spemque metumque suo.)

OVIN, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 485.

10 What Conscience dictates to be done,
Or warns me not to do;

This teach me more than Hell to shun,
That more than Heav'n pursue.

POPE, Universal Prayer.

11 A scar on the conscience is the same as a wound. (Cicatrix conscientiae pro vulnere
est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae.

12 Conscience places a bridle upon the tongue.
(Frenos imponit linguæ conscientia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae.

13 Passion is here a soilure of the wits, We're told, and Love a cross for them to bear;

Joy shivers in the corner where she knits
And Conscience always has the rockingchair,

Cheerful as when she tortured into fits

The first cat that was ever killed by Care.

E. A. ROBINSON, New England. See also under CARE.

14 Conscience has no more to do with gallantry than it has with politics.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act ii, l. 4.

I will subdue my conscience to the plot.

SHERIDAN, A Trip to Scarborough. Act i.

15 Trust that man in nothing who has not a Conscience in everything.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

16 As guardian of His Majesty's conscience.

LORD CHANCELLOR EDWARD THURLOW, Speech, House of Lords, 1780. (BUTLER, Reminis-cences, p. 199.)

17 The conscience of the dying belies their life.
(La conscience des mourants calomnie leur vie.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 136.

18 Conscience makes egoists of us all.

OSCAR WILDE, Portrait of Dorian Gray. Ch. 8.

19 Their consciences are like cheverel skins, that will stretch every way.

UNKNOWN, Discoverie of Knights of the Poste.
Sig. B4. (1597) A cheverel is a wild goat.

Which gifts,
Saving your mincing, the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 30.

They have cheveril consciences that will stretch.
ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. iv, mem. 2, subs. 3.

III—The Quiet Conscience

20 A conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

New Testament: Acts, xxiv, 16.

21 A quiet conscience makes one so serene!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 83.

22 A man that will enjoy a quiet conscience must lead a quiet life.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 24 April, 1741.

23 O faithful conscience, delicately pure,
How doth a little failing wound thee sore!

(O dignitosa coscienza e netta,
Come t'è picciol fallo amaro morso.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto iii, l. 8.

May heaven's grace so clear away the foam from the conscience, that the river of thy thoughts may roll limpid henceforth.

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xiii, l. 88.

1 Keep conscience clear, then never fear.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

2 A clear conscience can bear any trouble.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 40.

A quiet conscience sleeps in thunder.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 374.

A good conscience is a continual Christmas.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

3 A clear conscience is a sure card.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 207. (1580)

A clear conscience needeth no excuse.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 256.

See also under INNOCENCE.

4 A good conscience is a soft pillow.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

What better bed than conscience good, to pass
the night with sleep.

THOMAS TUSSER, *Posies for Thine Own Bed-
Chamber*.

5 A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 379.

A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 230.

6 The testimony of a good conscience is the glory of a good man; have a good conscience and thou shalt ever have gladness. A good conscience may bear right many things and rejoices among adversities.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
ii, ch. 6.

IV—The Guilty Conscience

7 A burthen'd conscience
Will never need a hangman.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Laws of Candy.
Act v, sc. 1.

8 Conscience wakened in a fever,
Just a day too late, as ever.
ROBERT BUCHANAN, White Rose and Red. Pt.
ii, l. 5.

9 Those whom God forsakes, the devil by his permission lays hold on. Sometimes he per-secutes them with that worm of conscience, as he did Judas, Saul, and others. The poets
call it Nemesis.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. iv, mem. 2, subs. 3.

The worm of conscience still begnaw thy soul!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 222.

The worm of conscience consorts with the owl.
Sinners and evil spirits shun the light.

SCHILLER, Liebe und Cabale. Act v, sc. 1.

10 When Conscience wakens who can with her strive?

Terrors and troubles from a sick soul drive?
Naught so unpitying as the ire of sin,
The inappeas'ble Nemesis within.

ABRAHAM COLES, The Light of the World.

No hell like a bad conscience.

JOHN CROWNE, The Ambitious Statesman. Act
v, sc. 3. (1679)

An evil conscience breaks many a man's neck.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 602.

The disease of an evil conscience is beyond the practice of all the physicians of all the countries in the world.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, Plumstead, 1878.

11 No guilty man is acquitted at the bar of his own conscience, though he win his cause by a juggling urn, and the corrupt favor of the judge. (Judice nemo nocens absolvitur, improba quamvis Gratia fallaci prætoris vicerit urna.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 3.

12 Now conscience wakes despair
That slumber'd, wakes the bitter memory
Of what he was, what is, and what must be Worse; of worse deeds worse sufferings must ensue!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 23.

O conscience, into what abyss of fears
And horrors hast thou driven me!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 842.

Let his tormentor conscience find him out.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 130.

13 Whom conscience, ne'er asleep, Wounds with incessant strokes, not loud, but deep.

MONTAIGNE, Essays: Bk. ii, ch. 5.

14 Conscience, the bosom-hell of guilty man!
MONTGOMERY, Pelican Island. Canto v, l. 127.

15 Nothing is more wretched than the mind of a man conscious of guilt. (Nihil est miserius quam animus hominis conscius.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 13.

A guilty conscience never feels secure.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 617.

The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word nor princely favour:
With Cain go wander thorough shades of night,
And never show thy head by day nor light.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 6, l. 41.

16 Some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 124

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 193.

And conscience, that undying serpent, calls
Her venomous brood to their nocturnal task.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 60.

I sat alone with my conscience
In a place where time had ceased,
And we talked of my former living
In the land where the years increased.

CHARLES WILLIAM STUBBS, Alone with My Conscience.

And I know of the future judgment
How dreadful so'er it be

That to sit alone with my conscience
Would be judgment enough for me.

CHARLES WILLIAM STUBBS, Alone with My Conscience.

2
The guilty conscience thinks what is said
Is always spoken himself to upbraid.

UNKNOWN, Servingsmans Comfort. (1598)

V—The Coward Conscience

3
Conscience is a coward, and those faults it has not strength enough to prevent, it seldom has justice enough to accuse.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 13.

4
Guilty consciences ever make people cowards.

PILPAY, Fables: The Prince and the Minister.

5
In every hedge and ditch both day and night
We fear our death, of every leaf affright;
A lamp appears a lion, and we fear
Each bush we see 's a bear.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, emb. 13.

Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush supposed a bear!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 21.

The guilty conscience fears, when there's no
fear,

And thinks that every bush contains a bear.

ROWLAND WATKYNs, Flamma Sine Fumo: The Righteous Is Confident as a Lion.

6
The fond fantastic thing call'd conscience,
Which serves for nothing but to make men cowards.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Libertine. Act i, sc. 1.

7
Thus conscience does make cowards of us
all;

And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith and moment
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 83.

8
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict
me!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 179.

I'll not meddle with it [conscience]: it is a dangerous thing: it makes a man a coward: a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; he cannot swear, but it checks him; he cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'tis a blushing shamefast spirit that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles: . . . it beggars any man that keeps it.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 137.

9
By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard

Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 216.

10
Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Devised at first to keep the strong in awe.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 309.

11
O the cowardice of a guilty conscience.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii.

A guilty conscience never thinketh itself safe.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 208.

Guilty consciences make men cowards.

VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife. Act v, sc. 6.

12 Conscience and cowardice are really the same things. Conscience is the trade-name of the firm. That is all.

13
Conscience, a terrifying little sprite,
That bat-like winks by day and wakes by
night.

JOHN WOLCOT, The Lousiad. Canto ii.

CONSEQUENCES

14 Things and actions are what they are, and the consequences of them will be what they will be; why then should we desire to be deceived?

BISHOP JOHN BUTLER, Sermons. No. 7.

15
The pitcher that goes too often to the well leaves behind either the handle or the spout.
(Cantarillo que muchas veces va á la fuente
O deja el asa ó la frente.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 30.

Whether the pitcher hits the stone, or the stone hits the pitcher, it's a bad business for the pitcher.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20.

So long goeth the pot to the water, that it cometh broken home.

UNKNOWN, Ayenbite. 206. (1340)

The pot so long to the water goeth,
That home it cometh at the last y-broke.

THOMAS HOCLEVE, De Regimine Principum.
l. 4432. (1412)

The pitcher goes not so often to the well, but that it comes home cracked at last.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, English Rogue, i, 69. (1665)

The old pitcher went to the well once too often, but I'm glad the championship remains in America.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, when struggling to his feet after his defeat by James J. Corbett, 7 Sept., 1892.

The event is the print of your form. It fits you like your skin.

But this denoted a foregone conclusion.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 428.

A Foregone Conclusion.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS. Title of novel.

The blood will follow where the knife is driven,

The flesh will quiver where the pincers tear.

EDWARD YOUNG, The Revenge. Act v.

CONSERVATISM

I take my pleasures without change,
And as I lived I live.

WILFRID SCAWEN BLUNT, The Old Squire.

We are living in a phase of evolution which is known as the twentieth century and stands for a certain achieved growth of the human mind. But the enormous majority of the human race do not belong to that phase at all. . . . Victorians, Tudorians, ghosts surviving from the Middle Ages, and multitudes whose minds properly belong to palæolithic times, far outnumber the people who truly appertain to the twentieth century.

ROBERT BRIFFAULT, Rational Evolution.

"Old things need not be therefore true,"
O brother men, nor yet the new;
Ah! still awhile the old thought retain,
And yet consider it again.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Ah! Yet Consider It Again.

We have a maxim in the House of Commons, and written on the walls of our house, that old ways are the safest and surest ways.

EDWARD COKE, Speech, 8 May, 1628.

We have always been conscientiously attached to what is called the Tory, and which might with more propriety be called the Conservative, party.

J. WILSON CROKER, Article, Quarterly Review, Jan., 1830, p. 276. Said to be the first use of the word in this connection.

It seems to me a barren thing, this Conservatism—an unhappy cross-breed, the mule of politics that engenders nothing.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Ch. 5.

A conservative government is an organized hypocrisy.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 17 March, 1845.

All conservatives are such from personal defects. They have been effeminized by position or nature, born halt and blind, through luxury of their parents, and can only, like invalids, act on the defensive.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Men are conservative when they are least vigorous, or when they are most luxurious. They are conservatives after dinner.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

Conservatism tends to universal seeming and treachery, believes in a negative fate; . . . it distrusts nature.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The Conservative.

I often think it's comical
How nature always does contrive
That every boy and every gal,
That's born into this world alive,
Is either a little Liberal,
Or else a little Conservative.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act ii.

Cried all, "Before such things can come,
You idiotic child,

You must alter Human Nature!"

And they all sat back and smiled.
Thought they, "An answer to that last
It will be hard to find!"

It was a clinching argument
To the Neolithic Mind!

1 A conservative is a man who is too cowardly to fight and too fat to run.

ELBERT HUBBARD, One Thousand and One Epigrams.

5 The Atlantic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington.

SYDNEY SMITH, Speech, at Taunton, Oct., 1831. The story is that Mrs. Partington had a house on the beach at Sidmouth, Devon, England, and during a great storm in November, 1824, tried to mop up the waves which were driven into her house. Smith satirized the attempts in the House of Lords to stay the progress of reform by comparing them to Mrs. Partington. "In the midst of this sublime and terrible storm," said Smith,
"Dame Partington was seen at the door of her house with mop and patters, vigorously pushing away the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic was roused, Mrs. Partington's spirit was up; but I need not tell you that the contest was unequal. The Atlantic beat Mrs.
Partington." Ever since, Mrs. Partington has been a synonym for a bigoted and incorrigible conservative.

The refinement of good breeding could go no further.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners, referring to the fact that when the Marquess of Hartington, later the Duke of Devonshire, visited America in 1862, he wore a secession badge in his buttonhole and President Lincoln persisted in calling him "Mr. Partington."

6 Conservatism defends those coercive arrangements which a still-lingering savageness makes requisite. Radicalism endeavours to realize a state more in harmony with the character of the ideal man.

cals. This is a popular misconception. The most conservative persons I ever met are college undergraduates.

1905.

CONSISTENCY AND INCONSISTENCY

10 Consistency, thou art a jewel.

The origin of this proverb is unknown. In 1867, a newspaper war succeeded in hoaxing the unwary by announcing that he had discovered the line in an old ballad, Jolly Robyn-Roughhead, published in "Mur-tagh's Collection of Ballads, 1754," but no such book ever existed, and the ballad itself turned out to be a fake. Its first four lines ran:

Tush! tush! my lassie, such thoughts resigne,
Comparisons are crueltie:
Fine pictures suit in frames as fine,
Consistencie's a jewell.

11 No well-informed person ever imputed inconsistency to another for changing his mind.
(Nemo doctus unquam mutationem consilii inconstantiam dixit esse.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. xvi, sec. 8.

The absurd man is he who never changes.
(L'homme absurde est celui qui ne change jamais.)

BARTHÉLEMY.

12 A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

With consistency a great soul has simply nothing to do. . . . Speak what you think to-day in words as hard as cannon balls, and to-morrow speak what to-morrow thinks in hard words again, though it contradict everything you said to-day.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

13 For sea and land don't understand
Nor skies without a frown
See rights for which the one hand fights
By the other cloven down.
EMERSON, Ode.

1 I think you will find that people who honestly mean to be true really contradict themselves much more rarely than those who try to be "consistent."

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 2.

2 In opinions look not always back,—
Your wake is nothing, mind the coming track;
Leave what you've done for what you have to do;

Don't be "consistent," but be simply true.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 290.

3 With what knot shall I hold this Proteus, who so often changes his countenance? (Quo teneam voltus mutantem Protea nodo?)

5 Geniral C. is a drefille smart man;

He's ben on all sides that give places or pelf;

But consistency still wuz a part of his plan,—
He's been true to one party,—an' thet is himself.

7 What boots it at one gate to make defence
And at another to let in the foe?

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 560.

8 Unthought-of frailties cheat us in the wise:
The fool lies hid in inconsistencies.

See the same man in vigour, in the gout;

Alone, in company, in place, or out;

Early at business, and at hazard late,

Mad at a fox-chase, wise at a debate,

Drunk at a borough, civil at a ball,

Friendly at Hackney, faithless at Whitehall!

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 69.

Alas! in truth the man but changed his mind;

Perhaps was sick, in love, or had not dined.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 127.

19 I loathe inconstancy—I loathe, detest,
Abhor, condemn, abjure the mortal made
Of such quicksilver clay that in his breast

No permanent foundation can be laid.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 209.

20 The world's a scene of changes, and to be Constant, in Nature were inconstancy.

COWLEY, Inconstancy.

Since 'tis Nature's law to change,
Constancy alone is strange.

JOHN WILMOT, A Dialogue, l. 31.

1
Constancy is never the virtue of a mortal;
To be constant one must be immortal.

2
Changeless march the stars above,
Changeless morn succeeds to even;
And the everlasting hills,
Changeless watch the changeless heaven.

3
Wouldst thou approve thy constancy, approve
First thy obedience.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 367.

4 Expect not constancy from nightingales, who will every moment serenade a fresh rose.

SADI, The Rose Garden.

5
Now from head to foot
I am marble-constant: now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 240.

O swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,
That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 109.

6
O constancy, be strong upon my side,
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 6.

7
O heaven! were man
But constant, he were perfect.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act v, sc. 4, l. 109.

8
Ever the same. (Semper eadem.)

QUEEN ELIZABETH, Motto.

II—Constancy: The Needle and the Pole

9
True as the needle to the pole,
Or as the dial to the sun.

BARTON BOOTH, Song.

True as the dial to the sun,
Although it be not shin'd upon.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Part iii, canto ii, l. 175.

She was as true to her husband as the dial to the sun.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. i, ch. 18.

10
My heart is feminine, nor can forget—
To all, except one image, madly blind;
So shakes the needle, and so stands the pole,
As vibrates my fond heart to my fix'd soul.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 196.

Change, as ye list, ye winds! my heart shall be
The faithful compass that still points to thee.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell to Black-eyed Susan.

11
Nor ease nor peace that heart can know,
That like the needle true,

Turns at the touch of joy or woe;
But turning, trembles 'too.

FRANCES GREVILLE, Prayer for Indifference.

As still to the star of its worship, though clouded,
The needle points faithfully o'er the dim sea,
So dark when I roam in this wintry world
shrouded,

The hope of my spirit turns trembling to Thee.

THOMAS MOORE, The Heart's Prayer.

12
Spontaneously to God should tend the soul,
Like the magnetic needle to the Pole.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 115.

13
Even here Thy strong magnetic charms I feel,
And pant and tremble like the amorous steel.
To lower good, and beauties less divine,
Sometimes my erroneous needle does incline;
But yet (so strong the sympathy)
It turns, and points again to Thee.

JOHN NORRIS of Bemerton, Aspiration. Norris was fond of this metaphor, which he used in The Prayer, and in Contemplation and Love.

And the touch'd needle trembles to the pole.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 431.

14
Even as the needle that directs the hour, (Touched with the loadstone) by the secret
power

Of hidden Nature, points upon the pole;
Even so the wavering powers of my soul,
Touch'd by the virtue of Thy spirit, flee
From what is earth, and point alone to Thee.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, emb. 13.

15
I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 60.

16
Our life's a flying shadow, God the pole,
The needle pointing to Him is our soul.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, in Bishop Joceline's crypt, Glasgow cathedral.

The earliest known use of the simile of the soul and the magnetic needle is in Memorials of a Christian Life by Raimond Lull of Majorca, written about 1300.

CONSTITUTION

<sup>1</sup>'Tis constitution governs us all.
ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Hypocrite. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>2</sup>Well can ye mouth fair Freedom's classic line,
And talk of Constitutions o'er your wine.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, On Poland.

TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL, about 1885, to President Cleveland who refused to sign a bill on the grounds that it was unconstitutional. Campbell was a Tammany member of the House of Representatives, and the attribution to him is on the authority of William Tyler Page.

<sup>4</sup>As the British Constitution is the most subtle organism which has proceeded from the womb and the long gestation of progressive history, so the American Constitution is, so far as I can see, the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Kin beyond Sea. (North American Review, Sept., 1878.)

<sup>5</sup>Some men look at Constitutions with sanctimonious reverence, and deem them like the ark of the covenant, too sacred to be touched. They ascribe to the men of the preceding age a wisdom more than human, and suppose what they did to be beyond amendment. . . . Laws and institutions must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind. . . . We might as well require a man to wear the coat that fitted him as a boy, as civilized society to remain ever under the regime of their ancestors.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 40.

<sup>6</sup>All that is valuable in the United States Constitution is one thousand years old.
WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, Boston, 17 Feb., 1861.

<sup>7</sup>It's got so it is as easy to amend the Constitution of the United States as it used to be to draw a cork.

THOMAS RILEY MARSHALL. (Literary Digest, 20 June, 1925, p. 45.)

<sup>8</sup>There is a higher law than the Constitution.
WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Speech, U. S. Senate, March, 1850, condemning Daniel Webster for support of the Fugitive Slave Law.

<sup>9</sup>No philosopher's stone of a constitution can produce golden conduct from leaden instincts.
HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iii, ch. 21, sec. 7.

CONTEMPLATION

<sup>10</sup>The act of contemplation then creates the thing contemplated.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character. Ch. xii.

<sup>11</sup>All civil mankind have agreed in leaving one day for contemplation against six for practice.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Studies: The Preacher.

If I were to compare action of a much higher strain with a life of contemplation, I should not venture to pronounce with much confidence in favor of the former.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Goethe.

<sup>12</sup>Give me, kind Heaven, a private station,
A mind serene for contemplation.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Pt. ii, The Vulture, the Sparrow, and Other Birds.

<sup>13</sup>He that contemplates hath a day without night.

<sup>14</sup>Wisdom's . . . best nurse, Contemplation.

MILTON, Comus, l. 377.

But first and chiefest, with thee bring
Him that yon soars on golden wing,
Guiding the fiery-wheeled throne,
The Cherub Contemplation.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 51.

<sup>15</sup>So sweet is zealous contemplation.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 94.

<sup>16</sup>Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him:

How he jets under his advanced plumes.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 35.

<sup>10</sup> Let us draw upon content for the deficiencies of fortune.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 3.

<sup>11</sup> How comes it, Mæcenās, that no man living is content with the lot which either his choice has given him, or chance has thrown in his way? (Qui fit, Mæcenās, ut nemo, quam sibi sortem Seu ratio dederit seu fors, objecerit, illa Contentus vivat?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 1.

<sup>12</sup> If some god were to say, "Here I am! I grant your prayers forthwith. You, who were but now a soldier, shall be a trader; you, but now a lawyer, shall be a farmer. Change parts; away with you—and with you! Well! Why standing still?" They would refuse.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 15.

If all our misfortunes were laid in one common heap, whence every one must take an equal portion, most people would be content to take their own and depart.

SOCRATES. (PLUTARCH, Ad Appolonium de Consolatione.)

If, as Socrates said, All men in the world should come and bring their grievances together, of body, mind, fortune, . . . and lay them on a heap to be equally divided, wouldst thou share alike and take thy portion? or be as thou art?
Without question thou wouldst be as thou art.

1 I have learned, in whatsoever state I am,
therewith to be content.

New Testament: Philippians, iv, 11.

2 Naught's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 4.

3 The all-enclosing freehold of Content.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Guy Vernon.

4 What better fare than well content?
THOMAS TUSSEY, *Hundred Pointes of Good
Husbandrie: Posies for Thine Own Bed
Chamber*.

III—Content: The Mind Content

5 Content is wealth, the riches of the mind;
And happy he who can such riches find.
JOHN DRYDEN, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 466.

But all the pleasure that I find
Is to maintain a quiet mind.
EDWARD DYER, My Mind to Me a Kingdom Is.

6 Happy the man, of mortals happiest he,
Whose quiet mind from vain desires is free;
Whom neither hopes deceive, nor fears torment,
But lives at peace, within himself content;
In thought, or act, accountable to none
But to himself, and to the gods alone.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, Epistle to Mrs. Higgons,
l. 79.

7 A mind content both crown and kingdom is.
ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Folly.

Sweet are the thoughts that savour of content;
The quiet mind is richer than a crown;
Sweet are the nights in careless slumber spent;
The poor estate scorns fortune's angry frown:
Such sweet content, such minds, such sleep, such
bliss,

Beggars enjoy, when princes oft do miss.
ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Folly.

8 That best of blessings, a contented mind.
(Æquum animum.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 112.

9 It is great riches to a man to live sparingly with a quiet mind. (Divitiæ grandes homini sunt, vivere parce æquo animo.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1117.
Yet truest riches, would mankind their breasts
Bend to the precept, in a little lie,
With mind well-poised; here want can never come.

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1140.
(Watson, tr.)

10 If you have a contented mind, you have enough to enjoy life with. (Si est animus æquos tibi, sat habes qui bene vitam colas.)
PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 187. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

11 The noblest mind the best contentment has.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 35.

12 This, this is all my choice, my cheer,—
A mind content, a conscience clear.
JOSHUA SYLVESTER, A Contented Mind.

13 A flower more sacred than far-seen success
Perfumes my solitary path; I find
Sweet compensation in my humbleness,
And reap the harvest of a quiet mind.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Twoscore and Ten. St. 28.

14 When all is done and said,
In the end this shall you find:
He most of all doth bathe in bliss
That hath a quiet mind.
THOMAS VAUX, Of a Contented Mind.

IV—Content: Better than Riches

15 To others let the glittering baubles fall,
Content shall place us far above them all.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 193.

16 Flee grandeur; beneath a humble roof you may, by your life, excel kings and the friends of kings. (Fuge magna: licet sub paupere tecto Reges et regum vita præcurrere amicos.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 32.

In a cottage I live, and the cot of content,
Where a few little rooms for ambition too low,
Are furnish'd as plain as a patriarch's tent,
With all for convenience, but nothing for
show:

Like Robinson Crusoe's, both peaceful and pleasant,
By industry stor'd, like the hive of a bee;
And the peer who looks down with contempt on
a peasant,
Can ne'er be look'd up to with envy by me.
JOHN COLLINS, Scripscrapologia: How to Be Happy.

17 I have mental joys and mental health,
Mental friends and mental wealth,
I've a wife that I love and that loves me;
I've all but riches bodily.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Mammon.

18 For who did ever yet, in honour, wealth,
Or pleasure of the sense, contentment find?
JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. xxx, st. 50.
And his best riches, ignorance of wealth.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 61.
The greatest wealth is contentment with little.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs. (1659)

19 He who is content can never be ruined.
LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 44.

20 Content surpasses wealth. (Contentement passe richesse.)
MOLIÈRE, Médecin Malgré Lui. Act ii, sc. 1,
l. 65.

1 He who is contented with his lot has the greatest and surest riches. (Qui suis rebus contentus est, huic maximæ ac certissimæ divitiæ.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 617.

2 This is the charm, by sages often told,
Converting all it touches into gold:
Content can soothe, where'er by fortune placed,
Can rear a garden in the desert waste.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Clifton Grove, l. 130.

3 What though, from fortune's lavish bounty,
No mighty treasures we possess;
We'll find, within our pittance, plenty,
And be content without excess.
UNKNOWN, Winifreda. Claimed for Gilbert Cooper. (PERCY, Reliques. Bk. iii, No. 13.)

V—Content With Little

4 But if I'm content with a little,
Enough is as good as a feast.
ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act iii, sc. 1. See also under MODERATION.

Contented wi' little, and cantie wi' mair.
BURNS, Contented wi' Little.

5 What happiness the rural maid attends,
In cheerful labour while each day she spends!
She gratefully receives what Heav'n has sent,
And, rich in poverty, enjoys content.
JOHN GAY, Rural Sports. Canto ii, l. 148.

6 May the proud chariot never be my fate,
If purchas'd at so mean, so dear a rate:
Or rather give me sweet content on foot,
Wrapt in my virtue and a good surtout!
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 589.

7 Nature with little is content.
HERRICK, No Want Where There's Little.

Who with a little cannot be content,
Endures an everlasting punishment.
HERRICK, Poverty and Riches.

8 Content with little, I can piddle here
On brocoli and mutton round the year.
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 137. (Pope, tr.)

9 Contented if he might enjoy
The things which others understand.
WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph. St. 14.

VI—Content: Its Virtues

10 From labour health, from health contentment springs;
Contentment opes the source of every joy.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, st. 13.

11 Hope not sunshine every hour,

Fear not clouds will always lour.
Happiness is but a name,
Make content and ease thy aim.

BURNS, Lines Written in Friars Carse Hermitage. See also COMPENSATION: SUN AND RAIN.

12 Let me be deft and debonair,
I am content, I do not care!
JOHN BYROM, Careless Content.
With more of thanks and less of thought,
I strive to make my matters meet;
To seek what ancient sages sought,
Physic and food in sour and sweet,
To take what passes in good part,
And keep the hiccups from the heart.

JOHN BYROM, Careless Content.

13 How calm and quiet a delight
Is it, alone,
To read and meditate and write,
By none offended, and offending none!
To walk, ride, sit, or sleep at one's own ease;
And, pleasing a man's self, none other to displease.

CHARLES COTTON, The Retirement.

14 Whatever comes, let's be content withall:
Among God's blessings there is no one small.
ROBERT HERRICK, Welcome What Comes.

15 Contented with your lot, you will live wisely.
(Lætus sorte tua vives sapienter.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. x, l. 44.

16 Sense of pleasure we may well
Spare out of life, perhaps, and not repine
But live content, which is the calmest life.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 459.

17 Contentment furnishes constant joy. Much covetousness, constant grief. To the contented even poverty is joy. To the discontented, even wealth is a vexation.

UNKNOWN, Ming-hsin pao-chien. (William Milne, tr., in the Indo-Chinese Gleaner, Aug., 1818.)

18 No eye to watch and no tongue to wound us,
All earth forgot, and all heaven around us.
THOMAS MOORE, Come o'er the Sea.

19 Every man should remain within his own sphere. (Intra fortunam debet quisque manere suam.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. iv, l. 25.

Be content with what you are, and wish no change; nor dread your last day, nor long for it.
(Quod sis esse velis nihilque malis; Summum nec metuas diem nec optes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 47.

Enjoy the present hour, be thankful for the
past,
And neither fear nor wish th' approaches of the last.

MARTIAL, Epigrams, x, 47. (Cowley, tr.)

1 I earn that I eat, get that I wear, owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good, content with my harm.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 77.

2 For mine own part, I could be well content To entertain the lag-end of my life With quiet hours.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, Act v, sc. 1, l. 23.

'Tis better to be lowly born, And range with humble livers in content, Than to be perk'd up in a glistening grief, And wear a golden sorrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 19.

3 My soul hath her content so absolute, That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 193.

Shut up In measureless content.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 17.

4 Then be content, poor heart! God's plans, like lilies pure and white, unfold:

We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart— Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.

MARY LOUISE RILEY SMITH, Sometime.

5 For not that which men covet most is best, Nor that thing worst which men do most refuse:

But fittest is, that all contented rest With that they hold: each hath his fortune in his breast.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto ix, st. 29.

6 No chance is evil to him that is content.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living: Of Contentedness.

7 For what men call content, And also that something may be sent To be contented with, I ask of fate.

I—Conversation: Definitions

8 Method is not less requisite in ordinary conversation than in writing, provided a man would talk to make himself understood.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 476.

9 Debate is masculine; conversation is feminine.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Concord Days: May.

Many can argue, not many converse.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Concord Days: May.

10 The wisdom of Conversation ought not to be over much affected, but much less despised; for it hath not only an honour in itself, but an influence also in business and government.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 3.

11 It is not easy to say how far an affable and courteous manner in conversation may go toward winning the affections. (Tamen difficile dictu est, quantopere conciliet animos comitas affabilitasque sermonis.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 14, sec. 48.

12 Conversation, in its better part, May be esteem'd a gift and not an art, Yet much depends, as in the tiller's toil, On culture, and the sowing of the soil. Words learn'd by rote a parrot may rehearse, But talking is not always to converse; Not more distinct from harmony divine The constant creaking of a country sign.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 3.

And finds a changing clime an happy source Of wise reflection and well-timed discourse.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 387.

13 Conversation is an art in which a man has all mankind for his competitors, for it is that which all are practising every day while they live.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Conversation is a game of circles.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

In good conversation parties don't speak to the words, but to the meanings of each other.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

The conversation of men is a mixture of regrets and apprehensions.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: The Tragic.

14 Wise, cultivated, genial conversation is the last flower of civilization. . . . Conversation is our account of ourselves.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: Woman.

Conversation is the vent of character as well as of thought.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs.

Conversation is the laboratory and workshop of the student.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs.

15 Men of great conversational powers almost universally practise a sort of lively sophistry and exaggeration which deceives for the moment both themselves and their auditors.

MACAULAY, Essays: On the Athenian Orators.

<sup>1</sup> Silence and modesty are very valuable qualities in the art of conversation. (Le silence et la modestie sont qualités très commodes à la conversation.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25.

II—Conversation: Apothegms

JOSEPH ADDISON, when a lady complained that he took little part in conversation. (BOSWELL, Johnson, 1773.)

Tom Birch is as brisk as a bee in conversation; but no sooner does he take a pen in hand, than it becomes a torpedo to him, and benumbs all his faculties.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1743.)

<sup>3</sup> Their discourses are as the stars, which give little light, because they are so high.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

<sup>4</sup> A sort of chit-chat, or small talk, which is the general run of conversation . . . in most mixed companies.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 June, 1791.

The hare-brained chatter of irresponsible frivolity.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, at Guildhall, London, 9 Nov., 1878.

But they couldn't chat together—they had not been introduced.

W. S. GILBERT, Etiquette.

The meaning doesn't matter if it's only idle chatter of a transcendental kind.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act i.

To stuff his conversation full of quibble and of quiddity.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act ii.

COWPER, Hope, l. 103.

Silence propagates itself, and the longer talk has been suspended, the more difficult it is to find anything to say.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 84.

<sup>6</sup> He that converses not, knows nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2070.

Knowledge makes the gentleman, but 'tis conversation that completes him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3136.

<sup>7</sup> Inject a few raisins of conversation into the tasteless dough of existence.

O. HENRY, Complete Life of John Hopkins.

<sup>8</sup> His conversation does not show the minute hand; but he strikes the hour very correctly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (KEARSLEY, Johnsoniana, p. 604.)

<sup>9</sup> Conversation seems to always tire me.

GEORGE W. LEDERER, I'm Tired. (1901)

<sup>10</sup> His discourse sounds big, but means nothing.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: An Affectate Traveller.

OVID, Ars Amatoria, l. 607.

Fly not conversation, nor let your door be closed. (Nec fuge conloquium, nec sit tibi janua clausa.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 587.

<sup>12</sup> I converse only with myself and my books. (Mecum tantum et cum libellis loquor.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 9.

<sup>13</sup> They converse as those would who know that God hears. (Ita fabulantur, ut qui sciant dominum audire.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 39, sec. 18.

III—Conversation: Admonitions

<sup>14</sup> Discourse may want an animated "No"

To brush the surface, and to make it flow;

But still remember, if you mean to please,

To press your point with modesty and ease.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 101.

But conversation, choose what theme we may, And chiefly when religion leads the way, Should flow, like waters after summer showers, Not as if raised by mere mechanic powers.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 703.

<sup>15</sup> You may talk of all subjects save one, namely, your maladies.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

There is one topic peremptorily forbidden to all rational mortals, namely, their distempers. If you have not slept, or if you have slept, or if you have headache, or sciatica, or leprosy, or thunder-stroke, I beseech you, by all angels, to hold your peace, and not pollute the morning by corruption and groans.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

Never name sickness; and, above all, beware of unmuzzling the valetudinarian.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

<sup>16</sup> If thou hast a mind to get esteem in company, have the art to edge about, till thou canst get into a subject thou hast studied and art master of.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam, i, 59.

Make not thy own person, family, relations or affairs the frequent subject of thy tattle. Say not, My manner and custom is to do thus. I neither eat nor drink in a morning. I am apt to be troubled with corns. My child said such a witty thing last night.

FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam, i, 195.

<sup>1</sup>
I never, with important air,
In conversation overbear. . . .
My tongue within my lips I rein;
For who talks much must talk in vain.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Pt. i, Introduction, l. 53.

<sup>2</sup>
In thy discourse, if thou desire to please:
All such is courteous, useful, new, or witty:
Usefulness comes by labour, wit by ease;
Courtesy grows in court; news in the city.
Get a good stock of these, then draw the card;

That suits him best, of whom thy speech is heard.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 49.

In conversation boldness now bears sway;
But know, that nothing can so foolish be
As empty boldness.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 35.

<sup>3</sup>
And when you stick on conversation's burrs,
Don't strew your pathway with those dreadful urs.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 414.

<sup>4</sup>
Let all thy converse be sincere.

THOMAS KEN, Morning Hymn.

<sup>5</sup>
Be humble and gentle in your conversation;
and of few words, I charge you; but always pertinent when you speak.

WILLIAM PENN, Letters to His Wife and Children.

<sup>6</sup>
Would you both please and be instructed too,
Watch well the rage of shining to subdue;
Hear every man upon his favourite theme,
And ever be more knowing than you seem.

BENJAMIN STILLINGFLEET, Essay on Conversation.

<sup>7</sup>
Equality is the life of conversation; and he is as much out who assumes to himself any part above another, as he who considers himself below the rest of the society.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 225.

Conversation is but carving;
Carve for all, yourself is starving;
Give no more to every guest,
Than he's able to digest;
Give him always of the prime;
And but little at a time.
Carve to all but just enough:
Let them neither starve nor stuff:
And, that you may have your due,
Let your neighbours carve for you.

SWIFT, To a Lady, l. 124.

<sup>8</sup>
A dearth of words a woman need not fear,
But 'tis a task indeed to learn—to hear:
In that the skill of conversation lies;
That shows, or makes, you both polite and
wise.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 57.

IV—Conversation: Its Pleasures

<sup>9</sup>
The delights of a pleasant and improving conversation. (Laxantes jucundis honestisque sermonum.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xviii, ch. 2.

"Let me not live," saith Aretine's Antonia,
"if I had not rather hear thy discourse than see a play."

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. 1, mem. 1, subs. 1.

<sup>11</sup>
Nor wanted sweet discourse, the banquet of
the mind.

DRYDEN, Flower and the Leaf, l. 432. (1700)

Discourse, the sweeter banquet of the mind.

<sup>12</sup>
The best of life is conversation.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

<sup>13</sup>
With thee conversing I forget the way.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 480.

With thee conversing I forget all time.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 639.

<sup>14</sup>
A single conversation across the table with a wise man is better than ten years' study of books.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Ch. vii. Quoted from the Chinese.

<sup>15</sup>
We took sweet counsel together.

Old Testament: Psalms, lv, 14.

<sup>16</sup>
Your fair discourse hath been as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 6.

A kind Of excellent dumb discourse.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 38.

<sup>17</sup>
Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 145.

<sup>18</sup>
One of the greatest pleasures in life is conversation.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: Female Education.

<sup>19</sup>
He has occasional flashes of silence, that make his conversation perfectly delightful.

SYDNEY SMITH, speaking of Macaulay. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, i, 363.)

He speaketh not; and yet there lies
A conversation in his eyes.

LONGFELLOW, The Hanging of the Crane. Sec. 3.

That silence is one of the great arts of conversation is allowed by Cicero himself, who says that there is not only an art, but even an eloquence in it.

HANNAH MORE, Thoughts on Conversation.

<sup>20</sup>
The world is best enjoyed and most immediately while we converse blessedly and wisely with men.

THOMAS TRAEHERNE, Centuries of Meditations.

CONVICTION, see Belief COOKS AND COOKING

I—Cooks

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. Quoting "a man of wit," who was asked what was his errand in the city.

<sup>2</sup> A cook is known by his knife.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 50.

Cooks are not to be taught in their own kitchen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1160.

<sup>3</sup> Many excellent cooks are spoiled by going into the arts.

<sup>4</sup> Too many cooks spoil the broth.

SIR BALTHAZAR GERBIER, Discourse of Building. (1662)

The more cooks the worse broth.

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4657. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Every cook commends his own sauce.

SIR BALTHAZAR GERBIER, Counsel. (1664)

<sup>6</sup> Pure Cinna gets his wife a maiden cook
With red cheeks, yellow locks, and cheerful
look;

What might he mean thereby? I hold my life,
She dresseth flesh for him, not for his wife.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of Cinna. (Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 285.)

<sup>7</sup> 'Tis by his cleanliness a cook must please.

WILLIAM KING, Art of Cookery, l. 603.

<sup>8</sup> Digestion, much like Love and Wine, no
trifling will brook:

His cook once spoiled the dinner of an Emperor of men;

The dinner spoiled the temper of his Majesty, and then

The Emperor made history—and no one blamed the cook.

F. J. MACBEATH, Cause and Effect.

<sup>9</sup> I seem to you cruel and gluttonous, when I beat my cook for sending up a bad dinner.
If that appears to you too trifling a cause, say for what cause you would have a cook flogged?

II—Cooks: The Devil Sends Cooks

<sup>18</sup> God sends meat and the devil sends cooks.

THOMAS DELONEY, Works, p. 221 (1600);
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Works, ii,
85. (1630)

Bad commentators spoil the best of books,
So God sends meat, (they say,) the devil cooks.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1735.

Heaven sends us good meat, but the Devil sends cooks.

DAVID GARRICK, Epigram on Goldsmith's Retaliation.

<sup>1</sup>
The most disagreeable thing at sea is the cookery; for there is not, properly speaking, any professed cook on board. The worst sailor is generally chosen for that purpose. Hence comes the proverb, used among the English sailors, that "God sends meat, and the devil sends cooks."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Precautions to be Used by Those Who are About to Undertake a Sea Voyage.

I must here observe that this double baked bread was originally the real biscuit prepared to keep at sea; for the word biscuit, in French, signifies twice baked.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Precautions to be Used by Those Who are About to Undertake a Sea Voyage.

<sup>2</sup>
The waste of many good materials, the vexation that frequently attends such mismanagements, and the curses not unfrequently bestowed on cooks with the usual reflexion, that whereas God sends good meat, the devil sends cooks.

EDWARD SMITH, The Compleat Housewife. (1727)

<sup>3</sup>
Great pity were it if this beneficence of Providence should be marr'd in the ordering, so as to justly merit the reflection of the old proverb, that though God sends us meat, yet the Devil does cooks.

UNKNOWN, Cooks' and Confectioners' Dictionary. (1724)

<sup>10</sup>
I doubt whether English cookery, for the very reason that it is so gross, is not better for man's moral and spiritual nature than French. In the former case, you know that you are gratifying your animal needs and propensities, and are duly ashamed of it; but, in dealing with these French delicacies, you delude yourself into the idea that you are cultivating your taste while filling your belly.

COOPER, JAMES FENIMORE

<sup>16</sup>
He has drawn you one character, though, that is new,

One wildflower he's plucked that is wet with
the dew
Of this fresh Western world, and, the thing
not to mince,
He has done naught but copy it ill ever since; . . .
All his other men-figures are clothes upon sticks,
The dernière chemise of a man in a fix, . . .
And the women he draws from one model
don't vary,
All sappy as maples and flat as a prairie.
When a character's wanted, he goes to the task
As a cooper would do in composing a cask;
He picks out the staves, of their qualities
heedful,
Just hoops them together as tight as is needful,
And, if the best fortune should crown the attempt, he
Has made at the most something wooden and empty.

Or light or dark, or short or tall,

I assisted at the birth of that most significant word "flirtation," which dropped from the most beautiful mouth in the world, and which has since received the sanction of our most accurate Laureate in one of his comedies. . . .
Flirtation is short of coquetry, and indicates only the first hints of approximation.

CLÉMENT MAROT, A Love-Lesson. (Leigh Hunt, tr.)

6 Coquetry whets the appetite; flirtation depraves it. Coquetry is the thorn that guards the rose—easily trimmed off when once plucked. Flirtation is like the slime on water-plants, making them hard to handle, and when caught, only to be cherished in slimy waters.

CORPORATIONS

<sup>2</sup> Corporations cannot commit treason, nor be outlawed, nor excommunicated, for they have no souls.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Case of Sutton's Hospital, 1612. (5 Rep. 303; 10 Rep. 32 b)

Lord Coke gravely informs us that corporations cannot be excommunicated, because they have no souls, and they appear to be as destitute of every feeling as if they had also no bowels. . . . There is in truth but one point through which they are vulnerable, and that is the keyhole of the cash box.

GROTIUS, De Jure Belli et Pacis. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

<sup>3</sup> They feel neither shame, remorse, gratitude, nor goodwill.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk. Essay 27. Referring to corporations.

<sup>4</sup> When it is said that a corporation is immortal, we are to understand nothing more than that it is capable of an indefinite duration.

STEWART KYN, On Corporations, p. 17.

<sup>5</sup> I see in the near future a crisis approaching that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned, and an era of corruption in high places will follow. . . . I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of war.

Attributed to ABRAHAM LINCOLN, but not found in his works and probably apocryphal.

<sup>6</sup> As touching corporations, that they were invisible, immortal, and that they had no soul, therefore no subpoena lieth against them, because they have no conscience or soul.

SIR ROGER MANWOOD, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, 1592. (Dict. National Biography.)

<sup>7</sup> The biggest corporation, like the humblest private citizen, must be held to strict compliance with the will of the people.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Cincinnati, 1902.

<sup>8</sup> Did you expect a corporation to have a conscience, when it has no soul to be damned and no body to be kicked?

EDWARD THURLOW. (SAMUEL WILBERFORCE, Life of Thurlow. Vol. ii, Appendix.)

Why, you never expected justice from a company, did you? they have neither a soul to lose nor a body to kick.

SYDNEY SMITH, quoting Thurlow. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 331, ch. 11.)

<sup>9</sup> A corporation cannot blush. It is a body, it is true; has certainly a head—a new one every year; arms it has and very long ones, for it can reach at anything; . . . a throat to swallow the rights of the community, and a stomach to digest them! But who ever yet discovered, in the anatomy of any corporation, either bowels or a heart?

HOWEL WALSH, Speech, at the Tralee assizes. (WILLIAM HONE, Table Book.)

CORRUPTION

<sup>10</sup> Corruption is a tree, whose branches are Of an unmeasurable length: they spread Ev'rywhere.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act iii, sc. 3.

<sup>11</sup> The Interpreter has them first into a room where was a man who could look no way but downwards, with a muck-rake in his hand. . . . The man did neither look up nor regard, but raked to himself the straws, the small sticks, and dust of the floor.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress, ii. This was the theme of President Roosevelt's speech at the dinner of the Gridiron Club in Washington, 17 March, 1906. Hence "muck-raker."

The men with the muck-rake are often indispensable to the well-being of society, but only if they know when to stop raking the muck.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Address, Washington, 14 April, 1906. At laying of cornerstone of House office building.

<sup>12</sup> Corrupt influence, which is in itself the perennial spring of all prodigality, and of all disorder.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.

<sup>13</sup> Corruption, the most infallible symptom of constitutional liberty.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall. Ch. 21.

<sup>14</sup> At length corruption, like a general flood, (So long by watchful ministers withstood,) Shall deluge all; and avarice, creeping on, Spread like a low-born mist, and blot the sun.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 135.

<sup>15</sup> So true is that old saying, Corruptio optima pessima. (The best things corrupted become the worst.)

SAMUEL PURCHAS, Pilgrims: To the Reader: Of Religion. (1625) The "old saying may be found in St. THOMAS AQUINAS, Prim. Soc., i, 5.

The opposite of the best must be the worst. (Κάκιστον τὸ ἐναντίον τῷ βελτίστῳ.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, ch. 10, sec. 3.

'Tis the most certain sign, the world's accurst
That the best things corrupted are the worst.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Progress of Learning.

I know, when they prove bad, they are a sort of the vilest creatures: yet still the same reason gives it: for, Optima, corrupta, pessima: the best things corrupted become the worst.

DEMOCRITUS, Ethica. Frag. 168.

I am not born for any one corner of the universe; the whole world is my country. (Non sum uni angulo natus; patria mea totus hic mundus est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis xxviii, 5.
The whole world is a man's birthplace.
STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. viii, l. 320.

<sup>2</sup> Anchorite, who didst dwell
With all the world for cell!
FRANCIS THOMPSON, To the Dead Cardinal of Westminster. St. 5.

<sup>3</sup> O gentle hands that soothed the soldier's brow
And knew no service save of Christ's the Lord!
Thy country now is all humanity.
G. E. WOODBERRY, Edith Cavell.

COUNTRY, THE

For "Our Country" see Patriotism; for individual countries, see their names.

I—Country: Its Attractions

<sup>4</sup> The country for a wounded heart.
A. C. BENSON, College Window, p. 107. Quoted as an old proverb.

<sup>5</sup> And country life I praise,
And lead, because I find
The philosophic mind
Can take no middle ways.
ROBERT BRIDGES, Spring. Ode i, st. 7.

<sup>6</sup> No one knows the countryside,
Deep and green and sweetly wide,
Until he loves it as a woman,
Something warm and dear and human.
STRUTHERS BURT, No One Knows the Countryside.

<sup>7</sup> Nor rural sights alone, but rural sounds
Exhilarate the spirit, and restore
The tone of languid nature.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 181.

God made the country, and man made the town.
What wonder then that health and virtue, gifts
That can alone make sweet the bitter draught
That life holds out to all, should most abound
And least be threaten'd in the fields and groves?
COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 749.
See also under CITIES.

<sup>8</sup> How blessed is he who leads a country life, Unvexed with anxious cares, and void of
strife!
Who, studying peace, and shunning civil rage,

Enjoyed his youth, and now enjoys his age:
All who deserve his love he makes his own;
And, to be loved himself, needs only to be known.

DRYDEN, To John Dryden of Chesterton, l. 1.
<sup>9</sup> A land flowing with milk and honey.
Old Testament: Exodus, iii, 8; Jeremiah, xxxii, 22.

<sup>10</sup> A country man may be as warm in kersey as a king in velvet.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 55.

<sup>11</sup> To one who has been long in city pent,
'Tis very sweet to look into the fair
And open face of heaven,—to breathe a prayer
Full in the smile of the blue firmament.
KEATS, Sonnet.

<sup>12</sup> The country is lyric,—the town dramatic.
When mingled, they make the most perfect musical drama.
LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 13.

<sup>13</sup> Country in town. (Rus in urbe.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 57, l. 21.

<sup>14</sup> Before green apples blush,
Before green nuts embrown,
Why, one day in the country
Is worth a month in town.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Summer.

<sup>15</sup> Happy is he who knows the country divinities!
(Fortunatus et ille, deos qui novit agrestis.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 493.

II—Country: Its Faults

<sup>16</sup> He likes the country, but in truth must own,
Most likes it when he studies it in town.
COWPER, Retirement, l. 573.

<sup>17</sup> I hate the country's dirt and manners, yet
I love the silence; I embrace the wit.
WILLIAM HABBINGTON, To My Noblest Friend,
I. C., Esquire.

<sup>18</sup> There is nothing good to be had in the country, or, if there be, they will not let you have it.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures: Mr. Wordsworth's "Excursion".

All country people hate each other. They have so little comfort that they envy their neighbours
the smallest pleasure or advantage.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round-Table. Vol. ii, p.
116.

<sup>19</sup> My living in Yorkshire was so far out of the way, that it was actually twelve miles from a lemon.
SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol.
i, p. 262.)

You, who live fourteen miles from a market town, are become a kind of holy vegetable.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 1.

I have no relish for the country; it is a kind of healthy grave.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Miss Harcourt, 1838.

I do all I can to love the country, and endeavour to believe those poetical lies which I read in Rogers and others, on the subject; which said deviations from the truth were, by Rogers, all written in St. James's Place.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Lady Holland, 3 Jan., 1841.

The rustic has, in general, good principles, though he cannot control his animal habits; and, however loud he may snore, his face is perpetually turned toward the fountain of orthodoxy.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 1.

Anybody can be good in the country. There are no temptations there.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 19.

COURAGE

I—Courage: Definitions

I think the Romans call it Stoicism.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4.

The brave man is not he who feels no fear, For that were stupid and irrational; But he, whose noble soul its fear subdues, And bravely dares the danger nature shrinks from.

JOANNA BAILLIE, Basil. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 151.

Where true fortitude dwells, loyalty, bounty, friendship, and fidelity may be found.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 36.

The brave Love mercy, and delight to save.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Lion, Tiger and Traveller, l. 33.

Courage is that virtue which champions the cause of right. (Fortitudo, eam virtutem propugnans pro æquitate.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 62.

Quoted as a Stoic definition.

No man can be brave who thinks pain the greatest evil; nor temperate, who considers pleasure the highest good. (Fortis vero dolorem summum malum iudicans aut temperans voluptatem summum bonum statuens esse certe nullo modo potest.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 5.

Courage is generosity of the highest order, for the brave are prodigal of the most precious things.

CHARLES CALEB COLTON, Lacon.

Courage consists in equality to the problem before us.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.

A great part of courage is the courage of having done the thing before.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.

The charm of the best courages is that they are inventions, inspirations, flashes of genius.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.

Who, then, is the invincible man? He whom nothing that is outside the sphere of his moral purpose can dismay.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 21.

Courage, the highest gift, that scorns to bend To mean devices for a sordid end.

Courage—an independent spark from Heaven's bright throne,

By which the soul stands raised, triumphant, high, alone. . . .

Courage, the mighty attribute of powers above,

By which those great in war, are great in love. The spring of all brave acts is seated here, As falsehoods draw their sordid birth from fear.

FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle: Dedication.

The greatest test of courage on the earth is to bear defeat without losing heart.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Declaration of Independence.

True courage is to do without witnesses everything that one is capable of doing before all the world. (La parfaite valeur est de faire sans témoins ce qu'on serait capable de faire devant tout le monde.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 216.

To fight aloud is very brave, But gallanter, I know, Who charge within the bosom The cavalry of woe.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 16.

Courage is the most common and vulgar of the virtues.

HERMAN MELVILLE. (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 86.)

Courage conquers all things: it even gives strength to the body. (Animus tamen omnia vincit: Ille etiam vires corpus habere facit.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. vii, l. 75.

Courage is the best gift of all; courage stands before everything. It is what preserves our liberty, safety, life, and our homes and parents, our country and children. Courage comprises all things: a man with courage has every blessing.

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 646. (Act i, sc. 2.)

1 That's courage—to take hard knocks like a man when occasion calls. (Em ista virtus est, quando usust qui malum fert fortiter.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 323. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 31.

2 Courage leads starward, fear toward death.
(Virtus in astra tendit, in mortem timor.)

SENECA, Hercules Cæteus, l. 1971.

Now has my valor borne me to the stars and to the gods themselves. (Jam virtus mihi In astra et ipsos fecit ad superos iter.)

SENECA, Hercules Cæteus, l. 1943.

3 Courage is a scorner of things which inspire fear. (Fortitudo contemptrix timendorum est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, sec. 29.

You can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 114.

4 Courage, the footstool of the Virtues, upon which they stand.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Great North Road.

5 Courage in strife is common enough; even the dogs have it. But the courage which can face the ultimate defeat of a life of good will, . . . that is different, that is victory.

H. M. TOMLINSON. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 78.)

II—Courage: Apothegms

6 It is only from cold.

JEAN BAILLY, while waiting to be guillotined. (CARLYLE, French Revolution.) "Bailly, thou tremblest," someone said. "Mon ami, c'est de froid," Bailly replied.

Dick: Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say: The palsy, and not fear, provoke me.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 97.

If I tremble with cold, my enemies will say it was from fear: I will not expose myself to such reproaches.

CHARLES I, of England, as he put on two shirts the morning of his execution. (LINGARD, History of England. Vol. x, ch. 5.)

7 Courage is the thing. All goes if courage goes.

J. M. BARRIE, Rectorial Address, St. Andrew's, 3 May, 1922.

8 If not unmoved, yet undismayed.

BYRON, Heaven and Earth. Pt. i, sc. 3, l. 892.

9 And though hard be the task,
"Keep a stiff upper lip."

PHOEBE CARY, Keep a Stiff Upper Lip.

10 I prefer to strive in bravery with the bravest, rather than in wealth with the richest, or in greed with the greediest.

MARCUS CARO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. x, sec. 4.)

11 Impair my vigour!

SUSANNAH CENTILVRE, The Beau's Duel. Act i. Favorite exclamation of Sir William Mode.

12 A stout heart breaks bad luck.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 10.

13 We are not downhearted.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, Southwick, 15 Jan., 1906.

Are we downhearted? No!

An expression which came into great vogue with the British soldiers during the World War, based, probably, upon these words of Mr. Chamberlain.

14 The bad man's courage still prepares the way
For its own outwitting.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Act i, sc. 1.

15 Brave men are brave from the very first. (Les hommes valeureux le sont au premier coup.)

CORNEILLE, Le Cid. Act ii, sc. 3.

16 For who gets wealth, that puts not from the shore?

Danger hath honour; great designs, their fame;

Glory doth follow, courage goes before.

SAMUEL DANIEL, To Delia. Sonnet xxx.

17 None but the brave deserves the fair.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast. St. 1.

The brave deserve the lovely—every woman may be won.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, The Masher.

See also WOOING: FAINT HEART AND FAIR LADY.

18 Whistling to keep myself from being afraid.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act iii, sc. 1.

The schoolboy, with his satchel in his hand,
Whistling aloud to bear his courage up.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave. Pt. i, l. 58.

I am devilishly afraid, that's certain; but . . .
I'll sing, that I may seem valiant.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act ii, sc. 1.

19 Presence of mind and courage in distress,
Are more than armies to procure success.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act ii, last lines.

20 Courage scorns the death it cannot shun.

DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. ii, act iv, sc. 2.

21 What a new face courage puts on everything!

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Resources.

Have the courage not to adopt another's courage.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.

1 A man of courage never wants weapons.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 302.

Courage should have eyes as well as arms.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1188.

2 The brave are born from the brave. (Fortes creantur fortibus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 29. See also ANCESTRY: HEREDITY.

3 Perfect courage and complete cowardice are two extremes which happen rarely. (La parfaite valeur et la poltronnerie complète sont deux extrémités où l'on arrive rarement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 215.

4 One can't answer for one's courage when one has never been in danger. (On ne peut répondre de son courage quand on n'a jamais été dans le péril.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 616.

5 Courage in danger is half the battle. (Bonus animus in mala re, dimidium est mali.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 452. (Act i, sc. 5.)

Who combats bravely is not therefore brave: He dreads a death-bed like the meanest slave.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 115.

6 Courage, like cowardice, is undoubtedly contagious, but some persons are not liable to catch it.

ARCHIBALD PRENTICE, Prenticeana.

7 Who has not courage should have legs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. A proverb in all languages: Italian, "Chi non ha cuore abbia gambe"; French, "Qui n'a cœur a jambes."

8 Courage mounteth with occasion.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 82.

It is in great dangers that we see great courage.

JEAN FRANÇOIS REGNARD, Le Légataire.

9 Why, now I see there's mettle in thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 205.

10 Fortune favours the brave. (Fortis fortuna adjuvat.)

TERENCE, Phormio. Act i, sc. 4.

God helps the brave. (Dem Muthigen hilft Gott.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act i, sc. 2.

See also under BOLDNESS.

11 Bravery never goes out of fashion.

THACKERAY, The Four Georges: George II.

12 It is easier to use a gun than to show courage.

H. M. TOMLINSON, Out of Soundings, p. 79.

13 Recall your courage, and lay aside sad fear. (Revocate animos, mæstumque timorem Mitte.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 202.

14 Of small number, but their courage quick for war. (Exugui numero, sed bello vivida virtus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 754.

Courage from hearts, and not from numbers, grows.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 76.

15 We place at the top of our esteem those people who take chivalrously the heavy blows of life, who are not brave merely, but gallant.

OWEN WISTER, Reminiscence with Postscript.

III—Courage: Personal Courage

16 Unbounded courage and compassion join'd, Temp'ring each other in the victor's mind, Alternately proclaim him good and great, And make the hero and the man complete.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 219.

17 Languor is not in your heart, Weakness is not in your word, Weariness not on your brow.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Rugby Chapel, l. 193.

18 And she, whom once the semblance of a scar Appall'd, an owlet's 'larum chill'd with dread, Now views the column-scattering bay'net jar,

The falchion flash, and o'er the yet warm dead Stalks with Minerva's step where Mars might quake to tread.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 54.

Earth shakes beneath them, and heaven roars above; But nothing scares them from the course they love.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 460.

19 You cannot choose your battlefield, The gods do that for you,

But you can plant a standard Where a standard never flew.

NATHALIA CRANE, The Colors.

20 I think even lying on my bed I can still do something.

DOROTHEA LYNDE DIX, Remark, a few days before her death, 17 July, 1887.

21 The brave man seeks not popular applause, Nor, overpower'd with arms, deserts his cause;

Unsham'd, though foil'd, he does the best he can;

Force is of brutes, but honour is of man.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. iii, l. 739.

Without a sign, his sword the brave man draws,
And asks no omen but his country's cause.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xii, l. 283. (Pope, tr.)

1 In cold blood he leapt into burning Ætna.
(Ardentem frigidus Ætnam Insiluit.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 465.

Were the vault of heaven to break and fall upon him, its ruins would smite him undismayed. (Si fractus inlatur orbis, Impravidum ferient ruinæ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 3, l. 7.

Should the whole frame of nature round him break

In ruin and confusion hurled,
He, unconcerned, would hear the mighty crack,
And stand secure amidst a falling world.

HORACE, Odes, iii, 3. (Addison, tr.)

2 Once I ha' laughed at the power of Love and twice at the grip of the Grave,
And thrice I ha' patted my God on the head that men might call me brave.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tomlinson, l. 65.

3 This is another day! Are its eyes blurred
With maudlin grief for any wasted past?
A thousand thousand failures shall not daunt!
Let dust clasp dust, death, death; I am alive!

DON MARQUIS, This Is Another Day.

4 Being a man, ne'er ask the gods for life set free from grief, but ask for courage that endureth long.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 549.

5 Ran on embattled armies clad in iron,
And, weaponless himself,
Made arms ridiculous.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 129.

Rushed where the thickest fire announced most foes.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 32.

A man should stop his ears against paralysing terror, and run the race that is set before him with a single mind.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque: Æs Triplex.

Where there is a brave man there is the thickest of the fight, there the post of honor.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 2 Dec., 1839.

6 A courage mightier than the sun—
You rose and fought and, fighting, won!

ANGELA MORGAN, Know Thyself.

7 Almost every man covered with his body, when life was gone, the position which he had taken at the beginning of the conflict.

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinæ. Sec. 61.

8 He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age, doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a lion.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 13.

IV—Courage: Exhortations

9 We have hard work to do, and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle—face it; 'tis God's gift.

MALTBIE BABCOCK, Be Strong.

10 Be steadfast as a tower that doth not bend
Its stately summit to the tempest's shock.
(Sta come torre ferma, che non crolla Giammai la cima per soffiar de' venti.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto v, l. 14.

O friends, be men, and let your hearts be strong,
And let no warrior in the heat of fight
Do what may bring him shame in others' eyes;
For more of those who shrink from shame are safe

Than fall in battle, while with those who flee
Is neither glory nor reprieve from death.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 663. (Bryant, tr.)

11 No steps backward. (Vestigia nulla retrorsum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xx, l. 74.

12 Live as brave men, and oppose brave hearts to adverse fate. (Vivite fortes, Fortiaque adversis opponite pectora rebus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 135.

13 Oh, fear not in a world like this,
And thou shalt know ere long,
Know how sublime a thing it is
To suffer and be strong.

LONGFELLOW, The Light of Stars. St. 9.

14 What though the field be lost?
All is not lost; th' unconquerable will,
And study of revenge, immortal hate,
And courage never to submit or yield.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 105.

Awake, arise, or be for ever fall'n!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 330.

15 Be not afraid of every stranger;
Start not aside at every danger;
Things that seem are not the same;
Blow a blast at every flame.

GEORGE PEELE, Old Wives' Tale.

16 Courage, Father Joseph, Brisach is ours.
(Courage, Père Joseph, Brisach est à nous.)

CARDINAL RICHELIEU. Remark, to his dying colleague, Joseph du Tremblay, 1638.

17 Be strong, and quit yourselves like men.
Old Testament: I Samuel, iv, 9.

The man so bravely played the man,
He made the fiend to fly.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.

18 What's brave, what's noble,
Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 15, l. 86.

O, the blood more stirs
To rouse a lion than to start a hare!
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 197.

1 Gloucester, 'tis true that we are in great danger;

The greater therefore should our courage be.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 1.

Why, courage then! what cannot be avoided
'Twere childish weakness to lament or fear.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 4, l. 37.

2 Muster your wits: stand in your own defence;

Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 85.

Screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 60.
Often misquoted, "sticking point."

COURT AND COURTIER

I—The Court

3 For friend in court aye better is
Than penny in purse, certis.

CHAUCER, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5541. (c. 1367)

A friend in court is better than a penny in purse.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Ship of Fools, i, 70. (1509)

I shouldn't wonder—friends at court, you know.
DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 38.

It is good to have friends at court.
CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Popular Fallacies.

4 The man that has no friend at court,
Must make the laws confine his sport;
But he that has, by dint of flaws,
May make his sport confine the laws.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, The Revenge. Act ii, sc. 3.

5 Falsehood and dissimulation are certainly to be found at courts; but where are they not to be found? Cottages have them, as well as courts, only with worse manners.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 May, 1748.

Great courts are the seats of true good-breeding.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 May, 1751.

6 Far from Court, far from care. (Loin de la cour, loin de souci.)

JAMES CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 205. (1639)

7 St. Paul hath fought with beasts at Ephesus, and I at Windsor.

RICHARD CORBET, Letter to Lord Mordant, referring to "court-wits," and other antagonists at the court.

8 At court everyone for himself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

9 I have many fair promises and holy water of court.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria. Fo. 231. (1519)

There were we won with court holy water, that is, fair and flattering words.

RICHARD SHACKLOCK, De Heresibus. (1565)

10 A virtuous court a world to virtue draws.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 3.

11 The court does not make us happy; it prevents our being so anywhere else. (La Cour ne rend pas content; elle empêche qu'on ne le soit ailleurs.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. viii.

The court is like a palace built of marble, made up of very hard but very polished people.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. viii.

Who has seen the court has seen the world.
(Qui a vu le Cour, a vu du monde.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. viii.

12 Who for preferments at a court would wait,
Where every gudgeon's nibbling at the bait?
What fish of sense would on the shallow lie,
Amongst the little starving wriggling fry,
That throng and crowd each other for a taste
Of the deceitful, painted, poison'd paste;
When the wide river he behind him sees,
Where he may launch to liberty and ease?

THOMAS OTWAY, Epistle to Mr. Duke.

13 I was not born for courts or great affairs;
I pay my debts, believe, and say my prayers.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 267.

Court-virtues bear, like gems, the highest rate,
Born where Heaven's influence scarce can penetrate.

In life's low vale, the soil the virtues like,
They please as beauties, here as wonders strike.
Tho' the same sun, with all-diffusive rays,
Blush in the rose and in the diamond blaze,
We prize the stronger effort of his power,
And justly set the gem above the flower.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 141.

14 Hath not old custom made this life more sweet

Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods

More free from peril than the envious court?

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 2.

Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court,
And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 10, l. 18.

15 This is the English, not the Turkish court;
Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
But Harry Harry.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 47.

<sup>1</sup> O, happy they that never saw the court,
Nor ever knew great men but by report!
JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act v, sc. 6.

<sup>2</sup> The court affords
Much food for satire;—it abounds in lords.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 197.

II—The Courtier

<sup>3</sup> Such easy greatness, such a graceful port,
So turned and finished for the camp or court!
JOSEPH ADDISON, The Campaign.

<sup>4</sup> To laugh, to lie, to flatter to the face,
Four ways in court to win men's grace.
ROGER ASCHEAM, The Schoolmaster.

To shake with laughter ere the jest they hear,
To pour at will the counterfeited tear;
And, as their patron hints the cold or heat,
To shake in dog-days, in December sweat.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 140.

Grin when he laughs that beareth all the sway, Frown when he frowns, and groan when he is pale.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Of the Courtier's Life.

<sup>5</sup> Young courtiers be beggars in their age.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges, 20. (c. 1510)
Whoso liveth in the court shall die in the straw.
JOHN LILLY, Euphues: Euphues to Philautus,
p. 185. (1579) Quoted as a proverb.

And then do prove the proverb often told,
"A careless courtier young, a beggar old."
UNKNOWN, Uncasing of Machivils Instruction to His Son. (1613)

<sup>6</sup> Heads bow, knees bend, eyes watch around a throne,
And hands obey—our hearts are still our
own.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 127.

<sup>7</sup> Near Death he stands, that stands too near a crown.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Tragedy of Cleopatra.
Act iv, sc. 1.

The greatest favorites are in most danger of falling.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

<sup>8</sup> If you think we are worked by strings,
Like a Japanese marionette,
You don't understand these things:
It is simply Court etiquette.
W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

<sup>9</sup> Men at court think so much of their cunning that they forget other men's.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 228.

<sup>10</sup> So many men in court, and so many strangers.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>11</sup> Whoever prefers the service of princes before his duty to his Creator, will be sure, early or late, to repent in vain.

PILPAY, Fables: The Prince and His Ministers.

Lost is his God, his country, everything,
And nothing left but homage to a King!

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 523.

<sup>12</sup> Sir, I have lived a courtier all my days,
And studied men, their manners, and their ways;

And have observed this useful maxim still,
To let my betters always have their will.

POPE, January and May, l. 156.

<sup>13</sup> Lordlings and witlings not a few,
Incapable of doing aught,
Yet ill at ease with nought to do.

SCOTT, Bridal of Triermain. Canto ii, l. 618.

<sup>14</sup> There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 368.

To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 2, l. 31.

<sup>15</sup> The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 166.

A mere court butterfly,
That flutters in the pageant of a monarch.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act v, sc. 1.

<sup>16</sup> Whoso betakes him to a prince's court,
Becomes his slave, albeit of free birth.

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. No. 789.

<sup>17</sup> The two maxims of any great man at court are, always to keep his countenance, and never to keep his word.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

<sup>18</sup> At the throng'd levee bends the venal tribe:
With fair but faithless smiles each varnish'd
o'er,

Each smooth as those that mutually deceive,
And for their falsehood each despising each.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. v, l. 190.

I—Courtesy: Definitions

<sup>20</sup> Of Courtesy, it is much less

Than Courage of Heart or Holiness,
Yet in my Walks it seems to me
That the Grace of God is in Courtesy.
HILAIRE BELLOC, Courtesy.

<sup>2</sup> Politeness . . . is fictitious benevolence.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, v, 82.)

JOURBERT, Pensées. No. 120.

<sup>4</sup> Politeness is to do and say
The kindest thing in the kindest way.
LUDWIG LEWISOHN [?], Politeness.

<sup>5</sup> Now as to politeness . . . I would venture to call it benevolence in trifles.
WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM, Correspondence. Vol. i, p. 79.

Politeness has been well defined as benevolence in small things.
MACAULAY, Essays: Samuel Johnson.

<sup>6</sup> True politeness consists in being easy one's self, and in making every one about one as easy as one can.
POPE, Table-Talk.

SCHOPENHAUER, Aphorisms on the Wisdom of Life.

<sup>8</sup> Deference is the most complicate, the most indirect, and the most elegant of all compliments.
WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners, 66.

ABEL STEVENS, Life of Mme. de Staël. Ch. 4.

<sup>13</sup> To be rude to him was courtesy. (E cortesia fu in lui esser villano.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxxiii, l. 150.

<sup>14</sup> Life is short, but there is always time for courtesy.
EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Social Aims.

<sup>15</sup> Courtesy costs nothing.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Politeness costs nothing, and gains everything.
LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letters.

Cap in hand never did anyone harm. (Biretta in mano non fece mai danno.)
UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb.

<sup>16</sup> Politeness of spirit consists in thinking of things which are fastidious and in good taste. (La politesse de l'esprit consiste à penser des choses honnêtes et délicates.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 99.

<sup>17</sup> Intelligence and courtesy not always are combined;
Often in a wooden house a golden room we find.
LONGFELLOW, Art and Tact.

LOUIS XVIII of France. His best-known saying. (Fleurs Historique.)

"Punctuality," said Louis XIV, "is the politeness of kings." It is also the duty of gentlemen, and the necessity of men of business.
SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 9. The ascription to Louis XIV is an error.

Punctuality is a politeness which a man owes to his stomach.
ÉMILE GABORIAU, Other People's Money. Pt. ii, ch. 3.

<sup>19</sup> <sup>1</sup> When the king was horsed thore, Launcelot lookys he upon,

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 87.

6 Her air, her manners, all who saw admired;
Courteous though coy, and gentle, though retired.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii.

7 What boots it, thy virtue,
What profit thy parts,
While one thing thou lackest—
The art of all arts,
The only credentials,
Passport to success,
Opens castle and parlor,
Address, man, address?
EMERSON, Tact.

8 How sweet and gracious, even in common speech,

Is that fine sense which men call Courtesy!
Wholesome as air and genial as the light,
Welcome in every clime as breath of flowers,
It transmutes aliens into trusting friends,
And gives its owner passport round the globe.

JAMES T. FIELDS, Courtesy.

9 All doors open to courtesy.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 512.

Hearts, like doors, will ope with ease
To very, very little keys,
And don't forget that two of these
Are "I thank you" and "If you please."
UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme.

11 Politeness smoothes wrinkles. (La politesse aplanit les rides.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 90.

12 Courtesy,
Which oft is sooner found in lowly sheds
With smoky rafters, than in tap'stry halls,
And courts of princes.

MILTON, Comus, l. 322.

13 Hail ye small sweet courtesies of life, for smooth do ye make the road of it!

STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: The Pulse.

14 Nothing is more valuable to a man than courtesy. (Facilitate nil esse homini melius.)
TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 861. (Act v, sc. 4.)

He took a pipe and played a tune,
And bid the cow consider.
UNKNOWN, Jack Whaley. Quoted in a letter
by Lady Granville, 1836.

There was an old man and he had an old cow,
But he had no fodder to give her,
So he took up his fiddle, and played her a tune,
Consider, good cow, consider;
This isn't the time for the grass to grow;
Consider, good cow, consider.

UNKNOWN, Old Ballad. (Notes and Queries.
Sec. ii, vol. 2, p. 309.) "The tune the old cow died of."

This tune . . . "which the old cow died of," as the saying is, used to be their horror.
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet. Ch. 68.

II—Cow: Some Jingles

4
I never saw a Purple Cow,
I never hope to see one;
But I can tell you anyhow
I'd rather see than be one!
GELETT BURGESS, The Purple Cow. Appeared in The Lark, San Francisco, May, 1895,
Burgess's first published writing.
Ah, Yes! I Wrote the "Purple Cow"—
I'm Sorry, now, I Wrote it!
But I can Tell you Anyhow,
I'll Kill you if you Quote it!
GELETT BURGESS.

2 Till I 'eard a beggar squealin' out for quarter
as 'e ran,

An' I thought I knew the voice an'—it was me!
RUDYARD KIPLING, That Day.

3 Then to side with Truth is noble when we share her wretched crust,
Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and 'tis prosperous to be just;
Then it is the brave man chooses, while the coward stands aside,
Doubting in his abject spirit, till his Lord is crucified.

That bear the shapes of men, how have you run

From slaves that apes would beat!

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 4, l. 34.

So bees with smoke and doves with noisome stench

Are from their hives and houses driven away.
They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs;
Now, like to whelps, we crying run away.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 5, l. 23.

I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 202.
See also under DISCRETION.

10 A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance, too!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 127.
What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 286.

I was now a coward on instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 301.

11 Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 32.

12 Thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward!

Thou little valiant, great in villainy!

Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!

Thou Fortune's champion, that dost never fight

But when her humorous ladyship is by

To teach thee safety!

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 116.

Out, dunghill! dar'st thou brave a nobleman?

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 87.

A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4,
l. 427.

13 Art thou afeard

To be the same in thine own act and valour
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 39.

He who fears to venture as far as his heart urges and his reason permits, is a coward; he who ventures further than he intended to go, is a slave.

HEINE, Wit, Wisdom, and Pathos: Letters on the French Stage.

14 He was a coward to the strong:

He was a tyrant to the weak.

SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 254.

15 There grows

No herb of help to heal a coward heart.

SWINBURNE, Bothwell, Act ii, sc. 13.

16 It is the misfortune of worthy people that they are cowards. (Un des plus grands malheurs des honnêtes gens c'est qu'ils sont des lâches.)

VOLTAIRE. (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.)

17 For all men would be cowards if they durst.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, *A Satire
Against Mankind*, l. 157. (c. 1670)

That all men would be cowards if they dare,
Some men we know have courage to declare.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales in Verse. No. iii, l. 11.
(1812)

Many would be cowards if they had courage
enough.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

18 What easy, tame, suffering, trampled things does that little god of talking cowards make of us!

WYCHERLEY, The Plain Dealer. Act iv, sc. 1.

COWSLIP

2 Smiled like yon knot of cowslips on a cliff.
ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 523.

3 Yet soon fair Spring shall give another scene,
And yellow cowslips gild the level green.

ANN ELIZA BLEECKER, Return to Tomhanick.
And wild-scatter'd cowslips bedeck the green dale.

BURNS, The Chevalier's Lament.
4 Ilk cowslip cup shall kep a tear.
BURNS, Elegy on Capt. Matthew Henderson.

5 The nesh young cowslip bendeth with the dew.
THOMAS CHATTERTON, Ælla. (Nesh: tender.)

6 Then came the cowslip,
Like a dancer in the fair,
She spread her little mat of green,
And on it danced she.
With a fillet bound about her brow,
A fillet round her happy brow,
A golden fillet round her brow,
And rubies in her hair.

SYDNEY DOBELL, Balder: A Chanted Calendar.
7 The cowslip is a country wench.
THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

8 The first wan cowslip, wet
With tears of the first morn.
OWEN MEREDITH, Ode to a Starling.

9 Thus I set my printless feet
O'er the cowslip's velvet head,
That bends not as I tread.
MILTON, Comus: Song, l. 897.
Cowslips wan that hang the pensive head.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 147.

10 The cowslips tall her pensioners be:
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours,
In those freckles live their savours.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 10.

The freckled cowslip.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 49.

CREDIT

11 A poor man has no credit. (Nulla fides inopi.)
AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. xxiii, l. 4.

Every man's credit is proportioned to the cash which he has in his chest. (Quantum quisque sua nummorum servat in arca, Tantum habet et fidei.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 143.

12 To lose a man's credit is the greatest loss.
JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 87. (1639)

He that has lost his credit is dead to the world.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

13 Public credit means the contracting of debts which a nation never can pay.
WILLIAM COBBETT, Advice to Young Men.

14 Every innocent man has in his countenance a promise to pay, and hence credit.
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

If a good face is a letter of recommendation, a good heart is a letter of credit.
BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do With It?
Bk. ii, Ch. 11. See also under APPEARANCE.

15 Creditors are a superstitious set, great observers of set days and times.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard.

16 The only road, the sure road, to unquestioned credit and a sound financial condition is the exact and punctual fulfilment of every pecuniary obligation, public and private, according to its letter and spirit.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES, Speech, Brooklyn, 21 Dec., 1880.

17 Men pay severely who require credit.
DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit.

18 Private credit is wealth; public honour is security. The feather that adorns the royal bird supports its flight. Strip him of his plumage, and you fix him to the earth.
JUNTIUS, Letters. Letter 42.

19 Ah, take the cash and let the credit go.
OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 13. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

20 Blest paper-credit! last and best supply!
That lends corruption lighter wings to fly!
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 39.

That canker at the heart of national prosperity, the imaginary riches of paper credit.
T. L. PEACOCK, Melincourt. Ch. 26.

21 He who loses credit can lose nothing further. (Fidem qui perdit, ultra perdere nil potest.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 204.

22 So far as my coin would stretch; and where it would not, I have used my credit.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 61.

23 Once I guessed right,
And I got credit by't;

Thrice I guessed wrong,
And I kept my credit on.

SWIFT, Letter. 1710. Quoted.

1
He smote the rock of the national resources, and abundant streams of revenue gushed forth. He touched the dead corpse of public credit, and it sprang upon its feet.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Eulogy on Alexander Hamilton, 10 March, 1831.

2
A credulous man is a deceiver.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

3
There are a set of heads that can credit the relations of Mariners.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, 21.
See also under TRAVEL.

4
He would believe, since he would be believed;
Your noblest natures are most credulous.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Revenge of Bussy d'Ambois. Act iv, sc. 1.

That only disadvantage of honest hearts, credulity.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii.

5
The characteristic of the present age is craving credulity.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Oxford, 25 Nov., 1864.

To swallow and follow, whether old doctrine or new propaganda, is a weakness still dominating the human mind.

CHARLOTTE PERKINS GILMAN, Human Work.

6
A rational reaction against irrational excesses . . . readily degenerates into the rival folly of credulity.

GLADSTONE, Time and Place of Homer: Introduction.

7
Let the Jew Apella believe it. (Credat Judæus Apella.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 100.

Tell it to the Marines, see under PROVERBS.

8
Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy, and pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope; who expect that age will perform the promises of youth, and that the deficiencies of the present day will be supplied by the morrow,—attend to the history of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia.

When credulity comes from the heart it does no harm to the intellect. (La crédulité qui vient du cœur ne fait aucun mal à l'esprit.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 160.

10
The incredulous are the most credulous. They believe the miracles of Vespasian that they may not believe those of Moses. (Incrédules les plus crédules. Ils croient les miracles de Vespasien, pour ne pas croire ceux de Moïse.)

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 816.

11
A man who is always ready to believe what is told him will never do well. (Nunquam autem recte facit, qui cito credit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43.

12
Wearied from doubt to doubt to flee,
We welcome fond credulity,

Guide confident, though blind.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iii, st. 30.

13
Those old credulities to nature dear,
Shall they no longer bloom upon the stock
Of history?

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour to Italy.
No. iv.

CREEDS

See also Religion: Its Unity; Theology

14
The whole history of civilization is strewn with creeds and institutions which were invaluable at first, and deadly afterwards.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Physics and Politics, p. 74.

15
Where I may see saint, savage, sage,
Fuse their respective creeds in one,
Before the general Father's throne.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas Eve. Pt. xix.

He knew

Behind all creeds the Spirit that is One.

ANDREW LANG, Herodotus in Egypt.

16
Sapping a solemn creed with a solemn sneer.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 107.

17
My creed is, he is safe that does his best,
And death's a doom sufficient for the rest.

COWPER, Hope, l. 395.

My creed is this:

Happiness is the only good.

The place to be happy is here.

The time to be happy is now.

The way to be happy is to help make others so.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Motto, on title page of
Vol. xii, Works. (Farrell, Ed.)

I belong to the Great Church which holds the world within its starlit aisles; that claims the great and good of every race and clime; that finds with joy the grain of gold in every creed, and floods with light and love the germs of good in every soul.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Declaration, in discussion with REV. HENRY M. FIELD on Faith and Agnosticism. (FARRELL, Life. Vol. vi.)

I believe in one God and no more, and I hope for happiness beyond this life. I believe in the equality of man; and I believe that religious duties consist in doing justice, loving mercy, and in endeavoring to make our fellow-creatures happy.

THOMAS PAINE, The Age of Reason. Ch. 1.

1 The Athanasian Creed is the most splendid ecclesiastical lyric ever poured forth by the genius of man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 54.

2 The maimed form
Of calmly joyous beauty, marble-limbed, . . .
Looks mild reproach from out its opened grave

At creeds of terror.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i, l. 99.

3 As men's prayers are a disease of the will, so are their creeds a disease of the intellect.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

4 Uncursed by doubt our earliest creed we take;

We love the precepts for the teacher's sake.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 191.

5 My heart ferments not with the bigot's leaven,

All creeds I view with toleration thorough,
And have a horror of regarding heaven
As anybody's rotten borough.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 52.

Ev'n the poor Pagan's homage to the Sun
I would not harshly scorn, lest even there
I spurn'd some elements of Christian pray'r.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 212.

6 My brother kneels, so saith Kabir,
To stone and brass in heathen-wise,
But in my brother's voice I hear
My own unanswered agonies.
His God is as his fates assign,
His prayer is all the world's—and mine.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Prayer.

7 As the forehead of Man grows broader, so do his creeds;

And his gods they are shaped in his image,
and mirror his needs;

And he clothes them with thunders and beauty, he clothes them with music and fire;

Seeing not, as he bows by their altars, that he worships his own desire. . . .

For all of the creeds are false, and all of the creeds are true;

And low at the shrines where my brothers bow, there will I bow, too.

For no form of a god, and no fashion
Man has made in his desperate passion,
But is worthy some worship of mine;—

Not too hot with a gross belief,

Nor yet too cold with pride,

I will bow me down where my brothers bow,
Humble, but open eyed.

DON MARQUIS, The God-Maker, Man.

As skulls grow broader, so do faiths; as old tongues die, old gods die, too,
And only ghosts of gods and wraiths may meet the backward-gazer's view.

DON MARQUIS, At Last.

8 Shall I ask the brave soldier, who fights by my side

In the cause of mankind, if our creeds agree?

Shall I give up the friend I have valued and tried,

If he kneel not before the same altar with me?

From the heretic girl of my soul should I fly,
To seek somewhere else a more orthodox kiss?

No! perish the hearts, and the laws that try
Truth, valour, or love, by a standard like this!

THOMAS MOORE, Come Send Round the Wine.

Are we to stand examining our generals and armies as a bishop examines a candidate for holy orders; and to suffer no one to bleed for England who does not agree with you about the second of Timothy?

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 1.

9 Together kneeling, night and day,
Thou, for my sake, at Allah's shrine,
And I—at any God's for thine.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers. Sec. iv, l. 309.

At the muezzin's call for prayer,
The kneeling faithful thronged the square,
And on Pushkara's lofty height

The dark priest chanted Brahma's might.

Amid a monastery's weeds

An old Franciscan told his beads;

While to the synagogue there came

A Jew to praise Jehovah's name.

The one great God looked down and smiled

And counted each His loving child;

For Turk and Brahmin, monk and Jew

Had reached Him through the gods they knew.

HARRY ROMAINE, Ad Cælum. (Munsey's Magazine, Jan., 1895.)

10 Creeds grow so thick along the way,
Their boughs hide God; I cannot pray.

11 From the dust of creeds out-worn.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act i, l. 697.

12 Creeds for the credulous; but not for me,
I choose to keep a mind alert and free.

Not Faith but Truth I set me for a goal:
Toward that shining mark God speed thee,
Soul!

Who keeps the keys of all the creeds.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. xxiii.

2 Men have dulled their eyes with sin,
And dimmed the light of heaven with doubt,
And built their temple-walls to shut thee in,
And framed their iron creeds to shut thee out.

HENRY VAN DYKE, God of the Open Air.

3 Orthodoxy is my doxy; heterodoxy is another man's doxy.

WILLIAM WARBURTON, Bishop of Gloucester, to Lord Sandwich, c. 1770. (PRIESTLEY, Memoirs, i, 572.)

Orthodoxy is a corpse that does not know it is dead.

vi, ch. 38.

5 How pitiful are little folk—
They seem so very small;
They look at stars, and think they are Denominational.

WILLARD WATTLES, Creeds.

6 From the death of the old the new proceeds,
And the life of truth from the rot of creeds.

WHITTIER, The Preacher. St. 5.

7 The world has a thousand creeds, and never a one have I;

Nor church of my own, though a million spires are pointing the way on high.

But I float on the bosom of faith, that bears me along like a river;

And the lamp of my soul is alight with love,
for life, and the world, and the Giver.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Heresy.

So many gods, so many creeds—
So many paths that wind and wind

10 Evil deeds are done for the mere desire of occupation.

AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS, Historia. Bk. 30.

The reason of idleness and crime is the deferring of our hopes. Whilst we are waiting we beguile the time with jokes, with sleep, with eating, and with crimes.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nominalist and Realist.

11 There's not a crime
But takes its proper change out still in crime
If once rung on the counter of this world.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 870.

12 Why here you have the awfulest of crimes
For nothing! Hell broke loose on a butterfly!

A dragon born of rose-dew and the moon!
ROBERT BROWNING, Ring and the Book. Pt. iv,

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.

3 It is worse than a crime; it is a blunder—words which I record, because they have been attributed to others. (C'est plus qu'un crime; c'est une faute.)

JOSEPH FOUCHÉ, Memoirs. Fouché claimed to have originated this mot when referring to the political murder of the Duc d'Enghien by Napoleon in 1804. Sometimes quoted as "C'est pis qu'un crime," or "C'estoit pire qu'un crime." (See Notes and Queries, 14 Aug., 1915, p. 123; 28 Aug., p. 166.) Some authorities say that the expression was originated by Boulay de la Meurthe. It has also been attributed to Talleyrand.

"It is worse than a crime, it is a blunder," said Napoleon, speaking the language of the intellect.

That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unwhipp'd of justice.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 51.

If you bethink yourself of any crime
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 26.

For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,
Acts of black night, abominable deeds.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1,
l. 63.

4 They, sweet soul, that most impute a crime
Are pronest to it, and impute themselves,
Wanting the mental range.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 823.

5 Had I a hundred tongues, a hundred mouths, and a voice of iron, I could not sum up all the forms of crime. (Non mihi si linguæ centum sint oraque centum, Ferrea vox, omnis scelerum comprehendere formas.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 625.

6 Divided by interests and united by crimes.
(Divisés d'intérêts, et par les crimes unis.)

VOLTAIRE, Artémire, act i; Mérope, act i.

7 He spared his fellow-men—his blows
Fell only on their crimes.

WHITTIER, My Namesake.

CRITICISM

I—Criticism: Definitions

8 Criticism is a disinterested endeavour to learn and propagate the best that is known and thought in the world.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism. No. 1.

9 As the arts advance towards their perfection, the science of criticism advances with equal
pace.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful. Pt. i, Introduction.

10 The most noble criticism is that in which the critic is not the antagonist so much as the rival of the author.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Literary Journals.

Criticism should not be querulous and wasting,
all knife and root-puller, but guiding, instructive,
inspiring, a south wind, not an east wind.

EMERSON, Journals.

11 The good critic is he who relates the adventures of his soul among masterpieces.

ANATOLE FRANCE.

A critic is a man who expects miracles.

JAMES HUNEKER, Iconoclasts, p. 139.

A wise scepticism is the first attribute of a good critic.

LOWELL, Among My Books: Shakespeare Once More.

12 It is through criticism . . . that the race has managed to come out of the woods and lead a civilized life. The first man who objected to the general nakedness, and advised his fellows to put on clothes, was the first critic.

E. L. GODKIN, Problems of Modern Democracy.

13 Criticism is the art wherewith a critic tries to guess himself into a share of the artist's fame.

G. J. NATHAN, The House of Satan, p. 98.

There are two kinds of dramatic critics: destructive and constructive. I am a destructive. There are two kinds of guns: Krupp and pop.

G. J. NATHAN, The World in Falseface.

14 A critic is a man whose watch is five minutes ahead of other people's watches.

SAINTE-BEUVE. (GIESE, Sainte-Beuve.)

The critic is only the secretary of the public, but a secretary who does not wait to take dictation, and who divines, who decides, who expresses every morning what everybody is thinking.

SAINTE-BEUVE. (GIESE, Sainte-Beuve.)

15 Criticism . . . is a serious and public function: it shows the race assimilating the individual, dividing the immortal from the mortal part of a soul.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason, iv, 151.

16 The aim of criticism is to distinguish what is essential in the work of a writer. It is the delight of a critic to praise; but praise is scarcely a part of his duty. . . . What we ask of him is that he should find out for us more than we can find out for ourselves.

ARTHUR SYMONS, Introduction to Coleridge's Biographia Literaria.

1 Censure's to be understood,
Th' authentic mark of the elect;
The public stamp Heav'n sets on all that's great and good,
Our shallow search and judgment to direct.
SWIFT, Ode to the Athenian Society.

II—Criticism: Apothegms

2 He who discommendeth others obliquely commendeth himself.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 34.

3 Let dull critics feed upon the carcasses of plays; give me the taste and the dressing.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Feb., 1752.

4 I read Glenarvon too by Caro Lamb—
God damn!
BYRON, his comment on the novel in which Lady Caroline Lamb exposed the details of her passion for the poet.

Which not even critics criticise.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 51.

5 Criticism is easy, and art is difficult. (La critique est aisée, et l'art est difficile.)
DESTOUCHES, Le Glorieux. Act ii, sc. 5.

6 It is much easier to be critical than to be correct.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 24 Jan., 1860.

7 He wreathed the rod of criticism with roses.
ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Miscellanies of Literature.
Referring to Pierre Bayle.

Yea, though he sang not, he was unto song
A light, a benediction.
JOHN DRINKWATER, The Dead Critic.

8 Let none presume to measure the irregularities of Michael Angelo or Socrates by village scales.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato: New Readings.

9 Blame-all and praise-all are two blockheads.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

10 The Stones that Critics hurl with Harsh Intent

A Man may use to build his Monument.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 41.

11 I'll play a whetstone's part, which makes iron sharp, though unable itself to cut. (Fun-gar vice cotis, acutum Reddere quæ ferrum valet, exsors ipsa secandi.)
HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 304.

12 I find the pain of a little censure, even when it is unfounded, is more acute than the pleasure of much praise.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vii, p. 299.

The sting of a reproach is the Truth of it.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

13 Unmov'd, tho' witlings sneer and rivals rail;
Studious to please, yet not asham'd to fail.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene: Prologue.

14 Blown about with every wind of criticism.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1784.)

15 How many people have a good ear for literature but sing out of tune! (Que de gens, en littérature, ont l'oreille juste et chantent faux!)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 367.

16 Our censor absolves the crow and passes judgment on the pigeon. (Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 63.

17 Criticism of our contemporaries is not criticism; it is conversation.
•LEMAÎTRE. (BRANDER MATTHEWS, N. Y. Times,
2 April, 1922.)

18 He does ill who is hypercritical of another man's book. (Improbe facit qui in alieno libro ingeniosus est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams: Bk. i, Preface.

19 I much prefer a compliment, insincere or not, to sincere criticism. (Equidem pol vel falso tamen laudari multo malo.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 179.

20 Cavil you may, but never criticise.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 123.

21 The cant of criticism.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, The Idler, 29 Sept., 1759.

Of all the cants that are canted in this canting world, though the cant of hypocrisy may be the worst, the cant of criticism is the most torment-
ing.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 12.

22 For I am nothing, if not critical.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 120.

The carping censures of the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 68.

23 When things are as pretty as that, criticism is out of season.

R. L. STEVENSON, Some Portraits by Raeburn.

24 Men sift all secrets, in their critic sieve.

SWINBURNE, In Sepulchretis. St. 1.

1 Really to stop criticism they say one must die.

VOLTAIRE, Les Trois Empereurs en Sorbonne.

2 When critics disagree the artist is in accord with himself.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray: Preface.

III—Criticism: Its Rules

3 When I read rules of criticism, I immediately inquire after the works of the author who has written them, and by that means discover what it is he likes in a composition.

ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 115.

4 The critic in The Vicar of Wakefield lays down that you should always say that the picture would have been better if the painter had taken more pains; but in the case of the practised literary man, you should often enough say that the writings would have been much better if the writer had taken less pains.

WALTER BACEHOT, Literary Studies: Shakespeare.

You should not say it is not good. You should say you do not like it; and then, you know, you're perfectly safe.

J. MCNEILL WHISTLER. (DON SEITZ, Whistler Stories.)

5 He was in Logic, a great critic,
Profoundly skill'd in Analytic;
He could distinguish, and divide
A hair 'twixt south and south-west side.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 65.

6 Fear not to lie—'twill seem a sharper hit;
Shrink not from blasphemy—'twill pass for wit;

Care not for feeling—pass your proper jest,
And stand a critic, hated yet caress'd.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 71.

7 To disparage scenery as quite flat is of course like disparaging a swan as quite white, or an Italian sky as quite blue.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Robert Browning. Ch. 6.

8 Some to the fascination of a name
Surrender judgment hoodwink'd. Some the style

Infatuates, and through labyrinths and wilds
Of error leads them by a tune entranc'd.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 101.

9 Blame is safer than praise:

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.
Blame where you must, be candid where you can,
And be each critic the Good-natured Man.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man: Epilogue.

10 I lose my patience, and I own it too,
When works are censur'd, not as bad, but new:

While, if our elders break all reason's laws,
These fools demand not pardon, but applause.
(Indignor quicquam reprehendi, non quia crasse

Compositum illepideve putetur, sed quia nuper,

Nec veniam antiquis, sed honorem et præmia posci.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 76. (Pope, tr., l. 115.)

While an author is yet living, we estimate his powers by his worst performance; and when he is dead, we rate them by his best.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 240.

He could gauge the old books by the old set of rules,

And his very old nothings pleased very old fools;
But give him a new book, fresh out of the heart,
And you put him at sea without compass or chart.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 205.

11 He that fears his blotches may offend,
Speaks gently of the pimples of his friend;
For reciprocity exacts her dues,
And they that need excuse must needs excuse.
(Qui ne tuberibus propriis offendat amicum
Postulat, ignoscet verrucis illius: æquum est
Peccatis veniam poscentem reddere rursus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 73. (Conington, tr.)

12 When I take up the end of a web and find it pack-thread, I do not expect, by looking further,
to find embroidery.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 88.)

13 'Tis not the wholesome sharp morality,
Or modest anger of a satiric spirit,
That hurts or wounds the body of state,
But the sinister application
Of the malicious, ignorant, and base
Interpreter; who will distort and strain
The general scope and purpose of an author
To his particular and private spleen.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act v. sc. 1.

14 I hold it
In some degree blasphemous to dispraise
What's worthy admiration: yet, for once,
I will dispraise a little.

MASSINGER, Great Duke of Florence. Act iii, sc. 1.

Since we cannot equal it, let us avenge ourselves by abusing it. (Puisque nous ne le pouvons aveindre, vengeons nous à en mesdire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

15 Reviewers are forever telling authors they can't understand them. The author might often reply: Is that my fault?

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.
The lot of critics is to be remembered by what they failed to understand.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions and Opinions: Balzac.

They damn what they do not understand. (Damnant quod non intelligunt.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. x, ch. 1, sec. 26.

1
A perfect judge will read each work of wit
With the same spirit that its author writ;
Survey the whole, nor seek slight faults to find

When nature moves, and rapture warms the mind.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 33.

In every work regard the writer's end,
Since none can compass more than they intend.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 55.

Some ne'er advance a judgment of their own,
But catch the spreading notion of the town; . . .
Some judge of authors' names, not works, and then

Nor praise nor blame the writings, but the men.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 208.

Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
Just hint a fault, and hesitate dislike.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 203.

For, poems read without a name,
We justly praise, or justly blame;
And critics have no partial views,
Except they know whom they abuse.
And since you ne'er provoke their spite,
Depend upon't their judgement's right.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 129.

You don't expect me to know what to say about a play when I don't know who the author is, do you? . . . If it's by a good author, it's a good play, naturally. That stands to reason.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Epilogue.

2
We'll cry both arts and learning down,
And hey! then up go we!

FRANCIS QUARLES, Song of Anarchus.

He gives directions to the town

To cry it up or run it down.

SWIFT, On Poetry.

3
A critic must accept what is best in a poet, and thus become his best encourager.

STEDMAN, Poets of America. Ch. 6.

4
Mediocrity flattered at acknowledging mediocrity, and mistaking mystification for mastery, enters the fog of dilettantism, and, graduating connoisseur, ends its days in a bewilderment of bric-à-brac and Brummagem!

J. MCNEILL WHISTLER, The Gentle Art of Making Enemies, p. 31.

IV—Critics: Their Limitations

5
Critics!—appalled, I venture on the name,

Those cut-throat bandits in the paths of fame.

ROBERT BURNS, Third Epistle to Robert Graham.

A man must serve his time to ev'ry trade
Save censure—critics all are ready made.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 63.

7
A servile race,
Who, in mere want of fault all merit place;
Who blind obedience pay to ancient schools,
Bigots to Greece, and slaves to musty rules.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 183.

8 Reviewers are usually people who would have been poets, historians, biographers, if they could: they have tried their talents at one or the other, and have failed; therefore they turn critics.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Lectures: Shakespeare and Milton, p. 36.

9
There are some Critics so with Spleen diseased,

They scarcely come inclining to be pleased:
And sure he must have more than mortal
Skill,

Who pleases any one against his Will.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World: Epilogue.

10
You know who critics are?—the men who have failed in literature and art.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 35.

11
They who write ill, and they who ne'er durst
write,

Turn critics out of mere revenge and spite.

DRYDEN, Conquest of Granada: Prologue.

All who (like him) have writ ill plays before,
For they, like thieves, condemned, are hangmen
made,

To execute the members of their trade.

DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies: Prologue.

When Poets' plots in plays are damn'd for spite,
They critics turn and damn the rest that write.

JOHN HAYNES, Prologue: Oxford and Cambridge Miscellany Poems.

12
Just then, with a wink and a sly normal lurch,
The owl very gravely got down from his perch,

Walked round, and regarded his fault-finding
critic

(Who thought he was stuffed) with a glance analytic;

And then fairly hooted, as if he would say,
"Your learning's at fault this time, anyway;
I'm an owl; you're another. Sir Critic, good-
day!"

And the barber kept on shaving.

JAMES T. FIELDS, The Owl-Critic.

13
We do not say that a man to be a critic must necessarily be a poet; but to be a good critic, he ought not to be a bad poet.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characters of Shakespeare's Plays, p. 17.

In truth it may be laid down as an almost universal rule that good poets are bad critics.

MACAULAY, Criticisms on the Principal Italian Writers: Dante.

<sup>1</sup> What a blessed thing it is that Nature, when she invented, manufactured, and patented her authors, contrived to make critics out of the chips that were left!

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

<sup>2</sup> There is a certain race of men that either imagine it their duty, or make it their amusement, to hinder the reception of every work of learning or genius, who stand as sentinels in the avenues of fame, and value themselves upon giving Ignorance and Envy the first notice of a prey.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 3.

Critics are sentinels in the grand army of letters, stationed at the corners of newspapers and reviews, to challenge every new author.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanaugh. Ch. 13.

It is the business of reviewers to watch poets, not of poets to watch reviewers.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Poets, p. 296.

<sup>3</sup> Nature fits all her children with something to do,

He who would write and can't write, can surely review,

Can set up a small booth as critic, and sell us his

Petty conceit and his pettier jealousies.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1784.

<sup>4</sup> Every critic in the town

Runs the minor poet down;

Every critic—don't you know it?—

Is himself a minor poet.

ROBERT F. MURRAY, Critic and Poet.

Like curs, our critics haunt the poet's feast,

And feed on scraps refused by every guest;

From the old Thracian dog they learned the way

To snarl in want, and grumble o'er their prey.

WILLIAM PITT, To Mr. Spence. Zoilus, a carping critic of ancient Greece, was called the Thracian dog.

<sup>5</sup> A critic is a legless man who teaches running.

CHANNING POLLOCK, The Green Book.

<sup>6</sup> 'Tis hard to say if greater want of skill
Appear in writing or in judging ill;
But of the two less dangerous is th' offence
To tire our patience than mislead our sense:
Some few in that, but numbers err in this;
Ten censure wrong for one who writes amiss;

A fool might once himself alone expose;
Now one in verse makes many more in prose . . .

In poets as true genius is but rare,
True taste as seldom is the critic's share; . . .
Let such teach others who themselves excel,
And censure freely who have written well;
Authors are partial to their wit, 'tis true,
But are not critics to their judgment too?

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 1.

Nor in the Critic let the man be lost.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 323.

<sup>7</sup> As a bankrupt thief turns thief-taker, so an unsuccessful author turns critic.

SHELLEY, Adonais: Preface. Cancelled passage.

<sup>8</sup> A poet that fails in writing becomes often a morose critic; the weak and insipid white wine makes at length excellent vinegar.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Essays: On Writing and Books.

When in the full perfection of decay,
Turn vinegar, and come again in play.

THOMAS SACKVILLE, Address to Ned Howard.

Ill writers are usually the sharpest censors; for they (as the best Poet and the best Patron said),
When in the full perfection of decay, turn vinegar, and come again in play. Thus the corruption of a poet is the generation of a critic.

DRYDEN, Examen Poeticum: Dedication.

<sup>9</sup> I heard a whisper from a ghost who shall be nameless, "that these commentators always kept in the most distant quarters from their principals in the lower world, through a consciousness of shame and guilt, because they had so horribly misrepresented the meaning of those authors to posterity."

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Laputa.

<sup>10</sup> The trade of critic, in literature, music, and the drama, is the most degraded of all trades.

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. ii, p. 69.

<sup>11</sup> Critics are like brushers of noblemen's clothes.

SIR HENRY WOTTON. (BACON, Apothegms. No. 64.)

V—Critics: Their Power

<sup>12</sup> His "bravo" was decisive, for that sound
Hush'd "Academie" sigh'd in silent awe;
The fiddlers trembled as he look'd around,
For fear of some false note's detected flaw.
The "prima donna's" tuneless heart would bound,

Dreading the deep damnation of his "bah!"
Soprano, basso, even the contra-alto,
Wish'd him five fathom under the Rialto.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 32.

<sup>13</sup> Who shall dispute what the Reviewers say?
Their word's sufficient; and to ask a reason,

In such a state as theirs, is downright treason.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 94.

Dull, superstitious readers they deceive,
Who pin their easy faith on critic's sleeve,
And, knowing nothing, every thing believe.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 99.

Though by whim, envy, or resentment led,
They damn those authors whom they never read.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Candidate, l. 57.

<sup>1</sup> The British critics—be it to their glory,
When they abuse us, do it con amore.

A. J. H. DUGANNE, Parnassus in Pillory.

<sup>2</sup> The opinion of a great body of the reading public is very materially influenced even by the unsupported assertions of those who assume a right to criticise.

MACAULAY, Essays: Montgomery's Poems.

<sup>3</sup> He cannot 'scape their censures who delight
To misapply whatever he shall write.

MASSINGER, The Emperor of the East: Prologue.

<sup>4</sup> To check young Genius' proud career,
The slaves who now his throne invaded,
Made Criticism his prime Vizier,
And from that hour his glories faded.

THOMAS MOORE, Genius and Criticism. St. 4.

<sup>5</sup> And you, my Critics! in the chequer'd shade, Admire new light thro' holes yourselves have
made.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 125.

The generous Critic fann'd the Poet's fire,
And taught the world with reason to admire.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 100.

<sup>6</sup> It may be well said that these wretched men know not what they do. They scatter their insults and their slanders without heed as to whether the poisoned shaft lights on a heart made callous by many blows, or one, like Keats's, composed of more penetrable stuff.

SHELLEY, Adonais: Preface.

<sup>7</sup> Why should the unborn critic whet
For me his scalping-knife?

WHITTIER, My Namesake.

<sup>8</sup> From such sad readers Heaven the muse protect,

Proud to find faults and raptured with defect!
JOHN WOLCOT, Benevolent Epistle to Sylvanus Urban.

VI—Critics: Their Futility

<sup>9</sup> If in your censure you prove sweet to me,
I little care, believe 't, how sour you be.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, A Boulster Lecture: Dedication.

<sup>10</sup> There spoke up a brisk little somebody,
Critic and whippersnapper, in a rage

To set things right.

ROBERT BROWNING, Balaustion's Adventure.
Pt. i, l. 308.

The exhausted air-bell of the Critic.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve, Pt. xvi, l. 3.

11

As soon

Seek roses in December, ice in June;
Hope constancy in wind, or corn in chaff;
Believe a woman or an epitaph,
Or any other thing that's false, before
You trust in critics.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 75.

12

And still in the honest working world,
With posture and hint and smirk,
These sons of the devil are standing by
While Man does all the work.

They balk endeavor and baffle reform,
In the sacred name of law;
And over the quavering voice of Hem,
Is the droning voice of Haw.

BLISS CARMAN, Hem and Haw.

13

POSTSCRIPTUM.—And you, whom we all so adore,

Dear Critics, whose verdicts are always so
new!—

One word in your ear. There were Critics before. . . .

And the man who plants cabbages imitates, too!

AUSTIN DOBSON, Ballade of Imitation.

14

The absence of humility in critics is something wonderful.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. ii,
ch. 2.

15

No critic has ever settled anything.

JAMES HUNEKER, Pathos of Distance, p. 281.

16

It is rarely that an author is hurt by his critics.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 423.)

If an author have any least fibre of worth in him, Abuse would but tickle the organ of mirth in
him;

All the critics on earth cannot crush with their ban

One word that's in tune with the nature of man.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 452.

17

You do not publish your own verses, Lælius;
you criticise mine. Pray cease to criticise mine, or else publish your own.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, ep. 91.

18

It is impossible to think of a man of any actual force and originality . . . who spent his whole life appraising and describing the work of other men.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 87.

<sup>1</sup>
Some are bewilder'd in the maze of schools,
And some made coxcombs nature meant but fools:

In search of wit these lose their common sense,
And then turn critics in their own defence:
Each burns alike, who can or cannot write,
Or with a rival's or an eunuch's spite.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 26.

Some have at first for wits, then poets pass'd Turn'd critics next, and prov'd plain fools at last.

How shall I then begin, or where conclude,
To draw a fame so truly circular?

DRYDEN, Heroick Stanzas, Consecrated to the Memory of His Highness, Oliver, Late Protector of This Commonwealth. St. 5.

His grandeur he deriv'd from Heav'n alone,
For he was great, ere Fortune made him so;
And wars, like mists that rise against the sun,
Made him but greater seem, not greater grow.

DRYDEN, Heroick Stanzas. St. 6.

Peace was the prize of all his toil and care.

DRYDEN, Heroick Stanzas. St. 16.

His ashes in a peaceful urn shall rest;
His name a great example stands, to show
How strangely high endeavours may be blest,
Where piety and valour jointly go.

DRYDEN, Heroick Stanzas. St. 37.

Unknown to Cromwell as to me
Was Cromwell's measure or degree;
Unknown to him as to his horse,
If he than his groom be better or worse.
He works, plots, fights, in rude affairs,
With squires, lords, kings, his craft compares,
Till late he learned, through doubt and fear,
Broad England harbored not his peer.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Even the blackest of them all, the crow,
Renders good service as your man-at-arms,
Crushing the beetle in his coat of mail,
And crying havoc on the slug and snail.

LONGFELLOW, Birds of Killingworth. St. 19.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, Ch. 8.

A crown
Golden in show, is but a wreath of thorns,
Brings dangers, troubles, cares, and sleepless nights.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 458.

A crown, if it hurt us, is hardly worth wearing.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Large Party.

10
They do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 25.

11
The royal crown cures not the headache.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

12
A crown! what is it?
It is to bear the miseries of a people!
To hear their murmurs, feel their discontents,
And sink beneath a load of splendid care!
HANNAH MORE, Daniel. Pt. vi.

So hard is height, so cruel is a crown.
STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Ulysses. Act iii, sc. 2.

13
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 31.

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?
O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide,
To many a watchful night! sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet
As he whose brow with homely biggen bound Snores out the watch of night. O Majesty!
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scalds with safety.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 21.

14
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 29.

15
Upon my head they placed a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 61.

For within the hollow crown
That rounds the mortal temples of a king
Keeps Death his court and there the antic sits,
Scoffing his state and grinning at his pomp, . . .
Comes at the last and with a little pin
Bores through his castle wall, and farewell king!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 160.

16
A crown and justice? Night and day
Shall first be yoked together.
SWINBURNE, Marino Faliero. Act iii, sc. 1.

17
Hail to the crown by Freedom shaped—to gird
An English Sovereign's brow.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vi, l. 1.

18
Woe to the Crown that doth the Cowl obey!
WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. i, No. 29.

CRUELTY

You must be most miserable To be so cruel.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 781.

- 1
A man of cruelty is God's enemy.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 303.
- 2
Weak men are apt to be cruel because they stick at nothing that may repair the ill effect of their mistakes.
LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 235.
- 3
Cruelty ever proceeds from a vile mind, and often from a cowardly heart.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso: Bk. xxxvi, Notes.

- 6
Cruelty is a tyrant that's always attended with fear.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1213.
- 7
Cruelty was the vice of the ancient, vanity is that of the modern, world.
GEORGE MOORE, Mummer-Worship.
- 8
Each snivelling hero seas of blood can spill,
When wrongs provoke and honour bids him kill;—
Give me your through-paced rogue, who scorns to be Prompted by poor revenge, or injury,
But does it of true inbred cruelty.
JOHN OLDHAM, On the Jesuits.
- 9
Clemency is the remedy of cruelty. (Atrocitatis mansuetudo est remedium.)
PÆDRUS, Fables.
- 10
Let me be cruel, not unnatural.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 413.
- 10
I must be cruel, only to be kind.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 178.
- 10
It is cruelty to be humane to rebels, and humanity to be cruel. (Contre les rebelles c'est cruauté que d'être humain, et humanité d'être cruel.)
BISHOP CORNELLE MUIS, Sermon. (FOURNIER, L'Esprit dans l'Histoire.) This sentence was quoted by Catherine de Medicis, to quiet the scruples of her son, Charles IX, against the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

- 11
'T is a cruelty To load a falling man.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 3, l. 76.
Oh, 'tis cruelty to beat a cripple with his own crutches.
THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: Of Jestings.

- 12
Come, you spirits . . .
And fill me from the crown to the toe, top-full
Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood;
Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers!
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 41.
- 13
I would find grievous ways to have thee slain,
Intense device, and superflux of pain.
SWINBURNE, Anactoria, l. 27.
- 14
As ruthless as a baby with a worm,
As cruel as a school-boy.
TENNYSON, Walking to the Mail, l. 98.
- 15
Your cruelty is our glory. (Crudelitas vestra gloria est nostra.)
TERTULLIAN, Ad Scapulam. Sec. 4.

CUCKOO

- 16
The tell-tale cuckoo: spring's his confidant,
And he lets out her April purposes.
ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. i, l. 355.
- 17
The Attic warbler pours her throat
Responsive to the cuckoo's note.
THOMAS GRAY, Ode on the Spring, l. 5.
- 18
It came, and with a strange, sweet cry,
A friend, but from a far-off land;
We stood and listened, hand in hand,
And heart to heart, my Love and I.
F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, The Cuckoo.
- 19
Sweet bird! thy bower is ever green,
Thy sky is ever clear;
Thou hast no sorrow in thy song,
No Winter in thy year!
O could I fly, I'd fly with thee!
We'd make, with joyful wing,
Our annual visit o'er the globe,
Companions of the Spring.
JOHN LOGAN, To the Cuckoo. Attributed also to Michael Bruce. (See Notes and Queries, April, 1902, p. 309; June 14, 1902, p. 469.)

<sup>1</sup> The bird of passage known to us as the cuckoo.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xviii, sec. 249.

<sup>2</sup> The cuckoo builds not for himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 28.

<sup>3</sup> And being fed by us you used us so
As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird,
Useth the sparrow.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 59.

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it had it head bit off by it young.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 235.

<sup>4</sup> The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo!

Cuckoo! Cuckoo! O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 908.

<sup>6</sup> And sweet to hear the cuckoo mock the spring
While the last violet loiters by the well.

OSCAR WILDE, The Burden of Itys. St. 10.

<sup>7</sup> O blithe new-comer! I have heard,
I hear thee and rejoice.
O Cuckoo! Shall I call thee bird,
Or but a wandering voice?

WORDSWORTH, To the Cuckoo.

<sup>8</sup> Sumer is icumen in,
Lhude sing cuccu!

Groweth sed, and bloweth med,
And springth the wude nu.

UNKNOWN, Cuckoo Song. (c. 1250) It is perhaps from this song, the earliest in English literature, that the proverb originated, "To fence in the cuckoo," referring to the attempt of the Wise Men of Gotham to preserve the summer by imprisoning the bird.

Cuccu, cuccu, well singes thu, cuccu:

Ne swike thu never nu;

Sing cuccu, nu, sing cuccu,

Sing cuccu, sing cuccu, nu!

UNKNOWN, Cuckoo Song. (Swike: cease.)

CULTURE

<sup>9</sup> Culture is then properly described not as having its origin in curiosity, but as having its origin in the love of perfection: it is a study of perfection.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy. Ch. 1.

There is no better motto which it [culture] can have than these words of Bishop Wilson, "To make reason and the will of God prevail."

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy. Ch. 1.

The men of culture are the true apostles of equality.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy. Ch. 1.

<sup>10</sup> Culture has one great passion—the passion for sweetness and light. It has one even yet greater, the passion for making them prevail.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy. Ch. 1.

Culture is the passion for sweetness and light, and (what is more) the passion for making them prevail.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma: Preface.

Instead of dirt and poison, we have rather chosen to fill our hives with honey and wax; thus furnishing mankind with the two noblest of things, which are sweetness and light.

SWIFT, Battle of the Books.

The Greek word euphuia, a finely tempered nature, gives exactly the notion of perfection as culture brings us to conceive it; a harmonious perfection, a perfection in which the characters of beauty and intelligence are both present, which unites "the two noblest of things,"—as Swift, who of one of the two, at any rate, had himself all too little, most happily calls them in his Battle of the Books,—"the two noblest of things, sweetness and light." The euphuies, I say, is the man who tends towards sweetness and light, the aphues, on the other hand, is our Philistine.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy.

This divine ordinance imparts both light and sweetness to the soul which has eyes to see.

PHILO-JUDÆUS. (WALSH, Curiosities of Literature, p. 1043.)

<sup>11</sup> Culture is "to know the best that has been said and thought in the world."

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma: Preface.

Culture is reading.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma: Preface.

<sup>12</sup> The acquiring of culture is the developing of an avid hunger for knowledge and beauty.

JESSE LEE BENNETT, On Culture.

<sup>13</sup> Jackdaw culture, . . . a collection of charming miscomprehensions, untargeted enthusiasms, and a general habit of skimming.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Isadora Duncan.

In the room the women come and go

Talking of Michelangelo.

T. S. ELIOT, The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock.

1 The great law of culture is: Let each become all that he was created capable of being.

CARLYLE, Essays: J. P. F. Richter.

2 With culture spoil what else would flourish wild,

And rock the cradle till they bruise the child.

GEORGE VALENTINE COX, Black Gowns and Red Coats.

3 Culture with us . . . ends in a headache. . . . Do not craze yourself with thinking, but go about your business anywhere. Life is not intellectual or critical; but sturdy.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

Culture is one thing, and varnish another.

EMERSON, Journals, 1868.

4 Culture implies all that which gives the mind possession of its own powers; as languages to the critic, telescope to the astronomer.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

The foundation of culture, as of character, is at last the moral sentiment.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

The triumph of culture is to overpower nationality.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

5 Hoist all sail, my dear boy, and steer clear of culture. (Παῖδελαν δὲ πᾶσαν, μακάριε, φεύγε τὰκάριον ἀράμενος.)

EPICURUS, Letter to Pythocles. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Sec. 6.)

6 Culture which smooth the whole world licks, Also unto the devil sticks.

(Auch die Kultur, die alle Welt beleckt, Hat auf den Teufel sich erstreckt.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 6, l. 160.

7 Men are so inclined to content themselves with what is commonest; the spirit and the senses so easily grow dead to the impressions of the beautiful and perfect, that every one should study, by all methods, to nourish in his mind the faculty of feeling these things. . . . For this reason, one ought every day at least, to hear a little song, read a good poem, see a fine picture, and, if it were possible, to speak a few reasonable words.

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister's Apprenticeship. Bk. v, ch. 1. (Carlyle, tr.)

The soul is plastic, and a person who every day looks upon a beautiful picture, reads a page from some good book, and hears a beautiful piece of music will soon become a transformed person—one born again.

JOHN RUSKIN.

To have read the greatest works of any great poet, to have beheld or heard the greatest works of any great painter or musician, is a possession added to the best things of life.

SWINBURNE, Essays and Studies: Victor Hugo.

8 Rather than by your culture spoiled, Desist, and give us nature wild.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 248.

9 No one is so savage that he cannot be civilized if he will lend a patient ear to culture. (Nemo adeo ferus est, ut non mitescere possit, Si modo culturæ patientem commodet aurem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 39.

10 To have known the best, and to have known it for the best, is success in life.

J. W. MACKAIL, Classical Studies, p. 207.

11 The essence of a self-reliant and autonomous culture is an unshakable egoism.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. ii, p. 93.

12 No man, however learned, can be called a cultured man while there remains an unbridged gap between his reading and his life.

J. C. POWYS, The Meaning of Culture, p. 22.

The purpose of culture is to enhance and intensify one's vision of that synthesis of truth and beauty which is the highest and deepest reality.

J. C. POWYS, The Meaning of Culture, p. 164.

Culture would not be culture if it were not an acquired taste.

J. C. POWYS, The Meaning of Culture, p. 196.

Culture is the bed-rock, the final wall, against which one leans one's back in a god-forsaken chaos.

J. C. POWYS, The Meaning of Culture, p. 262.

13 Culture is on the horns of this dilemma: if profound and noble it must remain rare, if common it must become mean.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Life of Reason, ii, 111.

The longing to be primitive is a disease of culture.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 163.

14 The primary indication, to my thinking, of a well-ordered mind is a man's ability to remain in one place and linger in his own company.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 1.

15 Culture is the habit of being pleased with the best and knowing why.

HENRY VAN DYKE. ("This is certainly mine, but I don't remember when, or where, I said it."—Letter to compiler.)

16 Those who find beautiful meanings in beautiful things are the cultivated. For these there is hope.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray: Preface.

CUNNING

See also Deceit; Hypocrisy

1 We take cunning for a sinister or crooked wisdom.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

There is a cunning which we in England call "the turning of the cat in the pan"; which is, when that which a man says to another, he lays it as if another had said it to him.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

It is a good point of cunning for a man to shape the answer he would have in his own words and propositions, for it makes the other party stick the less.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

Nothing doth more hurt in a state, than that cunning men pass for wise.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

2 How like a hateful ape,
Detected, grinning, 'midst his pilfer'd hoard,
A cunning man appears, whose secret frauds
Are open'd to the day!

JOANNA BAILLIE, Basil. Act iii, sc. 1.

3 The weak in courage is strong in cunning.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

4 Refined policy ever has been the parent of confusion; and ever will be so, as long as the world endures.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America.

All policy's allowed in war and love.

8 A sly old fish, too cunning for the hook.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii.

9 That's the common fate of your Machiavel-lians; they draw their designs so subtle that their very fineness breaks them.

DRYDEN, Sir Martin Mar-All. Act v, sc. 1.

10 Which I wish to remark,
And my language is plain,
That for ways that are dark
And for tricks that are vain,
The heathen Chinee is peculiar,
Which the same I would rise to explain.
BRET HARTE, Plain Language from Truthful James.

11 The greatest cunning is to have none.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. The French form is: "La plus grande finesse est de n'en avoir point."

12 Every man wishes to be wise, and they who cannot be wise are almost always cunning.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 92.

13 Too many expedients may spoil an affair. (Le trop d'expédients peut gâter une affaire.)

More matter, with less art.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 95.

Fortune, my friend, I've often thought,
Is weak, if Art assist her not:
So equally all Arts are vain,
If Fortune help them not again.

SHERIDAN, Love Epistles of Aristænetus, xiii.

15 Well skilled in cunning wiles, he could make white of black and black of white. (Furtum ingeniosus ad omne, Candida de nigris et de candentibus atra Qui facere Adsuerat.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xi, l. 313.

17 His was the subtle look and sly,
That, spying all, seems nought to spy.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto v, st. 16.

18 Time will unfold what plighted cunning hides;
Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 283.

19 I hold it ever,
Virtue and cunning were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attends the former,

Making a man a god.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 26.

To cunning men I will be very kind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 96.

1 The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic; he crossed himself by 't.

CUPID

2 To Chloe's breast young Cupid slyly stole,
But he crept in at Myra's pocket-hole.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Couplets and Fragments. No. 4.

3 There is music even in the beauty, and the silent note which Cupid strikes, far sweeter than the sound of an instrument.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, 9.

4 Archers ever
Have two strings to a bow; and shall great Cupid

(Archer of archers both in men and women),
Be worse provided than a common archer?

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act ii, sc. 1. See also under PRUDENCE.

5 So cold herself, whilst she such warmth expressed,

'Twas Cupid bathing in Diana's stream.

DRYDEN, To the Pious Memory of Mrs. Anne Killigrew.

6 Venus, when her son was lost,
Cried him up and down the coast,
In hamlets, palaces, and parks,
And told the truant by his marks,—
Golden curls, and quiver, and bow.

EMERSON, The Initial Love.

Cupid is a casuist,
A mystic and a cabalist,— . . .
He is versed in occult science,
In magic and in clairvoyance. . . .
All things wait for and divine him,—
How shall I dare to malign him?

EMERSON, The Initial Love.

Who drinks of Cupid's nectar cup
Loveth downward, and not up.

EMERSON, To Rhea.

7 Cupid is a blind gunner.

FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act i, sc. 1.

8 Whoe'er thou art, thy Lord and master see!
Thou wast my Slave, thou art, or thou shalt be!

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Inscription for a Figure Representing the God of Love. Paraphrase of an epigram from the Greek Anthology.

Whoe'er thou art, thy master see;
He was—or is—or is to be.

(Qui que tu sois, voici ton maître;
Il l'est—le fut—ou le doit être.)

VOLTAIRE, Inscription for a Statue of Cupid.

9 Cupid and my Campaspe play'd
At cards for kisses; Cupid paid;
He stakes his quiver, bow and arrows,
His mother's doves, and team of sparrows;
Loses them too; then down he throws

The coral of his lip—the rose Growing on 's cheek (but none knows how)

With these, the crystal of his brow,

And then the dimple of his chin;

All these did my Campaspe win.

At last he set her both his eyes,

She won, and blind did Cupid rise.

O Love! hath she done this to thee?

What shall, alas! become of me?

JOHN LYLY, Alexander and Campaspe. Act iii, sc. 5.

10 Cupid . . . whose humour is to strive,
Then yield, then stay, and play the fugitive.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, Cupid and Psyche.

11 No wonder Cupid is a murderous boy;
A fiery archer making pain his joy.

His dam, while fond of Mars, is Vulcan's wife,
And thus 'twixt fire and sword divides her life.

MELEAGER. (Greek Anthology. Bk. v, ep. 180.)

12 The frivolous bolt of Cupid.

MILTON, Comus, l. 445.

13 What will not blind Cupid do in the night, which is his blindman's holiday?

THOMAS NASHE, Lenten Stuffe. (1599)

But Cupid is a downy cove,

Wot it takes a deal to hinder;

And if you shuts him out o' the door,

Vy he walks in at the winder.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, The Discreet Princess.

14 It may be said of him that Cupid hath clapped him o' the shoulder.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 48.

15 Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 2, l. 181.

This wimpled, whining, purblind wayward boy;
This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;
Regent of love-rhymes, lord of folded arms,
The anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,
Liege of all loiterers and malcontents.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 181.

16 I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head . . .
By that which knitteth souls and prospers loves.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act i, sc. 1, l. 169. Cupid's golden arrow, virtuous love; Cupid's leaden arrow, sensual passion.

But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft
Quench'd in the chaste beams of the watery moon.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 161.

<sup>1</sup>
Cupid is a knavish lad,
Thus to make poor females mad.

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,
When King Cophetua loved the beggar-maid.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 1,
l. 13.

The blinded boy, that shoots so trim,
From heaven down did hie;
He drew a dart and shot at him,
In place where he did lie.

UNKNOWN, *King Cophetua and the Beggar-
Maid*. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. 2, No. 6.)

<sup>4</sup>
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton
Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,

And, like a dewdrop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
3, l. 222.

II—Curse: Some Examples

<sup>11</sup> By thy cold breast and serpent smile,

By thy unfathom'd gulfs of guile,
By that most seeming virtuous eye,
By thy shut soul's hypocrisy; . . .
By thy delight in others' pain,
And by thy brotherhood of Cain,
I call upon thee! and compel
Thyself to be thy proper Hell!

BYRON, Manfred, l. 242. This “Incantation,” as Byron called it, was intended to apply to his wife.

<sup>12</sup> May God palsy the hand that wrote that order, may God palsy the brain that conceived it, and may God palsy the tongue that dictated it.

LUCIUS FAIRCHILD, of Wisconsin, National Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, Speech, at a meeting in Harlem, June, 1887, referring to the order issued by President Cleveland restoring the captured Confederate flags in the possession of the Government to the Southern States. He was afterwards known as “Fairchild of the three palsies.”

<sup>13</sup> I shall curse you with book and bell and candle.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Morte d'Arthur. Bk.
xxi, ch. 1. The allusion is to the ancient method of excommunication practised by the Roman Catholic Church.

The Cardinal rose with a dignified look,
He call'd for his candle, his bell, and his book!
In holy anger, and pious grief,

He solemnly cursed that rascally thief!
He cursed him at board, he cursed him in bed;
From the sole of his foot to the crown of his
head;

He cursed him in sleeping, that every night
He should dream of the devil, and wake in a fright;

He cursed him in eating, he cursed him in drinking,

He cursed him in coughing, in sneezing, in wink-
ing;

He cursed him in sitting, in standing, in lying;
He cursed him in walking, in riding, in flying;
He cursed him in living, he cursed him dying!—

Never was heard such a terrible curse!

But what gave rise

To no little surprise,

Nobody seem'd one penny the worse!

R. H. BARHAM, The Jackdaw of Rheims.

<sup>14</sup> Boils and plagues
Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorr'd
Further than seen.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 4, l. 31.

Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,
And occupations perish!

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 13.

<sup>15</sup> Therefore be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benizon.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 267.

You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes!—Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall and blast her pride!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 167.

Weary se'nnights nine times nine
Shall he dwindle, peak and pine.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 22.

All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him

By inch-meal a disease!

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 1.

1 Out, damned spot! out, I say.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 1, l. 39.

Out! out! . . . accursed spot!

SOUTHEY, All for Love. Pt. vi, st. 16.

2 O villains, vipers, damn'd without redemption;
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man;
Snakes in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting
my heart;

Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 129.

A plague o' both your houses!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1,
l. 94.

3 May the strong curse of crushed affections light

Back on thy bosom with reflected blight!

And make thee in thy leprosy of mind

As loathsome to thyself as to mankind!

Till all thy self-thoughts curdle into hate,

Black—as thy will for others would create:

Till thy hard heart be calcined into dust,

And thy soul welter in its hideous crust.

Oh, may thy grave be sleepless as the bed—

The widowed couch of fire, that thou hast spread!

SHELLEY, To the Lord Chancellor. Referring to Lord Eldon, who, on 17 March, 1816, had pronounced a decree depriving Shelley of the custody of his children by his wife Harriet, because of his flight from England with Mary Godwin. The poem was written "in his first resentment against the Chancellor," and there are several extant versions.

I curse thee by a parent's outraged love,

By hopes long cherished and too lately lost,

By gentle feelings thou couldst never prove,

By griefs which thy stern nature never crost.

SHELLEY, To the Lord Chancellor.

4 Cursed be the social wants that sin against the strength of youth!

Cursed be the social lies that warp us from the living truth!

Cursed be the sickly forms that err from honest Nature's rule!

Cursed be the gold that gilds the straighten'd forehead of the fool.

7 Outside in accordance with custom; inside as we please. (Foris ut mos est, intus ut libet.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 2.

8 But to my mind, though I am native here, And to the manner born, it is a custom More honour'd in the breach than the observance.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 15.

9 Nice customs curtsy to great kings.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 293.

Wherefore should I

Stand in the plague of custom?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 2, l. 2.

A thing of custom: 't is no other;

Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 97.

10 'Tis nothing when you are used to it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

There's nothing like being used to a thing.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act v, sc. 1.

11 Old customs, habits, superstitions, fears, All that lies buried under fifty years.

J. G. WHITTIER, The Countess.

III—Custom: Its Power

12 We think according to nature; we speak according to rules; we act according to custom.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Natura.

13

What custom hath endeared

We part with sadly, though we prize it not.

JOANNA BAILLIE, Basil. Act i, sc. 2.

14

The deadliest foe to love is custom.

BULWER-LYTTON, Devereux. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

15

Custom reconciles us to everything.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful. Pt. iv, sec. 18.

16

Custom is the master of all things. (Rerum omnium magister usus.)

CÆSAR, Civil Wars. Bk. ii, sec. 8.

Custom is the best master. (Usus magister est optimus.)

Custom is a very powerful master of all things. (Usus efficacissimus rerum omnium magister.)

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxvi, sec. 2.

Custom, towering master. (Usus magister egregius.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Letters. Bk. i, epis. 20.

17

An ancient custom obtains the force of nature. (Vetus consuetudino naturæ vim obtinet.)

CICERO, De Inventione.

18

Man yields to custom, as he bows to fate, In all things ruled—mind, body, and estate; In pain, in sickness, we for cure apply To them we know not, and we know not why.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales in Verse. Tale iii, l. 86.

19

Only that he may conform to tyrant custom.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Dayes. Week ii, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

The tyrant custom, most grave senators, Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war My thrice-driven bed of down.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 230.

When tyrant Custom had not shackled men.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 222.

Custom is a tyrant. (Usus est tyrannus.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

20

Custom, then, is the great guide of human life.

DAVID HUME, Human Understanding. Sec. v, pt. i.

21

Custom meets us at the cradle and leaves us only at the tomb.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Individuality.

22

Long customs are not easily broken; he that attempts to change the course of his own life very often labors in vain.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 29.

23

Great things astonish us, and small dishearten us. Custom makes both familiar.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Jugements.

What humanity abhors, custom reconciles and recommends to us.

JOHN LOCKE, On Education. Sec. 116.

The roots of cruelty come to perfection by means of custom.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22.

1 Custom and use have power to enure and fashion us, not only to what form they please . . . but also to change and variation.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

2 We are more sensible of what is done against custom than against Nature.

PLUTARCH, Of Eating of Flesh. Tract i.

3 Very weighty is the authority of custom. (Gravissimum est imperium consuetudinis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 230.

4 Choose what is best; custom will make it agreeable and easy. (Optimum elige; suave et facile illud faciet consuetudo.)

PYTHAGORAS, Ethical Sentences from Stobæus. Latinized by Bacon.

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery,
That aptly is put on. Refrain tonight,
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence; the next more easy;
For use almost can change the stamp of nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 161.

Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 75.

Custom makes all things easy.

JEAN INGELow, The Dreams That Come True. St. 7.

5 Custom calls me to 't:
What custom wills, in all things should we do 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 124.

New customs,

Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 3, l. 2.

6 How many unjust and crooked things custom makes one do. (Quam multa injusta ac prava fiunt moribus!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 839.

IV—Custom: Its Faults

7 Cast away the bondage and the fear
Of rotten custom.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Sonnets. No. 38.

8 Such dupes are men to custom, and so prone
To reverence what is ancient, and can plead
A course of long observance for its use.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 299.

Custom's idiot sway.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 49.

9 The slaves of custom and established mode,
With pack-horse constancy we keep the road
Crooked or straight, through quags or thorny dells,

True to the jingling of our leader's bells.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 251. See also under PRECEDENT.

10 The interrogation of custom at all points is an inevitable stage in the growth of every superior mind.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

11 The despotism of custom is everywhere the standing hindrance to human advancement.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3.

12 Nature is seldom in the wrong, custom always.

LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Miss Anne Wortley, 8 Aug., 1709.

13 Custom is a violent and deceiving school-mistress.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22.

A bad custom is like a good cake, better broken than kept.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

CYNICISM

14 Why should we strive, with cynic frown,
To knock their fairy castles down?

ELIZA COOK, Oh! Dear to Memory.

15 The royal cynic. (Βασιλικὸν κύνα.)

DIOGENES, of Aristippus, because of his attendance upon Dionysius, a sneering phrase which may also be translated, "The king's poodle," for κύων means dog as well as cynic, and indicates how much the Cynics gloried in snarling and biting. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristippus. Bk. ii, sec. 66.)

16 A cynic can chill and dishearten with a single word.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

17 If to look truth in the face and not resent it when it's unpalatable, and take human nature as you find it, . . . is to be cynical, then I suppose I'm a cynic.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, The Back of Beyond.

18 Cynicism is intellectual dandyism.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 7.

19 I hate cynicism a great deal worse than I do the devil; unless, perhaps, the two were the same thing?

R. L. STEVENSON, Walt Whitman.

20 Cecil Graham: What is a cynic?

Lord Darlington: A man who knows the price of everything, and the value of nothing.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

Nowadays people know the price of everything, and the value of nothing.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 4.

D

DAFFODIL

- <sup>1</sup>
The daffodil is our doorside queen;
She pushes upward the sward already,
To spot with sunshine the early green.
BRYANT, An Invitation to the Country.
- <sup>2</sup>
O Love-star of the unbeloved March,
When cold and shrill,
Forth flows beneath a low, dim-lighted arch
The wind that beats sharp crag and barren
hill,
And keeps unfilmed the lately torpid rill!
AUBREY DE VERE, Ode to the Daffodil.
- <sup>3</sup>
What ye have been ye still shall be
When we are dust the dust among,
O yellow flowers!
AUSTIN DOBSON, To Daffodils.
- <sup>4</sup>
There flames the first gay daffodil
Where winter-long the snows have lain!
RUTH GUTHRIE HARDING, Daffodils.
- <sup>5</sup>
Fair daffodils, we weep to see
You haste away so soon;
As yet the early-rising sun
Has not attained his noon. . . .
We have short time to stay as you,
We have as short a spring;
As quick a growth to meet decay
As you, or any thing.
ROBERT HERRICK, To Daffodils.
- <sup>6</sup>
O fateful flower beside the rill—
The Daffodil, the Daffodil!
JEAN INGELow, Persephone. St. 16.
- <sup>7</sup>
Now blow the daffodils on slender stalks,
Small keen flames that leap up in the mold
And run along the dripping garden walks.
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Sweet Weather.
- <sup>8</sup>
When daffodils begin to peer,
With, heigh! the doxy over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's
pale.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 1.
- Daffodils
- That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 118.
- <sup>9</sup>
Daffy-down-dilly came up in the cold,
Through the brown mould

Although the March breeze blew keen on her face,
Although the white snow lay in many a place.
ANNA WARNER, Daffy-Down-Dilly.

<sup>10</sup>
There is a tiny yellow daffodil,
The butterfly can see it from afar,
Although one summer evening's dew could fill
Its little cup twice over, ere the star
Had called the lazy shepherd to his fold
And be no prodigal.
OSCAR WILDE, The Burden of Itys. St. 17.

<sup>11</sup>
I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host, of golden daffodils;
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.
Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle in the milky way,
They stretched in never-ending line
Along the margin of a bay:
Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.
WORDSWORTH, I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud:
Poems of the Imagination. No. xii.

DAISY

- <sup>12</sup>
Wee, modest, crimson-tippèd flow'r,
Thou's met me in an evil hour;
For I maun crush amang the stoure
Thy slender stem:
To spare thee now is past my pow'r,
Thou bonie gem.
ROBERT BURNS, To a Mountain Daisy. St. 1.
- Ev'n thou who mourn'st the daisy's fate,
That fate is thine—no distant date;
Stern Ruin's ploughshare drives, elate,
Full on thy bloom,
Till crush'd beneath the furrow's weight
Shall be thy doom!
BURNS, To a Mountain Daisy. St. 9.
- Myriads of daisies have shone forth in flower
Near the lark's nest, and in their natural hour
Have passed away, less happy than the One That, by the unwilling ploughshare, died to prove
The tender charm of Poetry and Love.
WORDSWORTH, *Poems Composed or Suggested
During a Tour, in the Summer of 1833*. No.
37.
- <sup>13</sup>
The daisy's for simplicity and unaffected air,
BURNS, The Posie. St. 4.

Yet, all beneath th' unrivalled rose,
The lowly daisy sweetly blows.

BURNS, The Vision. Duan ii, st. 21.

1
Over the shoulders and slopes of the dune
I saw the white daisies go down to the
sea. . . .

And all of their saying was, "Earth, it is well!"
And all of their dancing was, "Life, thou art good!"

BLISS CARMAN, Daisies.

2
With daisied mantles is the mountain dight.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, Ælla.

Of all the flowers in the mead,
Then love I most those flowers white and red,
Which that men callen daisies in our town.

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women: Prologue,
l. 41.

That well by reason men it callē may
The "day's-eye" or else the "eye of day,"
The emperice and flower of flowers all.

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women: Prologue,
l. 183.

4
Daisies infinite
Uplift in praise their little glowing hands,
O'er every hill that under heaven expands.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Spring, l. 13.

5
Daisies smell-less, yet most quaint.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Two Noble Kinsmen.
Act i, sc. 1.

6
The daisy's cheek is tipp'd with a blush,
She is of such low degree.

THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

And daisy stars, whose firmament is green.

THOMAS HOOD, *The Plea of the Midsummer
Fairies*, l. 317.

Stars are the daisies that begem
The blue fields of the sky.

D. M. MOIR, Stars. (Dublin University Magazine, Oct., 1852.)

7
All summer she scattered the daisy leaves;
They only mocked her as they fell.

She said: "The daisy but deceives;
'He loves me not,' 'he loves me well,'
One story no two daisies tell."

Ah, foolish heart, which waits and grieves
Under the daisy's mocking spell.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, The Sign of the Daisy.

8
There is a flower, a little flower
With silver crest and golden eye,
That welcomes every changing hour,
And weathers every sky.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, A Field Flower.

The Rose has but a summer-reign,
The daisy never dies.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, A Field Flower.

9
Sweet bunch of daisies, Brought from the dell,
Kiss me once, darling, Daisies won't tell.

ANITA OWEN, Sweet Bunch of Daisies. (1894)

10
Daisies, those pearly Arcturi of the earth,
The constellated flower that never sets.

SHELLEY, The Question.

11
She asked him but to stand beside her grave—
She said she would be daisies—and she thought

"Twould give her joy to feel that he was near."
ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life-Drama.

12
So dear a life your arms enfold,
Whose crying is a cry for gold.

TENNYSON, The Daisy. St. 24.

13
Ah, drops of gold in whitening flame
Burning, we know your lovely name—
Daisies, that little children pull!

FRANCIS THOMPSON, To Daisies.

14
Bright Flower! whose home is everywhere,
Bold in maternal Nature's care,
And all the long year through the heir

Of joy and sorrow;
Methinks that there abides in thee
Some concord with humanity,
Given to no other flower I see
The forest thorough!

WORDSWORTH, To the Daisy. No. 2.

Thou art indeed by many a claim.
The Poet's darling.

WORDSWORTH, To the Daisy. No. 1.

We meet thee, like a pleasant thought,
When such are wanted.

WORDSWORTH, To the Daisy. No. 1.

Thou unassuming Common-place
Of Nature, with that homely face,
And yet with something of a grace,
Which Love makes for thee!

WORDSWORTH, To the Same Flower.

A nun demure of lowly port;
Or sprightly maiden, of Love's court,
In thy simplicity the sport

Of all temptations;
A queen in crown of rubies drest;
A starveling in a scanty vest;
Are all, as seems to suit thee best,

Thy appellations.

WORDSWORTH, To the Same Flower.

Sweet silent creature!
That breath'st with me in sun and air,
Do thou, as thou art wont, repair
My heart with gladness, and a share
Of thy meek nature!

WORDSWORTH, To the Same Flower.

15
So fair, so sweet, withal so sensitive,
Would that the little Flowers were born to live,
Conscious of half the pleasure which they give;

That to this mountain-daisy's self were known
The beauty of its star-shaped shadow, thrown
On the smooth surface of this naked stone!

WORDSWORTH, Poems of Sentiment and Reflection. No. 42.

DANCING

I—Dancing: Definitions

<sup>1</sup>
A dance is a measured pace, as a verse is a measured speech.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning.
Bk. ii, sec. 13.

<sup>2</sup>
Dancing, the child of Music and of Love.
SIR JOHN DAVIES, Orchestra. St. 96.

<sup>3</sup>
The poetry of the foot.
DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies. Act iii, sc. 1.

<sup>4</sup>
Dancing's a touchstone that true beauty tries,
Nor suffers charms that nature's hand denies.
SOAME JENYNS, The Art of Dancing. Canto i,
l. 119.

<sup>5</sup>
The Indian dances to prepare himself for killing his enemy: but while the beaux and belles of our assemblies dance, they are in the very act of killing theirs—TIME!—a more inveterate and formidable foe than any the Indian has to contend with; for, however completely and ingeniously killed, he is sure to rise again, "with twenty mortal murders on his crown," leading his army of blue devils, with ennui in the van and vapours in the rear.

T. L. PEACOCK, Headlong Hall. Ch. xiii.

II—Dancing: Apothegms

<sup>6</sup>
He dances like an angel.
ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 475.

<sup>7</sup>
O give me new figures! I can't go on dancing
The same that were taught me ten seasons ago;

The schoolmaster over the land is advancing,
Then why is the master of dancing so slow?
It is such a bore to be always caught tripping
In dull uniformity year after year;
Invent something new, and you'll set me a skipping:

I want a new figure to dance with my Dear!
T. H. BAYLY, Quadrille à la Mode.

Waltzing is fine, Bill, but not for mine, Bill;
It isn't in it with the two-step a minute.

UNKNOWN, I'd Rather Two-Step than Waltz,
Bill. (1907)

<sup>8</sup>
When you go to dance, take heed whom you take by the hand.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 24.

<sup>9</sup>
But, by the Lord, though I should beg
Wi' lyart pow,

I'll laugh, an' sing, an' shake my leg
As lang's I dow!

BURNS, Second Epistle to J. Lapraik.

<sup>10</sup>
Let Angiolini bare her breast of snow,
Wave the white arm and point the pliant toe.
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers.

<sup>11</sup>
On with the dance! let joy be unconfin'd;
No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure meet

To chase the glowing Hours with flying feet.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 22.

<sup>12</sup>
They are waiting on the shingle—will you come and join the dance?

Will you, won't you, will you, won't you, will
you join the dance?

Will you, won't you, will you, won't you, won't
you join the dance?

LEWIS CARROLL, *Alice in Wonderland: The
Whiting and the Snail*.

<sup>13</sup>
Custom has made dancing sometimes necessary for a young man; therefore mind it while you learn it that you may learn to do it well, and not be ridiculous, though in a ridiculous act.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746.

<sup>14</sup>
They love dancing well that dance barefoot
among thorns.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4966.

<sup>15</sup>
To brisk notes in cadence beating,
Glance their many-twinkling feet.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy, l. 34.

Muse of the many-twinkling feet, whose charms
Are now extending up from legs to arms.

BYRON, The Waltz, l. 1.

<sup>16</sup>
And how I once went down the middle
With the man who shot Sandy McGee.

BRET HARTE, Her Letter.

<sup>17</sup>
When fools pipe, by authority he may dance.
THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11.

I will not dance to every fool's pipe.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2644.

<sup>18</sup>
Light is the dance, and doubly sweet the lays,
When, for the dear delight, another pays.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 159. (Pope, tr.)

Always those that dance must pay the music.
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, *Taylor's
Feast*, p. 98. (1638)

I warrant you, if he danced till doomsday, he thought I was to pay the piper.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 5.

<sup>19</sup>
Our dancers ennoble what is coarse, but they degrade what is heroic. (Nos danseurs ennoblissent ce qui est grossier; mais ils dégradent ce qui est héroïque.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 283.

1 The Congress of Vienna does not march but it dances. (Le Congrès ne marche pas, mais il danse.)

The PRINCE DE LIGNE. The pun is untranslatable. In French, the verb marcher means not only to walk or march, but also to progress.

One of the Prince de Ligne's speeches that will last forever.

UNKNOWN, Edinburgh Review, July, 1890, p. 244.

2 All be not merry that men see dance.

JOHN LYDGATE, Daunce of Machabree, l. 392. (c. 1430)

Everyone is not happy who dances. (Chacun n'est pas aisé qui danse.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

3 My men, like satyrs grazing on the lawn,
Shall with their goat feet dance the antic hay.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Edward II. Act i, l.

4 We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced.

New Testament: Matthew, xi, 17; Luke, vii, 32.

5 Come, and trip it as ye go,
On the light fantastic toe.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 33.

Come, knit hands, and beat the ground
In a light fantastic round.

MILTON, Comus, l. 143.

6 Casey would waltz with a strawberry blonde,
And the band played on.

JOHN F. PALMER, The Band Played On. Popular song set to music by Charles B. Ward in 1894.

Waltz me around again, Willie, around and around and around,
The music is dreamy, it's peaches and creamy,
Oh! don't let my feet touch the ground!

WILL D. COBB, Waltz Me Around Again, Willie. (1906)

Waltz, you siren of melody, soft and sweet,
Waltz, I follow you ever with tireless feet;
Waltz, you lure me away to a dream of bliss,
Waltz, you're like the soft glory of love's first kiss.

A translation by Carolyn Wells of a waltz song from an opera by Franz Lehar. (1914)

7 Those move easiest who have learn'd to dance.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 163; Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 178.

Not to go back, is somewhat to advance,
And men must walk, at least, before they dance.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 53.

8 He, perfect dancer, climbs the rope,
And balances your fear and hope.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto ii, l. 9.

9 He dances well to whom Fortune pipes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10 They have measured many a mile,
To tread a measure with you on this grass.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 186.

11 For you and I are past our dancing days.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 33. (1592)

My dancing days are done.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Scornful Lady. Act v, sc. 3.

My dancing days are past.

MASSINGER, The Picture. Act ii, sc. 2.

I doubt her dancing days are over.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

12 While his off-heel, insidiously aside,
Provokes the caper which he seems to chide.

R. B. SHERIDAN, Pizarro: Prologue.

Inconsolable to the minuet in Ariadne.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 2.

13 We are dancing on a volcano. (Nous dansons sur un volcan.)

M. LE COMTE DE SALVANDY, at a fête given to the King of Naples before the revolution of 1830.

14 Dance light, for my heart it lies under your feet, love.

JOHN FRANCIS WALLER, Kitty Neil.

15 Waltzes, polkas, lancers, gallops, glides;
Portland fancy, quadrilles, reels and slides!
High-lows, di-dos, how we danced them all!
I'll never forget that time, you may bet,
At the party at Odd Fellows' Hall.

JACOB WENDELL, JR., The Party at Odd Fellows' Hall. Interesting as an enumeration of the dances popular in 1890, when the song was written.

16 Jack shall pipe, and Jill shall dance.

GEORGE WITHER, Poem on Christmas.

17 This dance of death which sounds so musically

Was sure intended for the corpse de ballet.

UNKNOWN, On the Danse Macabre of Saint-Saëns.

III—Dancing: Its Beauty

18 And then he danced,—all foreigners excel
The serious Angles in the eloquence
Of pantomime;—he danced, I say, right well,
With emphasis, and also with good sense—
A thing in footing indispensable:
He danced without theatrical pretence,
Not like a ballet-master in the van
Of his drill'd nymphs, but like a gentleman.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 38.

<sup>1</sup> Merrily, merrily whirled the wheels of the dizzying dances

Under the orchard-trees and down the path to the meadows.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 4.

Meanwhile there is dancing in yonder green bower.

OWEN MEREDITH, Midges.

<sup>2</sup> Dear creature!—you'd swear
When her delicate feet in the dance twinkle round,

That her steps are of light, that her home is the air,

And she only par complaisance touches the ground.

THOMAS MOORE, Fudge Family in Paris. Letter v, l. 50.

I saw her at the county ball;

There, when the sounds of flute and fiddle
Gave signal sweet in that old hall

Of hands across and down the middle,

Hers was the subtlest spell by far

Of all that sets young hearts romancing:

She was our queen, our rose, our star;

And then she danced—Oh, Heaven! her dancing!

W. M. PRAED, The Belle of the Ball.

<sup>3</sup> To many a youth and many a maid,
Dancing in the chequer'd shade.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 95.

Anon they move
In perfect phalanx, to the Dorian mood
Of flutes and soft recorders.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 549.

<sup>4</sup> Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:

Courtsied when you have, and kiss'd

The wild waves whist.

Foot it feately here and there;

And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 376.

<sup>5</sup> When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do

Nothing but that.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 140.

<sup>6</sup> But O! she dances such a way,
No sun upon an Easter day

Is half so fine a sight.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Ballad Upon a Wedding. St. 8. It was formerly a common belief that the sun danced on Easter Day.

<sup>7</sup> And beautiful maidens moved down in the dance,

With the magic of motion and sunshine of glance.

WHITTIER, Cities of the Plain. St. 4.

IV—Dancing: Its Faults

<sup>8</sup> And Clara dies that Claribel may dance.

ALFRED AUSTIN, The Golden Age.

<sup>9</sup> How ill the motion to the music suits!

So Orpheus fiddled, and so danced the brutes.

EUSTACE BUDGELL, On Bad Dancing to Good Music.

<sup>10</sup> Dancing? Oh, dreadful! How it was ever adopted in a civilized country I cannot find out; 'tis certainly a Barbarian exercise, and of savage origin.

FANNY BURNES, Cecilia. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

<sup>11</sup> Terpsichore! too long misdeem'd a maid—
Reproachful term bestow'd but to upbraid—
Henceforth in all the bronze of brightness shine,

The least a vestal of the virgin Nine.

BYRON, The Waltz, l. 3.

Endearing Waltz!—to thy more melting tune

Bow Irish jig and ancient rigadoun;

Scotch reels, avaunt! and country-dance, forego

Your future claims to each fantastic toe!

Waltz—Waltz alone—both legs and arms demands,

Liberal of feet and lavish of her hands;

Hands which may freely range in public sight

Where ne'er before—but—pray "put out the light."

BYRON, The Waltz, l. 109.

<sup>12</sup> The rout is Folly's circle, which she draws

With magic wand. So potent is the spell,

That none, decoy'd into that fatal ring,

Unless by Heaven's peculiar grace, escape.

There we grow early gray, but never wise.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 629.

When an old man dances,

His locks with age are gray,

But he's a child in mind.

ANACREON, Odes. No. xxxix, l. 3.

See also AGE: ITS COMPENSATIONS.

DIOGENES, of a young woman who danced daintily and was much commended. (BACON, Apothegms. No. 266.)

She could dance more skilfully than an honest woman need. (Saltare elegantius, quam necesse est probæ.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. 25, sec. 2.

<sup>14</sup> What! the girl I adore by another embraced?

What! the balm of her breath shall another man taste?

What! pressed in the dance by another man's knee?

What! panting recline on another than me?

Sir, she's yours; you have pressed from the grape its fine blue,

From the rosebud you've shaken the tremulous dew;

What you've touched you may take. Pretty waltzer—adieu!

SIR HENRY ENGELFIELD, The Waltz.

1 At their speed behold advancing
Modern men and women dancing;
Step and dress alike express
Above, below from heel to toe,
Male and female awkwardness.

CATHERINE FANSHAWE, The Abrogation of the Birth-Night Ball.

2 'Twas surely the devil that taught women to dance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5319.

3 In dance the hand hath liberty to touch,
The eye to gaze, the arm for to embrace.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Grief of Joy. (1575)

Hot from the hands promiscuously applied, Round the slight waist, or down the glowing side.

BYRON, The Waltz, l. 234.

4 The greater the fool the better the dancer.
THEODORE EDWARD HOOK, Epigram. (BARHAM,
Life and Reminiscences, p. 91.)

5 He who esteems the Virginia reel
A bait to draw saints from their spiritual weal,
And regards the quadrille as a far greater knavery
Than crushing his African children with slavery,
Since all who take part in a waltz or cotillon
Are mounted for hell on the devil's own pillion,
Who, as every true orthodox Christian well knows,
Approaches the heart through the door of the toes.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 495.

6 Fat wet bodies go waddling by,
Girdled with satin, though God knows why;
Gripped by satyrs in white and black,
With a fat wet hand on the fat wet back.

ALFRED NOYES, A Victory Dance.

7 Once on a time, the wight Stupidity
For his throne trembled,
When he discovered in the brains of men
Something like thoughts assembled. . . .
At last he hit upon a way
For putting to rout, And driving out
From our dull clay
These same intruders new—
This Sense, these Thoughts, these Speculative ills—

What could he do? He introduced quadrilles.
JOHN RUSKIN, The Invention of Quadrilles.

8 To sing well and dance well are accomplishments which advance one very little in the world. (Qui bien chante et bien danse fait un métier qui peu avance.)

ROUSSEAU, Confessions. Ch. 5.

9 He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 12.

10 [The] play of limbs succeeds the play of wit.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Cui Bono.

DANDELION

11 A dandelion in his verse.
Like the first gold in childhood's purse.

ANNIE RANKIN ANNAN, Dandelion.

12 Those golden kisses all over the cheeks of the meadow, queerly called dandelions.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Star Papers: A Discourse of Flowers.

13 Upon a showery night and still,
Without a sound of warning,
A trooper band surprised the hill,
And held it in the morning.
We were not waked by bugle notes,
No cheer our dreams invaded,
And yet at dawn their yellow coats
On the green slopes paraded.

HELEN GRAY CONE, The Dandelions.

14 Young Dandelion on a hedge-side,
Said young Dandelion, who'll be my bride?
Said young Dandelion, with a sweet air,
I have my eye on Miss Daisy fair.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Young Dandelion.

15 Star-disked dandelions, just as we see them lying in the grass, like sparks that have leaped from the kindling sun of summer.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 10.

16 Dear common flower, that grow'st beside the
way,

Fringing the dusty road with harmless gold,
First pledge of blithesome May,
Which children pluck, and, full of pride,
uphold,

High-hearted buccaneers, o'erjoyed that they
An Eldorado in the grass have found,
Which not the rich earth's ample round
May match in wealth, thou art more dear to
me

Than all the prouder summer-blooms may be.
J. R. LOWELL, To the Dandelion.

How like a prodigal doth nature seem,
When thou, for all thy gold, so common art!
Thou teachest me to deem

More sacredly of every human heart,
Since each reflects in joy its scanty gleam

Of heaven, and could some wondrous secret show,

Did we but pay the love we owe,
And with a child's undoubting wisdom look
On all these living pages of God's book.
J. R. LOWELL, To the Dandelion.

<sup>1</sup> The robe of Spring was incomplete at dawn;
The needles of the Sun had done their best.
Gold buttons now are sewn upon the lawn—
Final touch to a green vest.

KENNETH W. PORTER, Dandelions.

<sup>2</sup> With locks of gold today;
Tomorrow silver gray;
Then blossom-bald. Behold,
O man, thy fortune told!
JOHN B. TABB, The Dandelion.

UNKNOWN, True Tragedy of Richard III. (1594)

There is no jesting with edge tools.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act ii, sc. 4.

All tools are in one sense edge-tools, and are dangerous.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

II—Danger: Scylla and Charybdis

9 Scylla guards the right side; insatiate Charyb-dis the left. (Dextrum Scylla latus, lævum implacata Charybdis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iii, l. 420.

10 Thou wilt fall upon Scylla in seeking to shun Charybdis. (Incidis in Scyllam cupiens vitare Charybdis.)

PHILIPPE GAULTIER, Alexandreis. Bk. v, l. 301. (c. 1300) The allusion is to the Homeric fable of Scylla and Charybdis, the first a rock, the second a whirlpool, in the straits of Messina.

When I shun Scylla, your father, I fall in Charybdis, your mother.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 18.

11 Betwixt the devil and the deep sea.

ERASMUS, Adagia. Ch. iii, cent. iv, p. 94.
Quoted from the Greek.

Between the wolf and the dog. (Hac urget lupus, hac canis, aiunt.)

Between altar and axe. (Inter sacrum saxumque.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 617. (Act iii, sc. 4.)

12 Thou'ldst shun a bear;

But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea,
Thou'ldst meet the bear i' the mouth.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 9.

DANTE

13 And Dante stern

And sweet, whose spirit was an urn
For wine and milk poured out in turn.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 352.

14 Oh their Dante of the dread Inferno!

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. St. 19.

15 Ungrateful Florence! Dante sleeps afar,
Like Scipio, buried by the upbraiding shore.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 57.

16 Dante dared to write his autobiography in colossal cipher, or into universality.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

Dante's imagination is the nearest to hands and feet that we have seen. He clasps the thought as if it were a tree or a stone, and describes as mathematically.

EMERSON, Essays: Natural History of Intellect.

17 Thy sacred song is like the trump of doom;
Yet in thy heart what human sympathies,
What soft compassion glows, as in the skies

The tender stars their clouded lamps relume!
LONGFELLOW, Dante.

This man descended to the doomed and dead
For our instruction; then to God ascended;
Heaven opened wide to him its portals splendid,

Who from his country's, closed against him, fled.
LONGFELLOW, Dante.

1 Yet there is something round thy lips
That prophesies the coming doom,
The soft, gray herald-shadow ere the eclipse
Notches the perfect disk with gloom.
J. R. LOWELL, On a Portrait of Dante.

2 He used Rome's harlot for his mirth;
Plucked bare hypocrisy and crime;
But valiant souls of knightly worth
Transmitted to the rolls of Time.
T. W. PARSONS, On a Bust of Dante.

No dream his life was—but a fight!
Could any Beatrice see
A lover in that anchorite?
T. W. PARSONS, On a Bust of Dante.

3 Nay, then, what flames are these that leap and swell
As 'twere to show, where earth's foundations crack,
The secrets of the sepulchres of hell
On Dante's track?
A. C. SWINBURNE, In Guernsey. Pt. iv, st. 3.

7 Darkness is more productive of sublime ideas than light.
EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful. Pt. ii, sec. 14.

8 Cabin'd, cribb'd, confined
And bred in darkness.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 127.
The winds were wither'd in the stagnant air,
And the clouds perish'd; Darkness had no need

Of aid from them—She was the Universe.
BYRON, Darkness, l. 80.

9 "Timon—for thou art no more—which is most hateful to thee, darkness or light?"
"Darkness; there is more of it in Hades." CALLIMACHUS, Epigram. (Greek Anthology.
Bk. vii, No. 317.)

Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

10 The sun's rim dips; the stars rush out:
At one stride comes the dark.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. iii.

11 Darkness our guide, Despair our leader was.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Essay: Vergil's Æneid.

12 Come, blessed Darkness, come and bring thy balm
For eyes' grown weary of the garish day!
Come with thy soft, slow steps, thy garments gray,
Thy veiling shadows, bearing in thy palm
The poppy-seeds of slumber, deep and calm.
JULIA C. R. DORR, Darkness.

13 O radiant Dark! O darkly fostered ray!
Thou hast a joy too deep for shallow Day.
GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

14 Darkness which may be felt.
Old Testament: Exodus, x, 21.

15 Auld Daddy Darkness creeps frae his hole,
Black as a blackamoor, blin' as a mole:
Stir the fire till it lowes, let the bairnie sit,
Auld Daddy Darkness is no wantit yit.
JAMES FERGUSON, Auld Daddy Darkness.

16 Darkness of slumber and death, forever sinking and sinking.
LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. 5, l. 108.

17 Lo! darkness bends down like a mother of grief
On the limitless plain, and the fall of her hair
It has mantled a world.
JOAQUIN MILLER, From Sea to Sea. St. 4.

18 A dungeon horrible on all sides round
As one great furnace flamed, yet from these flames
No light but rather darkness visible.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 61.

He sees enough who doth his darkness see.
LORD HERBERT OF CHERBURY, *To His Mistress
for Her True Picture*.

Of darkness visible so much be lent.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 3.

19 And all around was darkness like a wall.
WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. vii, l. 157.

- 1 Day is ended, Darkness shrouds
The shoreless seas and lowering clouds.
T. L. PEACOCK, Rhododaphne. Canto v, l. 264.
- Darkness there, and nothing more.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven. St. 4.
- 2 He that gropes in the dark finds that he would not.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
He that runs in the dark may well stumble.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
It is sure to be dark if you shut your eyes.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 247.
With hue like that when some great painter dips
His pencil in the gloom of earthquake and eclipse.
SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto v, st. 23.
- 5 And out of darkness came the hands
That reach thro' nature, moulding men.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. cxxiv.
- 6 I'm afraid to go home in the dark.
WILLIAMS-VAN ALSTYNE. Title and refrain of popular song. (1907) Quoted by O. Henry as he was dying.

DAUGHTER

- 7 Thy daughters bright thy walks adorn,
Gay as the gilded summer sky,
Sweet as the dewy, milk-white thorn,
Dear as the raptured thrill of joy.
BURNS, Address to Edinburgh. St. 4.
A lady with her daughters or her nieces
Shines like a guinea and seven-shilling pieces.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 60.
- 8 You appear to me so superior, so elevated above other men; I contemplate you with such strange mixture of humility, admiration, reverence, love and pride, that very little superstition would be necessary to make me worship you as a superior being . . . I had rather not live than not be the daughter of such a man.
THEODOSIA BURR, Letter to her Father. (PAR-TON, Life and Times of Aaron Burr, ii, 188.)
- 9 Is thy face like thy mother's, my fair child,
Ada, sole daughter of my house and heart?
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 1.
- 10 A country squire, with . . . a wife and two

- daughters . . . Oh God! two such unlicked cubs.

(O matre pulchra filia pulchrior.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 16, l. 1.
- 16 Then farewell, my dear; my loved daughter,
adieu;
The last pang of life is in parting from you.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, *A Deathbed Advice from
T. J. to M. R.*
- 17 You teach your daughters the diameters of the planets, and wonder what you have done that they do not delight in your company.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 160.
- O, I see thee old and formal, fitted to thy petty part,
With a little hoard of maxims preaching down
a daughter's heart!
TENNYSON, Locksley Hall. St. 47.
- 18 If I had a daughter, I would bring her up as a clinging vine.
MARY LATHROP, first woman member of the American Bar Association.
- 19 Filled her with thee, a daughter fair,
So buxom, blithe, and debonair.
MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 23.
- 20 Now such an one for daughter Creon had
As maketh wise men fools and young men
mad.
WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. xvii, l. 199.
- 21 Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 29.
- 22 Twa daughters and a back door are three stark thieves.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

<sup>1</sup> Still harping on my daughter.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 188.

My daughter! O my ducats! O my daughter!
Fled with a Christian! O my Christian ducats!

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 8, l. 15.

<sup>2</sup> It was a lordling's daughter, the fairest one of three,

That liked of her master as well as well might
be.

SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim, l. 211.

<sup>3</sup> I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 123.

A daughter and a goodly babe,
Lusty and like to live: the queen receives
Much comfort in 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 26.

<sup>4</sup> If a daughter you have, she's the plague of your life,

No peace shall you know, though you've buried your wife!

At twenty she mocks at the duty you taught her—

Oh, what a plague is an obstinate daughter!

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 3.

<sup>5</sup> The mother says to her daughter: Daughter, bid thy daughter, to tell her daughter, that her daughter's daughter is crying.

(Mater ait natæ, die natæ filia natum Ut moneat natæ, plangere filiolum.)

UNKNOWN, *Distich on a Lady Who Saw Her
Descendants to the Sixth Generation*.
(GRESWELL, Account of Runcorn, p. 34.)

The mother said to her daughter, "Daughter, bid thy daughter tell her daughter that her daughter's daughter hath a daughter."

GEORGE HAKEWILL, Apologie of the Power and Providence of God. Bk. iii, ch. 5, sec. 9.

<sup>6</sup> Have you not heard these many years ago,
Jephtha was judge of Israel?

He had one only daughter and no mo,
The which he loved passing well.

UNKNOWN, Jephtha Judge of Israel. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. ii, No. 3.)

Hamlet: O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Polonius: What a treasure had he, my lord?

Hamlet: Why,

"One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well."

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 422.

DAVIS, JEFFERSON

<sup>7</sup> If I could take one wing and Lee the other,
I think we could between us wrest a victory from those people.

JEFFERSON DAVIS, Memoirs. Vol. ii, p. 392.

<sup>8</sup> Calm martyr of a noble cause,

Upon thy form in vain

The Dungeon clanks its cankered jaws,

And clasps its cankered chain;

For thy free spirit walks abroad,

And every pulse is stirred

With the old deathless glory thrill,

Whene'er thy name is heard.

W. M. BELL, Jefferson Davis.

<sup>9</sup> He has made an army, has made a navy, and,
more than that, has made a nation.

GLADSTONE, Speech, at Newcastle, 1862, referring to Jefferson Davis.

<sup>10</sup> We'll hang Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree,
As we go marching on.

CHARLES SPRAGUE HALL, John Brown's Body.

<sup>11</sup> Et arma cedunt toga,

Said a Roman of renown:

When the din of war is over,

Arms yield unto the gown.

But this motto Jeff reverses:

For, arrayed in female charms,

When the din of war is over,

In his gown he yields to arms.

CHARLES G. HALPINE, An Old Maxim Reversed. Referring to the report that Davis had been captured in a woman's clothes.

<sup>12</sup> And he . . . now slinks through dark Obliv-ion's gate,

With this his epitaph: When others quailed,

He staked his all upon one cast of fate

And lost—and lived to know that he had failed!

HARRY THURSTON PECK, Jefferson Davis.

DAWN

<sup>13</sup> Now had Aurora displayed her mantle over the blushing skies, and dark night withdrawn her sable veil.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 6.

Aurora had but newly chased the night,
And purpled o'er the sky with blushing light.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. i, l. 186.

Aurora [Dawn] a friend to the Muses. (Aurora Musis amica.)

ERASMUS, De Ratione Studii; Letter to Christian Northoff, 1497.

But when Aurora, daughter of the dawn,

With rosy lustre purpled o'er the lawn.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 621. (Pope, tr.)

You cannot shut the windows of the sky
Through which Aurora shows her brightening
face.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto ii, st. 3.

<sup>14</sup> When God sends the dawn, he sends it for all.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 49.

1 Slow buds the pink dawn like a rose
From out night's gray and cloudy sheath;
Softly and still it grows and grows,
Petal by petal, leaf by leaf.
SUSAN COOLIDGE, The Morning Comes Before the Sun.

2 Kathleen mavourneen! the grey dawn is breaking,
The horn of the hunter is heard on the hill.
LOUISA MACARTNEY CRAWFORD, Kathleen Mavourneen.

3 It is always darkest just before the day dawneth.
THOMAS FULLER, Pisgah Sight. Bk. ii, ch. 11.
(1650)

4 The dawn is lonely for the sun,
And chill and drear;
The one lone star is pale and wan,
As one in fear.
RICHARD HOVEY, Chanson de Rosemonde.

5 Oh, the road to Mandalay, where the flyin'- fishes play,
An' the dawn comes up like thunder outer
China crost the Bay!
RUDYARD KIPLING, Mandalay.

East, oh, east of Himalay
Dwell the nations underground,
Hiding from the shock of day,
For the sun's uprising sound. . . .
So fearfully the sun doth sound,
Clanging up beyond Cathay;
For the great earthquaking sunrise
Rolling up beyond Cathay.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Mistress of Vision.

6 Oft when the white, still dawn
Lifted the skies and pushed the hills apart,
I've felt it like a glory in my heart.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Joy of the Morning.

7 The wind that sighs before the dawn
Chases the gloom of night,
The curtains of the East are drawn,
And suddenly—'t is light.
LEWIS MORRIS, Le Vent de l'Esprit.

8 God, with sweet strength, with terror and with trancing,
Spake in the purple mystery of dawn.
F. W. H. MYERS, St. Paul.

9 Clothing the palpable and familiar
With golden exhalations of the dawn.
SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act i, sc. 1.
(Coleridge, tr.)

10 Out of the scabbard of the night,
By God's hand drawn,
Flashes his shining sword of light,
And lo,—the dawn!
FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN, Dawn.

11 What humbugs we are, who pretend to live for Beauty, and never see the Dawn!
LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

12 Hail, gentle Dawn! mild blushing goddess, hail!

Rejoic'd I see thy purple mantle spread
O'er half the skies, gems pave thy radiant way,
And orient pearls from ev'ry shrub depend.
WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Chase. Bk. ii, l. 79.

13 Of all the fonts from which man's heart has drawn
Some essence of the majesty of earth, . . .
I reckon first the sunset and the dawn.
GEORGE STERLING, The Guerdon of the Sun.

14 Dawn sleeps on the shadowy hills,
The stars hold their breath counting the hours.
RABINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener.

15 Now the frosty stars are gone:
I have watched them one by one,
Fading on the shores of Dawn.
Round and full the glorious sun
Walks with level step the spray,
Through his vestibule of Day.
BAYARD TAYLOR, Ariel in the Cloven Pine.

16 Dawn, meanwhile, had restored her gentle light to weary men, recalling them to task and toil. (Aurora interea miseris mortalibus alman Extulerat lucem, referens opera atque labores.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 182.

17 Day's sweetest moments are at dawn.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Dawn.

18 When, in extravagant revel, the Dawn, a Bacchante upleaping,
Spills, on the tresses of Night, vintages golden and red.

WILLIAM WATSON, Hymn to the Sea. Pt. iii,
l. 13.

19 And down the long and silent street,
The dawn with silver-sandalled feet,
Crept like a frightened girl.
OSCAR WILDE, The Harlot's House. St. 12.

20 The dawn is overcast, the morning lowers,
And heavily in clouds brings on the day,
The great, the important day, big with the fate

Of Cato and of Rome.
JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1.

Big with the fate of Europe.

THOMAS TICKELL, Ode on Earl Stanhope's Voyage to France. St. 1.

1 Day is a snow-white Dove of heaven
That from the East glad message brings.

T. B. ALDRICH, Day and Night.

2 Yet, behind the night,
Waits for the great unborn, somewhere afar,
Some white tremendous daybreak.

RUPERT BROOKE, Second Best.

3 Day! Faster and more fast,
O'er night's brim, day boils at last.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes: Introduction.

4 Day breaks not, it is my heart.

JOHN DONNE, Daybreak.

5 Oh, tenderly the haughty day
Fills his blue urn with fire.

EMERSON, Ode. Concord, 4 July, 1857.

6 Out of the shadows of night
The world rolls into light;

It is daybreak everywhere.

LONGFELLOW, Bells of San Blas.

7 This is another day! And flushed Hope walks
Adown the sunward slopes with golden shoon.

DON MARQUIS, This is Another Day.

8 Phosphor, bring back the day! why delay our delight?

Cæsar returns; O Phosphor, bring back the
day!

(Phosphore, redde diem! quid gaudia nostra moraris?)

Cæsar venturo; Phosphore, redde diem!)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, ep. 21, l. 1. [Phos-phor, the morning star.]

Sweet Phosphor, bring the day,
Whose conqu'ring ray

May chase these fogs; sweet Phosphor, bring the
day! . . .

Sweet Phosphor, bring the day;
Light will repay

The wrongs of Night: sweet Phosphor, bring the
day!

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, Emb. 14.

9 Hide me from day's garish eye.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 141.

10 How troublesome is day!

It calls us from our sleep away;

It bids us from our pleasant dreams awake,
And sends us forth to keep or break

Our promises to pay.

How troublesome is day!

THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, Fly-by-Night. St. 1.

11 The day begins to break, and night is fled,

Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 1.

The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton and too full of gauds
To give me audience.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 34.

12 The wolves have prey'd: and look, the gentle
day,

Before the wheels of Phœbus, round about,
Dapples the drowsy east with spots of grey.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 25.

Look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tip-toe on the misty mountain tops.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 6.

The busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc.
2, l. 8.

13 Only that day dawns to which we are awake.
There is more day to dawn. The sun is but a morning star.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Closing lines. Quoted as closing lines of H. M. Tomlinson's All Our Yesterdays.

II—Day: Its Employment

14 Think in the morning. Act in the noon. Eat in the evening. Sleep in the night.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

15 Oh Day, if I squander a wavelet of thee,

A mite of my twelve-hours' treasure,

The least of thy gazes or glances . . .

One of thy choices, or one of thy chances . . .

Then shame fall on Asolo, mischief on me!

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes, l. 13.

16 One day well spent is to be preferred to an eternity of error. (Unus dies bene . . . actus peccanti immortalitate anteponeendus.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 2, sec. 5.

17 He is only rich who owns the day. There is no king, rich man, fairy, or demon who possesses such power as that. . . . The days are made on a loom whereof the warp and woof are past and future time.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

18 One day is equal to every day. (Unus dies par omni est.)

HERACLITUS, Fragments. No. 106. (SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epis. xii, sec. 7.)

- 1 One day, with life and heart,
Is more than time enough to find a world.
JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, Columbus.
- 2 Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.
WALTER MALONE, Opportunity.
- 3 Make it short, for this is my busy day. (Hunc pudet, . . . quaque id promisit die.)
PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 279. (Act i, sc. 3.)
- 4 No day without its line. (Nulla dies sine linea.)
PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxxv, sec. 36, l. 10. This is a condensation of Pliny's statement that "It was Apelles' constant habit never to allow a day to be so fully occupied that he had not time for the exercise of his art, if only to the extent of one stroke of the brush."
- Add a line every hour, and between whiles add a line.

cipulus est prioris posterior dies.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 143.
But you with pleasure own your errors past,
And make each day a critique on the last.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 11.
- 6 Every day should be passed as if it were to be our last.
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 633.
Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in the year. No man has learned anything rightly until he knows that every day is Doomsday.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

perdidi!)
EMPEROR TITUS VESPASIANUS, his customary self-reproach when a day passed without his benefiting some one. (SUETONIUS, Lives of the Cæsars: Titus. Ch. 8, sec. 1.)
- Whatever is is right.—This world, 'tis true,
Was made for Cæsar—but for Titus too:
And which more blest? who chained his country,
say,
Or he whose virtue sighed to lose a day?
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 145.

Views from thy hand no worthy action done.
UNKNOWN, Epigram. The earliest known instance of the use of this couplet is in the autograph album of David Krieg, in the British Museum, where it appears in quotation marks, signed James Bobart, with the caption, "Virtus sui gloria," and dated 8
Dec., 1697.

III—Days: Happy

- 15 The day which she marks with a whiter stone.
(Quem lapide illa, dies, candidiore notat.)
CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxxviii, l. 108. (148)
- Let not a day so fair lack its white chalk-mark.
(Cressa ne careat pulchra dies nota.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 36, l. 10.
- O happy day, to be marked with the whitest stone! (O diem lætū notandumque mihi candi-dissimo calculo!)
- PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vi, epis. 11.
- Pericles separated his whole force into eight divisions, had them draw lots, and allowed the division which got the white bean to feast and take their ease, while the others did the fighting.
And this is the reason, as they say, why those who have had a gay and festive time call it a
"white day," from the white bean.
- PLUTARCH, Lives: Pericles. Ch. 27, sec. 2.

O festival day . . . worthy to be marked with a stone as white as snow!

JOHN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, K 1. (1540)

This happy day to be enrolled
In rubric letters and in gold.

APHRA BEHN, The City Heiress. Act v, sc. 3.

1 Into which list are they to go? Marked with chalk as sane, or with charcoal? (Quorsum abeant? Sani ut creta, an carbone notati?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 246.

Are we to mark this day with a white or a black stone?

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 10.

2 On a good day good words must be spoken.
(Dicenda bona sunt bona verba die.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 72.

3 O, such a day,
So fought, so follow'd and so fairly won.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 20.

'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on it.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 142.

4 A day, long to be remembered! (O longum memoranda dies!)

STATIUS, Sylvarum. Bk. i, 13.

5 Happy days
Roll onward, leading up the golden year.

TENNYSON, The Golden Year, l. 40.

When I said to her,
"A day for gods to stoop," she answered, "Ay,
And men to soar."

TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale, l. 297.

6 The longed for day is at hand. (Expectata dies aderat.)

7 One of those heavenly days that cannot die.
WORDSWORTH, Nutting, l. 2.

The immortal spirit of one happy day.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. No. iv.

IV—Days: Unhappy

8 The long days are no happier than the short ones.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Village Feast: Evening.

9 The poorest day that passes over us is the conflux of two eternities; it is made up of currents that issue from the remotest Past, and flow onwards to the remotest Future.

CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.

Is not every meanest day the confluence of two eternities?

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. vi, ch. 1.

10 Days that need borrow
No part of their good morrow,

From a fore-spent night of sorrow.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Wishes to His (Supposed) Mistress. St. 26.

11 Dullest of dull-hued days.

THOMAS HARDY, A Commonplace Day.

12 Every man hath his ill day.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

No day passeth without some grief.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 6. (1670)

13 How short our happy days appear!

How long the sorrowful!

JEAN INGELow, The Mariner's Cave. St. 38.

14 This has certainly been a perverse and adverse day! (Edepol ne hic dies perversus atque advorsus.)

PLAUTUS, Menæchmi, l. 899. (Act v, sc. 5.)

15 The next day is never so good as the day before.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 815.

16 What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done,

That it in golden letters should be set
Among the high tides in the calendar?

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 84.

17 So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 38.

Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 146.

18 We have seen better days.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 27.

19 I hate the day, because it lendeth light
To see all things, and not my love to see.

EDMUND SPENSER, Daphnaïda, l. 407.

20 But the tender grace of a day that is dead
Will never come back to me.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

23 Day is pushed out by day. (Truditur dies die.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 18, l. 15.

24 Daughters of Time, the hypocritic Days,

Muffled and dumb like barefoot dervishes,
And marching single in an endless file,
Bring diadems and fagots in their hands.
To each they offer gifts after his will,
Bread, kingdom, stars, and sky that holds them all.

I, in my pleached garden, watched the pomp,
Forgot my morning wishes, hastily
Took a few herbs and apples, and the Day
Turned and departed silent. I, too late,
Under her solemn fillet saw the scorn.

EMERSON, Days.

They [the days] come and go like muffled and veiled figures sent from a distant friendly party;
but they say nothing, and if we do not use the gifts they bring, they carry them as silently away.

JOHN CHAMBERLAIN, Letters. No. 12. (1598)

As deaf as adders upon that side of the head.

SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 36.

They never would hear,

But turn the deaf ear,

As a matter they had no concern in.

SWIFT, Dingley and Brent.

<sup>5</sup> Who is so deaf or so blind as he

That wilfully will neither hear nor see?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

None so deaf as those that will not hear.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Psalms, lviii.

<sup>6</sup> A deaf man went to law with another deaf man, and the judge was much deafer than either. One of them asserted that the other owed him five months' rent, and the other said that his opponent had been grinding corn at night to avoid the tax. The judge looked at them and said, "Why are you quarreling? She is your mother; you must both support her."

NICARCHUS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig.

ABD-EL-KADER, Rappel à l'Intelligent.

The Black Camel.

EARL DERR BIGGERS. Title of novel.

<sup>12</sup> Death is the universal salt of states.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town.

O great corrector of enormous times,
Shaker of o'er-rank states, thou grand decider
Of dusty and old titles, that healest with blood
The earth when it is sick, and curest the world
O' the pleurisy of people!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *The Two Noble
Kinsmen*. Act v, sc. 1.

<sup>13</sup> Death hath not only particular stars in heaven, but malevolent places on earth, which single out our infirmities and strike at our weaker parts.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 4.

<sup>14</sup> Death, . . . pale priest of the mute people.

ROBERT BROWNING, Balaustion's Adventure, l.
303.

<sup>15</sup> Love, fame, ambition, avarice—'tis the same,
Each idle, and all ill, and none the worst—
For all are meteors with a different name,
And Death the sable smoke where vanishes the flame.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 124.

Yet what is

Death, so it be glorious? 'Tis a sunset.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>16</sup> What is death? A bugbear. (Θάνατος τί ἐστίν; μορμολύκειον.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 17.
Epictetus adds that Socrates did well to call all such things "bugbears." (PLATO, Phædo, 77e.)

1 Death, kind Nature's signal of retreat.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 364.

(Ὁ θάνατος τοιοῦτος, οἷον γένεσις, φύσεως μυστήριον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv. sec. 5.

3 Death, however, Is a spongy wall,
Is a sticky river, Is nothing at all.
EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Moriturus.

4 Death is but a name, a date,
A milestone by the stormy road,
Where you may lay aside your load
And bow your face and rest and wait,
Defying fear, defying fate.
JOAQUIN MILLER, A Song of Creation. Canto iv, st. 12.

What is this rest of death, sweet friend?
What is the rising up, and where?
I say, death is a lengthened prayer,
A longer night, a larger end.
JOAQUIN MILLER, A Song of the South. Sec. vii.

5 Death is the scion Of the house of hope.
DOROTHY PARKER, Death.

6 Death's but a path that must be trod,
If man would ever pass to God.
THOMAS PARNELL, A Night-Piece on Death. l. 67.

7 Death is but crossing the world, as friends do the seas; they live in one another still.
WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

8 Death is sometimes a punishment, often a gift; to many it has been a favor. (Interim poena est mori, Sed saepe donum; pluribus veniæ fuit.)
SENECA, Hercules Œtæus, l. 930.

Death is fortunate for the child, bitter to the youth, too late to the old. (Mors infanti felix, juveni acerba, nimis sera seni.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 394.

9 Death is the veil which those who live call life:

They sleep, and it is lifted.
SEELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iii, sc. 3.

10 Death is the ugly fact which Nature has to hide, and she hides it well.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: The Fear of Dying.

11 The sleeping partner of life.
HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet: Death.

12 Death is the mother of beauty; hence from her

Alone shall come fulfillment to our dreams.
WALLACE STEVENS, Sunday Morning.

13 Death's truer name
Is "Onward," no discordance in the roll
And march of that Eternal Harmony
Whereto the world beats time.

TENNYSON, Unpublished Sonnet. (Life, vol. i.)

14 I am the Dark Cavalier; I am the Last Lover:
My arms shall welcome you when other arms are tired.

MARGARET WIDDEMER, The Dark Cavalier.

15 Death is an angel with two faces:
To us he turns
A face of terror, blighting all things fair;
The other burns
With glory of the stars, and love is there.
T. C. WILLIAMS, A Thanatopsis.

16 Death is the crown of life:
Were death denied, poor man would live in vain;
Were death denied, to live would not be life;
Were death denied, ev'n fools would wish to die.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 526.

17 Who can take
Death's portrait true? The tyrant never sat.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 52.

II—Death: Apothegms

18 Though this may be play to you,
'Tis death to us.
ÆSOP, Fables: The Boys and the Frog.

19 To die quickly is a privilege; I shall die by inches.

AMIEL, Journal, 1 Sept., 1874.

20 Drive your cart and your plow over the bones of the dead.

μερόπεσσιν ὀφείλεται.)
PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 62.)

<sup>13</sup> The slender debt to Nature's quickly paid, Discharged, perchance, with greater ease than
made.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 13.

<sup>14</sup> A man can die but once: we owe God a death.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 250.
Why, thou owest God a death.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 126.
He owed a death, and he hath paid that debt.
HEYWOOD AND ROWLEY, Fortune by Land and Sea. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>15</sup> He that dies this year is quit for the next.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 254.
He that dies pays all debts.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 140.

<sup>16</sup> First our pleasures die—and then
Our hopes, and then our fears—and when
These are dead, the debt is due,
Dust claims dust—and we die too.
SHELLEY, Death. (1820)

<sup>17</sup> We are all owed to death. (Θανάτῳ πάντες ὀφειλόμεθα.)
SIMONIDES. (Greek Anthology, Bk. x, 105.)

IV—Death: A Gate

<sup>18</sup> Death the gate of life. (Mors janua vitæ.)
ST. BERNARD, In Transitu S. Malachi. Sermon
i, sec. 4, ad fin.

And to the faithful, death the gate of life.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 571.

Death is life's gate.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Colonnade and Lawn.

<sup>19</sup> The gate of death. (Janua lethi.)
LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 1105.

<sup>20</sup> Death is for many of us the gate of hell; but we are inside on the way out, not outside on the way in.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

<sup>21</sup> And so thro' those dark gates across the wild
That no man knows.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vii, l. 341.

<sup>1</sup> Death is only an old door.
Set in a garden wall.

NANCY BYRD TURNER, Death is a Door.

<sup>2</sup> As soon as man, expert from time, has found
The key of life, it opes the gates of death.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 122.

V—Death: A Voyage

<sup>3</sup> Without a hail at parting,
Or any colors shown,
My friend has gone aboard her
For the Isles of the Unknown.
BLISS CARMAN, Passing Strange.

<sup>4</sup> Now the labourer's task is o'er;
Now the battle day is past;
Now upon the farther shore
Stands the voyager at last.
EDWARD ELLERTON, Hymn.

<sup>5</sup> God, I am travelling out to death's sea,
I, who exulted in sunshine and laughter,
Dreamed not of dying—death is such a waste of me!

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Valley of the Shadow.
Used by Mrs. Galsworthy on card acknowledging letters of condolence.

<sup>6</sup> To die is landing on some silent shore,
Where billows never break, nor tempests roar:
Ere well we feel the friendly stroke, 'tis o'er.
GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto iii, l. 225.

<sup>7</sup> And I hear from the outgoing ship in the bay
The song of the sailors in glee:
So I think of the luminous footprints that bore
The comfort o'er dark Galilee,
And wait for the signal to go to the shore,
To the ship that is waiting for me.
BRET HARTE, The Two Ships.

<sup>8</sup> Oh, in some morning dateless yet
I shall steal out in the sweet dark
And find my ship with sails all set
By the dim quayside, and embark.
KATHERINE TYNAN HINKSON, The Last Voyage.

<sup>9</sup> When I have folded up this tent
And laid the soiled thing by,
I shall go forth 'neath different stars,
Under an unknown sky.
FREDERICK LAWRENCE KNOWLES, Last Word.

<sup>10</sup> Death was a harbor and a transient goal
Wherefrom you pass now, with your skysail set
For ports beyond the margin of the stars.
ELOISE ROBINSON, To-Day I Saw Bright Ships.

<sup>11</sup> It's far I must be going
Some night or morning gray,

Beyond the ocean's flowing,
Beyond the rim of day;
But sure it's not the going,
But that I find the way.
PATRICK McDONOUGH, Via Longa.

<sup>12</sup> When I drift out on the Silver Sea,
O may it be a blue night
With a white moon
And a sprinkling of stars in the cedar tree.
LEW SARETT, The Great Divide.

<sup>13</sup> Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 267.

<sup>14</sup> Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea. . . .
For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place

The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.
TENNYSON, Crossing the Bar.

There came so loud a calling of the sea
That all the houses in the haven rang.
TENNYSON, Enoch Arden, l. 904. The "calling of the sea" is an old English term for a ground-swell.

<sup>15</sup> Joy, shipmate, joy!
(Pleas'd to my soul at death I cry,)
Our life is closed, our life begins,
The long, long anchorage we leave,
The ship is clear at last, she leaps!
She swiftly courses from the shore,
Joy, shipmate, joy!
WALT WHITMAN, Joy, Shipmate, Joy!

<sup>16</sup> I think of death as some delightful journey
That I shall take when all my tasks are done.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, The Journey.
Never any weary traveller complained that he came too soon to his journey's end.
THOMAS FULLER, Good Thoughts in Bad Times, 24.

VI—Death: Its Immanence

<sup>17</sup> In the midst of life we are in death. (Media vita in morte sumus.)

Book of Common Prayer: Burial of the Dead.
Origin uncertain, but dating from the Middle Ages. Found in choirbook of the Monks of St. Gall.

<sup>18</sup> When swift the Camel-rider spans the howling waste, by Kismet sped,
And of his Magic Wand a wave hurries the quick to join the dead.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. iii, st. 35.
<sup>19</sup> Short shall this half-extinguished spirit burn

And soon these limbs to kindred dust return.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 423.

1 Methinks I hear some gentle spirit say,
Be not fearful, come away!

THOMAS FLATMAN, A Thought of Death.

I hear a voice you cannot hear,
Which says, I must not stay;

I see a hand you cannot see,
Which beckons me away.

THOMAS TICKELL, Colin and Lucy.

2 Death rides on every passing breeze,
He lurks in every flower:

Each season has its own disease,
Its peril every hour.

REGINALD HEBER, At a Funeral.

3 Leaves have their time to fall,
And flowers to wither at the north-wind's
breath,

And stars to set,—but all,
Thou hast all seasons for thine own, O Death!
FELICIA HEMANS, The Hour of Death.

4 Death is still working like a mole,
And digs my grave at each remove.

GEORGE HERBERT, Grace.

5 Prepare for death if here at night you roam,
And sign your will before you sup from home.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, London.

6 There is no confessor like unto Death!
Thou canst not see him, but he is near:
Thou needst not whisper above thy breath,
And he will hear.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v.

7 And over them triumphant Death his dart Shook, but delay'd to strike, though oft invok'd.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 488.

8 Live mindful of death; the hour flies. (Vive memor leti, fugit hora.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 153.

Remember you must die. (Memento mori.)
Motto, Order of the Death's Head.

Look behind you. Remember you are but a man.
(Respite post te. Hominem memento te.)

The warning whispered by a slave stationed behind the Roman general in his triumphal chariot.

9 If thou expect death as a friend, prepare to entertain it; if thou expect death as an enemy, prepare to overcome it; death has no advantage, but when it comes a stranger.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. iv, No. 37.

10 Soon the shroud shall lap thee fast,
And the sleep be on thee cast
That shall ne'er know waking.

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 27.

11 It is uncertain where death may await thee, therefore expect it everywhere. (Incertum est, quo loco te mors expectet; itaque tu illam omni loco expecta.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxvi, 7.

12 Come, let us take a muster speedily:
Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 133.

And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 14.

13 'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight tomorrow

Thou must be made immortal.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv,
sc. 2, l. 67.

14 Death is here and death is there,
Death is busy everywhere,
All around, within, beneath,
Above is death—and we are death.

SHELLEY, Death. (1820)

15 All buildings are but monuments of death,
All clothes but winding-sheets for our last knell,

All dainty fattings for the worms beneath,
All curious music but our passing bell:
Thus death is nobly waited on, for why?
All that we have is but death's livery.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Death.

16 He that would die well must always look for death, every day knocking at the gates of the grave.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. ii, sec. 1.

17 In mid whirl of the dance of Time ye start,
Start at the cold touch of Eternity,
And cast your cloaks about you, and depart:
The minstrels pause not in their minstrelsy.

WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

18 He is look'd for in hovel, and dreaded in hall—
The king in his closet keeps hatchment and pall—

The youth in his birthplace, the old man at
home,

Make clean from the door-stone the path to the tomb.

N. P. WILLIS, The Death of Harrison.

19 The rising morn cannot assure
That we shall end the day,
For Death stands ready at the door
To take our lives away.

UNKNOWN. From an old sampler.

VII—Death: Its Thousand Doors

20 Death hath so many doors to let out life.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Custom of the Country. Act ii, sc. 2.

There are a thousand doors to let out life.

MASSINGER, Parliament of Love. Act iv, sc. 2.

Death hath a thousand doors to let out life.

I shall find one.

MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act v, sc. 4.

14 Die we must, every mother's son of us.

THOMAS WILSON, Rhetorique, 72. (1560)

IX—Death: The Silent Majority

15 'Tis long since Death had the majority.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 449.

1 All that tread
The globe are but a handful to the tribes
That slumber in its bosom.
BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

2 The long, mysterious Exodus of Death.
LONGFELLOW, The Jewish Cemetery at Newport.

3 He went over to the majority. (Tamen abiit ad plures.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42.

Times before you, when even living men were antiquities; when the living might exceed the dead, and when to leave this world could not be properly said to go unto the greater number. (Abiit ad plures.)

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia: Dedication. (1658)

This Mirabeau's work, then, is done. He sleeps with the primeval giants. He has gone over to the majority: "Abiit ad plures."

CARLYLE, Essays: Mirabeau.

4 To our graves we walk
In the thick footprints of departed men.
ALEXANDER SMITH, Horton. l. 570.

5 Life is the desert, life the solitude;
Death joins us to the great majority.
EDWARD YOUNG, Revenge. Act iv, sc 1. (1721)

6 That fatal sergeant, Death, spares no degree.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Ninth Hour. St. 114.

This fell sergeant, death, Is strict in his arrest.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 347.

7 The winds of Luxor fiercely blow
Against my cheeks the dust of kings,
Egyptians of the long ago,
Pharaohs and serfs, the overflow
And undertow of centuries—
Dust, dust, dust.

ROBERT CARY, The Winds of Luxor.

8 Death levels all things. (Omnia mors æquat.)
CLAUDIAN, De Raptu Proserpinæ. Bk. ii, l. 302.

Death and dice level all distinctions.

Death makes equal the high and low.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Be Merry, Friends.

Life levels all men: death reveals the eminent.
BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

9 Death levels master and slave, the sceptre and the law, and makes unlike like. (Mors dominos servis et sceptris ligionibus æquat, dissimiles simili conditione trahens.)

WALTER COLMAN, La Danse Macabre. (c. 1633) The phrase, "Mors sceptris ligionibus

æquat," is included in Vers Sur la Mort of the 12th century, and has been used as a motto and inscription. (See Notes and Queries, May, 1917, p. 134.)

10 This quiet Dust was Gentlemen and Ladies,
And Lads and Girls;
Was laughter and ability and sighing,
And frocks and curls.

EMILY DICKINSON, This Quiet Dust.

The dust we tread upon was once alive.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 66.

The whole earth is a sepulchre for famous men.
THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. ii, sec. 43.

Where is the dust that has not been alive?
The spade, the plough, disturb our ancestors;
From human mould we reap our daily bread.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 92.

11 The prince, who kept the world in awe,
The judge, whose dictate fix'd the law,
The rich, the poor, the great, the small,
Are levell'd: death confounds 'em all.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, fab. 16, l. 143.

All alike are rich and richer,
King with crown, and cross-legged stitcher,
When the grave hides all.

R. W. GILDER, Drinking Song.

12 One destin'd period men in common have,
The great, the base, the coward, and the brave,
All food alike for worms, companions in the grave.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Meditation on Death.

13 Pale Death, with impartial step, knocks at the poor man's cottage and at the palaces of kings. (Pallida Mors æquo pulsat pede pauperum tabernas Regumque turres.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 13.

14 They die
An equal death—the idler and the man
Of mighty deeds.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 396. (Bryant, tr.)

With equal pace, impartial Fate
Knocks at the palace, as the cottage gate.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4. (Francis, tr.)

The equal earth is opened alike to the poor man and the sons of kings. (Æqua tellus Pauperi recluditur, regumque pueris.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 18, l. 32.

15 We are all driven by the same force; our lots are cast into the urn, sooner or later to be drawn forth, to send us to Charon's boat for our eternal exile.

(Omnes eodem cogimur, omnium
Versatur urna serius ocus
Sors exitura et nos in æternum
Exsilium impositura cumbæ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 3, l. 25.

Alike for high and low
Death votes. His mighty urn will throw
Each name or soon or late.

(Æqua lege Necessitas
Sortitur insignes et imos:

Omne capax movet urna nomen.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode i, l. 16. (Marshall, tr.)

1 When death comes, he respects neither age nor merit. He sweeps from this earthly existence the sick and the strong, the rich and the poor, and should teach us to live to be prepared for death.

ANDREW JACKSON, Letter: My Dear E., 12 Dec., 1824.

2 Where's Cæsar gone now, in command high and able?

Or Xerxes the splendid, complete in his table?

Or Tully, with powers of eloquence ample?

Or Aristotle, of genius the highest example?

JACOPONE DA TODI, De Contemptu Mundi. (Coles, tr.)

3 In life's last scene what prodigies surprise,
Fears of the brave, and follies of the wise!
From Marlborough's eyes the streams of dot-age flow,

And Swift expires a driveller and a show.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 313.

4 Produce the urn that Hannibal contains,
And weigh the mighty dust which yet remains:
And is that all?

(Expende Hannibalem; quot libras in duce summo Invenies?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 147. (Gifford, tr.)

Here lies Tibullus: of all that he was there remains scarcely enough to fill a small urn. (Jacet, ecce, Tibullus; Vix manet e toto, parva quod urna capit!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 39.

So peaceful rests, without a stone, a name,
What once had beauty, titles, wealth, and fame,
How lov'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot;
A heap of dust alone remains of thee;
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be!

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 69.

5 There is a Reaper, whose name is Death,
And, with his sickle keen,
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
And the flowers that grow between.

LONGFELLOW, The Reaper and the Flowers.

Oh, not in cruelty, not in wrath,

The Reaper came that day;

'Twas an angel visited the green earth,

And took the flowers away.

LONGFELLOW, The Reaper and the Flowers.

"Who gathered this flower?" The gardener answered, "The Master." And his fellow-servant held his peace.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Epilogue, l. 7.

9 The little broken bones of men,
They ride on every wind that blows,
With dust of Memphis whirled again
And this year's dust of last year's rose.

J. U. NICHOLSON, I Would Remember Constant Things.

The sun will rise, the winds that ever move
Will blow our dust that once were men in love.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sonnets.

10 I sometimes think that never blows so red
The Rose as where some buried Cæsar bled;
That every Hyacinth the Garden wears
Dropped in her Lap from some once lovely Head.

5 To what base uses we may return, Horatio!
Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till we find it stopping a bung-hole?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 222.

Imperious Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:
O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act. v, sc. 1, l. 234.

Dead Cæsar who "stops bungholes" in the cask.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 556.

6 O proud death,
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 375.

7 The glories of our blood and state
Are shadows, not substantial things;
There is no armour against Fate,
Death lays his icy hand on kings.

XI—Death: Its Terrors

14 My God, how lonely The dead are!

GUSTAVO BÉCQUER, They Closed Her Eyes.
(Masefield, tr.)

15 How shocking must thy summons be, O
Death!

To him that is at ease in his possessions:
Who, counting on long years of pleasure here,
Is quite unfurnish'd for that world to come!

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 350.

16 Oh! death will find me, long before I tire
Of watching you; and swing me suddenly
Into the shade and loneliness and mire
Of the last land!

RUPERT BROOKE, Sonnet.

17 Oh God! it is a fearful thing
To see the human soul take wing
In any shape, in any mood.

BYRON, The Prisoner of Chillon. Pt. viii.

18 Down to the dust!—and, as thou rott'st
away,

Even worms shall perish on thy poisonous clay.

BYRON, A Sketch.

Out—out are the lights—out all!
And, over each quivering form,
The curtain, a funeral pall,
Comes down with the rush of a storm,
And the angels, all pallid and wan,
Uprising, unveiling, affirm
That the play is the tragedy, "Man,"
And its hero the Conqueror Worm.
E. A. POE, The Conqueror Worm. St. 5.

The knell, the shroud, the mattock, and the grave;

The deep damp vault, the darkness, and the worm;

These are the bugbears of a winter's eve,
The terrors of the living, not the dead.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 10.

1
This is the hour of lead
Remembered if outlived
As freezing persons recollect
The snow—

First chill, then stupor, then
The letting go.

EMILY DICKINSON, After Great Pain.

The world feels dusty
When we stop to die;
We want the dew then,
Honors taste dry.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems, p. 331.

2
Death is king of the world; 'tis his park
Where he breeds life to feed him. Cries of pain
Are music for his banquet.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. ii, l. 446.

3
For who, to dumb Forgetfulness a prey,
This pleasing anxious being e'er resign'd,
Left the warm precincts of the cheerful day,
Nor cast one longing ling'ring look behind?

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. St. 22.

Whatever crazy sorrow saith,
No life that breathes with human breath
Has ever truly long'd for death.

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 394.

4
Come to the bridal-chamber, Death!

Come to the mother's, when she feels,
For the first time, her first-born's breath! . . .
Come when the heart beats high and warm
With banquet-song, and dance, and wine,
And thou art terrible.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bozzaris.

'Tis horrible to die
And come down with our little all of dust,
That Dun of all the duns to satisfy.

THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream.

6
The king of terrors.
Old Testament: Job, xviii, 14.

The grisly terror.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 704.

Death gives us more than was in Eden lost.
This king of terrors is the prince of peace.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 534.

7
All our knowledge merely helps us to die a more painful death than the animals that know nothing.

8
The mode of death is sadder than death itself. (Tristius est leto, leti genus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 91.

More cruel than death itself was the moment of death. (O morte ipsa mortis tempus indignius!)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 16.

It hath often been said that it is not death, but dying, which is terrible.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

9
Grim death.

MASSINGER, The Roman Actor. Act iv, sc. 2.

10
That must be our cure,
To be no more; sad cure; for who would lose,

Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
Those thoughts that wander through eternity,
To perish rather, swallowed up and lost
In the wide womb of uncreated night,
Devoid of sense and motion?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 145.

11
I fled, and cry'd out, Death!
Hell trembled at the hideous name, and sigh'd
From all her caves, and back resounded,
Death!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 787.

Before mine eyes in opposition sits
Grim Death, my son and foe.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 803.

Death Grinned horrible a ghastly smile, to hear
His famine should be filled, and blessed his maw
Destined to that good hour.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 845.

12
The sorrows of death compassed me.
Old Testament: Psalms, xviii, 4.

13
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhoused, disappointed, unaneled;
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head;
O horrible! O horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 76.

Ah, what a sign it is of evil life
Where death's approach is seen so terrible!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 5.

'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord,
When men are unprepared and look not for it.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 64.

Ay, but to die, and go we know not where;
To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot;
This sensible warm motion to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region of thick-ribbed ice; . . .
Imagine howling!—'tis too horrible!
The weariest and most loathed worldly life
That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment

Can lay on nature, is a paradise
To what we fear of death.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 118.

Death in itself is nothing; but we fear
To be we know not what, we know not where.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act iv, sc. 1.

1 Woe, destruction, ruin, and decay;
The worst is death, and death will have his
day.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 102.

2 Who pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood
With that grim ferryman which poets write
of,

Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 45.

The Pilot of the Galilean lake,
Two massy keys he bore of metals twain,
(The golden opes, the iron shuts amain).

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 109.

3 What may we take into the vast Forever?
That marble door

Admits no fruit of all our long endeavor,
No fame-wreathed crown we wore,
No garnered lore.

XII—Death: The Fear of Death

4 Better die once for all than to live in continual terror. (Βέλτιον θανεῖν ἅπασι ἢ διὰ βίον τρέμειν.)

ÆSOP, Fables.

It is better to die once for all than to live in constant expectation of death.

JULIUS CÆSAR. (PLUTARCH, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius. Ch. 57, sec. 5.)

He that fears death lives not.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

That life is better life, past fearing death,
Than that which lives to fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act v, sc.
1, l. 402.

5 Of all things that are feared, the least is death.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, *Doomsday: The Second
Hour*. St. 73.

6 Why be afraid of death
As though your life were breath? . . .
Why should you fear to meet
The Thresher of the wheat?

MALTBIE D. BABCOCK, Emancipation.

7 Men fear death, as children fear to go in the dark: and as that natural fear in children is increased with tales, so is the other.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Death.

There is no passion in the mind of man so weak,
but it mates and masters the fear of death. . . .

Revenge triumphs over death; love slights it;
honour aspireth to it; grief flieth to it.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Death.

8 I am not so much afraid of death as ashamed thereof; 'tis the very disgrace and ignominy of our natures.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 47.

9 Fear death?—to feel the fog in my throat,
The mist in my face,
When the snows begin, and the blasts denote
I am nearing the place,
The power of the night, the press of the storm,
The post of the foe;
Where he stands, the Arch Fear in a visible form,

Yet the strong man must go.

ROBERT BROWNING, Prospice.

10 Must I consume my life—this little life—
In guarding against all may make it less?
It is not worth so much! It were to die
Before my hour, to live in dread of death.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 438.

11 He who cares naught for death cares naught for threats. (Qui ne craint point la mort ne craint point les menaces.)

CORNEILLE, Le Cid. Act ii, sc. 1.

12 Far happier are the dead, methinks, than they

Who look for death, and fear it every day.

WILLIAM COWPER, On Invalids.

13 In every hedge and ditch both day and night
We fear our death, of every leaf affright.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Dayes. Day i, pt. 3.

14 'Tis not to die we fear, but to die poorly,
To fall forgotten, in a multitude.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Humorous Lieutenant.
Act ii, sc. 2.

15 What man can look on Death unterrified?

R. W. GILDER, Love and Death. St. 2.

16 The ancients dreaded death: the Christian can only fear dying.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

17 Nay, why should I fear Death,
Who gives us life, and in exchange takes breath?

FREDERICK LAWRENCE KNOWLES, Laus Mortis.

18 Death stands above me, whispering low
I know not what into my ear;

Of his strange language all I know
Is, there is not a word of fear.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Death.

1 Neither the sun nor death can be regarded without flinching. (Le soleil ni la mort ne se peuvent regarder fixement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 26.

2 What tragic tears bedim the eyes!
What deaths we suffer ere we die!

3 Neither dread your last day nor desire it.
(Summum nec metuas diem nec optas.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 47.

4 What fear of death is like the fear beyond it?
MONTGOMERY, Pelican Island. Canto viii.

5 Yet as with morn my lad finds fears were vain,

So death shall give to age its toys again.

JOHN RICHARD MORELAND, Gifts.

6 Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxiii, 4.

7 The fear of death is worse than death itself.
(Timor mortis morte pejor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 54.

8 Cowards may fear to die; but courage stout,
Rather than live in snuff, will be put out.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, On the Snuff of a Candle, the night before his death. (BAYLEY, Life of Raleigh, p. 157.)

9 And come he slow, or come he fast,
It is but Death who comes at last.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 30.

10 To die without fear of death is a desirable death. (Optanda mors est, sine metu mortis mori.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 849.

11 Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 32.

Fear is my vassal: when I frown, he flies;
A hundred times in life a coward dies.

JOHN MARSTON, The Insatiate Countess.

12 It seems to me most strange that men should
fear;

Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 35.

13 The sense of death is most in apprehension;
And the poor beetle that we tread upon,

In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great
As when a giant dies.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 78.

14 He that on his pillow lies,
Fear-embalmed before he dies,
Carries, like a sheep, his life,
To meet the sacrificer's knife,
And for eternity is prest,
Sad bell-wether to the rest.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Passing Bell.

15 For him who has faith, death, so far as it is his own death, ceases to possess any quality of terror. The experiment will be over, the rinsed beaker returned to its shelf, the crystals gone dissolving down the waste-pipe; the duster sweeps the bench.

H. G. WELLS, First and Last Things.

16 It is not the fear of death
That damps my brow.

N. P. WILLIS, André.

17 Man makes a death, which nature never
made:

Then on the point of his own fancy falls;
And feels a thousand deaths, in fearing one.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 15.

XIII—Death: Its Finality

18 No lamentation can loose
Prisoners of death from the grave.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 527.

19 It is only the dead who do not return. (Il n'y a que les morts qui ne reviennent pas.)

BERTRAND BARÈRE, Speech, in the Convention, 1794. A pun on revenir, to return, or to haunt; and so, sarcastically, "Only dead men's ghosts do not haunt us." (CARLYLE,
French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. 6, ch. 3.)
Napoleon used the expression in regard to himself on 17 July and 12 Dec., 1816.
(O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

20 Sure! 'tis a serious thing to die! My soul!
What a strange moment must it be, when, near

Thy journey's end, thou hast the gulf in view!
That awful gulf, no mortal e'er repass'd
To tell what's doing on the other side!

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 369.

21 Who e'er returned to teach the Truth, the things of Heaven and Hell to limn?
And all we hear is only fit for grandam-talk and nursery-hymn.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. viii,
st. 8.

22 "What is it like down there, Charides?" "Very dark." "And what of return?" "All lies."

"And Pluto?" "A myth." "I am done for!"
(Ἀπωλόμηναι.)

CALLIMACHUS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 524.)

Hath any loved you well, down there,
Summer or winter through?
Down there, have you found any fair,
Laid in the grave with you?
Is death's long kiss a richer kiss
Than mine was wont to be—
Or have you gone to some far bliss
And quite forgotten me?

ARTHUR O'SHAUGHNESSY, Chaitivel: Sarrazine's Song.

1 Now he travels that dark road, whence, they say, no one returns. (Qui nunc it per iter tenebricosum Illuc, unde negant redire quemquam.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode iii, l. 11.

Back from the tomb No step has come.

GEORGE CROLY, The Genius of Death.

Ah, of the dead, who hath returned from Hades?
(Καὶ τίς θανόντων ἦλθεν ἐξ Ἅιδου πάλιν.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 297.

2 Can storied urn or animated bust
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath?
Can Honour's voice provoke the silent dust,
Or Flattery soothe the dull cold ear of death?

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 41.

3 We . . . dry away,
Like to the summer's rain;
Or as the pearls of morning's dew,
Ne'er to be found again.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Daffodils.

4 And not a man appears to tell their fate.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. x, l. 308. (Pope, tr.)
The unreturning brave.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 27.

5 Before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death.

Old Testament: Job, x, 21.

I shall go the way whence I shall not return.

Old Testament: Job, xvi, 22.

6 But O the heavy change, now thou art gone,
Now thou art gone and never must return!
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 37.

7 When You and I behind the Veil are past,
Oh, but the long, long while the World shall last,

Which of our Coming and Departure heeds
As the Sea's self should heed a pebble-cast.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 47. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

When you and I have ceased Champagne to Sup,

Be sure there will be More to Keep it Up;

And while we pat Old Tabby by the fire,
Full many a Girl will lead her Brindle Pup.

JOSEPHINE DASKAM BACON, Omar for Ladies.

8 Strange—is it not?—that of the myriads who Before us passed the door of Darkness
through,

Not one returns to tell us of the road
Which to discover we must travel too.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 68. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

9 The ancient sage, who did so long maintain
That bodies die, but souls return again,
With all the births and deaths he had in store,
Went out Pythagoras, and came no more.

PRIOR, Ode to the Memory of Colonel Villiers.

10 The greedy Acheron does not relinquish his prey.
(L'avare Achéron ne lâche pas sa proie.)
RACINE, Phèdre. Act ii, sc. 5.

Never the grave gives back what it has won!

SCHILLER, Funeral Fantasy. Last line.

11 Death,

The undiscover'd country, from whose bourne
No traveller returns.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 79.

The wave from which there is no return. (Inremeabilis undæ.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 425. The Styx.

12 Absence and death, how differ they? and how Shall I admit that nothing can restore
What one short sigh so easily removed?

Death, life, and sleep, reality and thought—
Assist me, God, their boundaries to know,
O teach me calm submission to thy Will!

WORDSWORTH, Maternal Grief, l. 8.

13 And, round us, Death's inexorable hand Draws the dark curtain close; undrawn no
more.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 812.

When one is dead, it is for a long time. (Quand on est mort, c'est pour longtemps.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

XIV—Death: The Comforter

14 Death were great joy. (Θανάειν πολλή χάρις.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 550.

Men hate death unjustly; it is the greatest defence against their many ills.

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 191.

Death is rather to be chosen than a toilsome life, and not to be born is better than to be born to misery.

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 229.

15 Thou alone, O Death, art the healer of deadly ills. (Μόνος σὺ, θάνατε, τῶν ἀνηκέστων κακῶν ἱατρός.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Philoctetes. Frag. 229.

O Death the Healer, scorn thou not, I pray,
To come to me: of cureless ills thou art
The one physician. Pain lays not its touch
Upon a corpse.

ÆSCHYLUS, Philoctetes. Fr. 229. (Plumptre, tr.)

We all labour against our own cure, for death is the cure of all diseases.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 10.

Death is the receipt for all evils. (La mort est la recepte à tous maux.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

Death is the common medicine for woe—
The peaceful haven, which the shatter'd bark
In tempest never seeks.

FREDERIC REYNOLDS, Werter. Act iii, sc. 1.

He had rather
Groan so in perpetuity, than be cured
By the sure physician, death.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 6.

Why fear death, the mother of rest, death that puts an end to sickness and the pains of poverty? It happens but once to mortals, and no man ever saw it come twice.

AGATHIAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 69.)

Death is the port where all may refuge find,
The end of labour, entry into rest.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Tragedy of Darius.

They rest from their labours.

Book of Common Prayer: Burial of the Dead.

Death is a friend of ours; and he that is not ready to entertain him is not at home.

FRANCIS BACON, Remains: An Essay on Death.

O Death! the poor man's dearest friend—
The kindest and the best.

BURNS, Man Was Made to Mourn.

The friend of those that have no friend but me.

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Death.

Life that dares send A challenge to his end,
And when it comes say, "Welcome, friend!"

RICHARD CRASHAW, *Wishes to His (Supposed)
Mistress*. St. 29.

And Death is beautiful as feet of friend
Coming with welcome at our journey's end.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis: Postscript, l. 51.

My name is Death: the last best friend am I.

SOUTHEY, Carmen Nuptiale. St. 87.

O thou true comforter! the friend of all
Who have no friend beside!

SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. i, l. 320.

Beyond the shining and the shading,
Beyond the hoping and the dreading
I shall be soon.

Love, rest and home!

Sweet hope!

Lord! tarry not, but come.

HORATIUS BONAR, Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping.

How he lies in his rights of a man!
Death has done all death can.

And, absorbed in the new life he leads,
He recks not, he heeds

Nor his wrong nor my vengeance; both strike
On his senses alike,

And are lost in the solemn and strange
Surprise of the change.

ROBERT BROWNING, After.

Raise then, the hymn to Death. Deliverer!
God hath anointed thee to free the oppressed
And crush the oppressor.

W. C. BRYANT, Hymn to Death, l. 33.

Now death as welcome to me comes
As e'er the month of May.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, The Bristowe Tragedy.

Death is rest from labor and misery. (Aut laborem ac miseriarum quietam.)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. iv, ch. 4, sec. 7.

Death—Life's servitor and friend—the guide
That safely ferries us from shore to shore!

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Sleep.

Two hands upon the breast,
And labour's done;

Two pale feet crossed in rest,—
The race is won.

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Now and Afterwards. Published with sub-title, "Two hands upon the breast, and labour is past"—
Russian Proverb.

How can death be evil, when in its presence
we are not aware of it?

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes.
Sec. 68.)

We are too stupid about death. We will not learn

How it is wages paid to those who earn,
How it is the gift for which on earth we yearn,

To be set free from bondage to the flesh;
How it is turning seed-corn into grain,
How it is winning Heaven's eternal gain,
How it means freedom evermore from pain,
How it untangles every mortal mesh.

WILLIAM CROSWELL DOANE, Death.

Past is the Fear of future Doubt;
The Sun is from the Dial gone;

The Sands are sunk, the Glass is out,
The Folly of the Farce is done.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy.

Death, the great reconciler.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 4.

Better thou mayest, but worse thou canst not be

Than in this vale of tears and misery.

THOMAS FLATMAN, A Thought of Death.

When on my sick-bed I languish,
Full of sorrow, full of anguish;
Fainting, gasping, trembling, crying,
Panting, groaning, speechless, dying,
Methinks I hear some gentle spirit say,
Be not fearful, come away.

THOMAS FLATMAN, A Thought of Death.
(1674)

Forgetfulness and silence are the privileges of the dead. (Ἀθήνη καὶ σιγὴ νεκρῶν γέρας.)

SAINT GREGORY THE THEOLOGIAN, Epigram.
(Greek Anthology. Bk. viii, No. 236.)

3
When life is woe, And hope is dumb,
The World says, "Go!" The Grave says,
"Come!"

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Betel-Nuts.

4
From the winter's grey despair,
From the summer's golden languor,
Death, the lover of Life,
Frees us for ever.

W. E. HENLEY, In Hospital: Ave, Cæsar!

Out of the strain of the Doing,
Into the peace of the Done;
Out of the thirst of Pursuing,
Into the rapture of Won.

Sunday at Home, May, 1910.)

6
There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest.

Old Testament: Job, iii, 17.

And the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.

TENNYSON, The May Queen. Last line.

7
Which long for death, but it cometh not; and dig for it more than for hid treasures.

Old Testament: Job, iii, 21.

8
How happier far than life, the end
Of souls that infant-like beneath their burden bend.

JOHN KEBLE, Holy Innocents.

9
And, as she looked around, she saw how Death,
the consoler,

Laying his hand upon many a heart, had healed it forever.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. v, l. 88.

So Nature deals with us, and takes away
Our playthings one by one, and by the hand
Leads us to rest so gently, that we go

Scarce knowing if we wish to go or stay,
Being too full of sleep to understand

How far the unknown transcends the what we know.

LONGFELLOW, Nature, l. 9.

10
None but those shadowed by death's approach are suffered to know that death is a blessing; the gods conceal this from those who have life before them, in order that they may go on living. (Agnoscere solis Permissum, quos jam tangit vicinia fati, Victurosque dei celant, ut vivere durent, Felix esse mori.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iv, l. 518.

No one knows but that death is the greatest of all human blessings. (Οἶδε μὲν, γὰρ οὐδεὶς τὸν θάνατον οὐδ' εἰ τυγχάνει τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ.)

PLATO, Apologia of Socrates. Sec. 29.

I am that blessing which men fly from—Death.

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Countess Laura.

11
Think not disdainfully of death, but look on it with favor, for Nature wills it like all else. . . . Look for the hour when the soul shall emerge from this its sheath, as now thou awaitest the moment when the child she carries shall come forth from thy wife's womb.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 3.

12
Love lent me wings; my path was like a stair;
A lamp unto my feet, that sun was given;
And death was safety and great joy to find;

But dying now, I shall not climb to Heaven.

MICHELANGELO, Sonnet LXIII: After Sunset.

13
Death is delightful. Death is dawn,
The waking from a weary night
Of fevers unto truth and light.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Even So. St. 35.

14
Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's victory won,
Now cometh rest.

Claimed for JOHN MILLS, a banker of Manchester, in Life of John Mills, by his widow, as having been written by him in 1878, in memory of a favorite brother who died in 1877. (See Notes and Queries, vol. iv, p.
167.) Claimed for DR. EDWARD HAZEN
PARKER, by his brother, as having been used in his Funeral Ode on President Garfield, 1881. (See Notes and Queries, vol. vii, p.
406.) Brought to public notice by Alexandra, Princess of Wales, who used verse on tombstone of an old nurse in Brompton cemetery and on cards accompanying funeral wreaths.

15
Hence, with denial vain, and coy excuse,
So may some gentle Muse
With lucky words favour my destined urn,
And as he passes turn,
And bid fair peace be to my sable shroud.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 18.

Eas'd the putting off
These troublesome disguises which we wear.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 739.

1
How sweet is death to those who weep,
To those who weep and long to die!
THOMAS MOORE, Elegiac Stanzas.

Deep, deep—where never care or pain,
Shall reach her innocent heart again!
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Prologue ii.

2
At end of Love, at end of Life,
At end of Hope, at end of Strife,
At end of all we cling to so—
The sun is setting—must we go?
At dawn of Love, at dawn of Life,
At dawn of Peace that follows Strife,
At dawn of all we long for so—
The sun is rising—let us go.
LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON, At End.

3
Death is not grievous to me, for it rids me of my pains. (Nec mihi mors gravis est posito morte dolores.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iii, l. 471.

4
For death betimes is comfort, not dismay,
And who can rightly die needs no delay.
PETRARCH, To Laura in Death. Canz. v, st. 6.

5
Good is a man's death which destroys the evils of life. (Bona mors est homini, vitæ qui exstinguit mala.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 64.

6
O eloquent, just, and mighty Death! whom none could advise, thou hast persuaded; what none hath dared, thou hast done; . . . thou hast drawn together all the far stretched greatness, all the pride, cruelty, and ambition of man, and covered it over with these two narrow words, Hic jacet!

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, History of the World.
Bk. v, pt. i, ch. 6.

7
Ye old, old dead, and ye of yesternight, Chieftains, and bards, and keepers of the sheep,

By every cup of sorrow that you had,
Loose me from tears, and make me see aright
How each hath back what once he stayed to weep:

Homer his sight, David his little lad!
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Tears.

8
Death is the privilege of human nature,
And life without it were not worth our taking:
Thither the poor, the pris'ner and the mourner
Fly for relief, and lay their burthens down.
NICHOLAS ROWE, The Fair Penitent. Act v, sc.
1, l. 138.

9
Out of the chill and the shadow,
Into the thrill and the shine;

Out of the dearth and the famine,
Into the fulness divine.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER, Going Home.

10
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 297.

11
Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he hates him much

That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 313.

12
I have a strong feeling that I shall be glad when I am dead and done for—scrapped at last to make room for somebody better, cleverer, more perfect than myself.

BERNARD SHAW. (HENDERSON, G. B. S., p. 484.)

13
He has out-soared the shadow of our night;
Envy and calumny, and hate and pain,
And that unrest which men miscall delight,
Can touch him not and torture not again;
From the contagion of the world's slow stain,
He is secure, and now can never mourn
A heart grown cold, a head grown grey in vain.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 40.

14
Peace, rest, and sleep are all we know of
death,
And all we dream of comfort.

SWINBURNE, In Memory of John William Inchbold.

Out of the world's way, out of the light,
Out of the ages of worldly weather,
Forgotten of all men altogether.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 15.

At the door of life, by the gate of breath,
There are worse things waiting for men than
death.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 20.

15
A sudden death is but a sudden joy, if it takes a man in the state and exercises of virtue.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. 3, sec. 9.

16
"Consider well," the voice replied,
"His face, that two hours since hath died;
Wilt thou find passion, pain, or pride?"
TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 241.

17
Each person is born to one possession which outvalues all the others—his last breath.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

Dear, beauteous death, the jewel of the just!
Shining nowhere but in the dark;
What mysteries do lie beyond thy dust,
Could man outlook that mark!

HENRY VAUGHAN, They Are All Gone.

1 No more for him life's stormy conflicts,
Nor victory, nor defeat—no more time's dark events,
Charging like ceaseless clouds across the sky.
WALT WHITMAN, Hush'd Be the Camps Today.

2 Come lovely and soothing death,
Undulate round the world, serenely arriving,
arriving,
In the day, in the night, to all, to each,
Sooner or later, delicate death.

WALT WHITMAN, Memories of President Lincoln. Sec. 14.

Prais'd be the fathomless universe
For life and joy, and for objects and knowledge curious,
And for love, sweet love—but praise! praise!
praise!
For the sure-enwinding arms of cool-enfolding
death.

WALT WHITMAN, Memories of President Lincoln. Sec. 14.

3 And I will show that there is no imperfection in the present, and can be none in the future,
And I will show that whatever happens to anybody it may be turn'd to beautiful results,
And I will show that nothing can happen
more beautiful than death.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanok.
Sec. 12.

4 O heart sore-tried! thou hast the best,
That Heaven itself could give thee,—rest,
Rest from all bitter thoughts and things!
How many a poor one's blessing went
With thee beneath the low green tent
Whose curtain never outward swings!

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 386.

5 Death, of all pain the period, not of joy.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 519.

XV—Death: Gentle Death

6 Her suffering ended with the day;
Yet lived she at its close,
And breathed the long, long night away
In statue-like repose.

But when the sun, in all his state,
Illumed the eastern skies,
She passed through Glory's morning gate,
And walked in Paradise.

JAMES ALDRICH, A Death-bed.

Her washing ended with the day,
Yet lived she at its close,
And passed the long, long night away
In darning ragged hose.

But when the sun in all its state
Illumed the Eastern skies,

She passed about the kitchen grate
And went to making pies.
PHOEBE CARY, The Wife.

7 Strew on her roses, roses,
And never a spray of yew.

In quiet she reposes:

Ah! would that I did too.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Requiescat.

Her cabin'd, ample Spirit,
It flutter'd and fail'd for breath.

To-night it doth inherit
The vasty Hall of Death.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Requiescat.

8 So fades a summer cloud away;
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er;

So gently shuts the eye of day;

So dies a wave along the shore.

ANNA L. BARBAULD, The Death of the Virtuous.

9 Aye, Death is tender, Death is fair—
A tall, pale one with spun-gold hair.

ELLEN M. CARROLL, An Appreciation.

10 She passed away like morning dew

Before the sun was high;

So brief her time, she scarcely knew

The meaning of a sigh.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Early Death.

Love was her guardian Angel here,
But Love to Death resigned her;
Though Love was kind, why should we fear
But holy Death is kinder?

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Early Death.

11 So softly death succeeded life in her,
She did but dream of heaven, and she was there.

DRYDEN, Eleonora, l. 315.

12 We watch'd her breathing thro' the night,
Her breathing soft and low,

As in her breast the wave of life

Kept heaving to and fro. . . .

Our very hopes belied our fears,

Our fears our hopes belied;

We thought her dying when she slept,

And sleeping when she died.

THOMAS HOOD, The Death-bed.

13 Then with no fiery, throbbing pain,

No cold gradations of decay,

Death broke at once the vital chain,

And freed his soul the nearest way.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Levet.

14 Then fell upon the house a sudden gloom,
A shadow on those features fair and thin;
And softly, from the hushed and darkened room,

Two angels issued, where but one went in.
LONGFELLOW, The Two Angels. St. 9.

1 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word.

New Testament: Luke, ii, 29.

2 Softly woo away her breath,
Gentle death!

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Softly Woo Away Her Breath.

3 When faith and love which parted from thee never,
Had ripened thy just soul to dwell with God,

Meekly thou didst resign this earthly load
Of death, called life; which us from life doth sever.

Thy works, and alms, and all thy good endeavour,

Stayed not behind, nor in the grave were trod;

But, as Faith pointed with her golden rod,
Followed thee up to joy and bliss for ever.

MILTON, Sonnets: On the Memory of Mrs. Thomson.

4 The breast where roses could not live
Has done with rising and with falling.

E. A. ROBINSON, For a Dead Lady.

5 Death, death; oh, amiable, lovely death!

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 34.

6 Now is done thy long day's work;
Fold thy palms across thy breast,
Fold thine arms, turn to thy rest.

Let them rave.

TENNYSON, A Dirge.

7 God laid His fingers on the ivories
Of her pure members as on smoothèd keys.
And there out-breathed her spirit's harmonies.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait. St. 7.

8 Into the Silent Land!

Ah! who shall lead us thither? . . .

Into the land of the great Departed,

Into the Silent Land!

(Ins stille Land!)

Wer leitet uns hinüber? . . .

Ins Land der grossen Toten,

Ins stille Land.)

JOHANN GAUDENZ VON SALIS-SEEWIS, Lied.
(Longfellow, tr.)

9 His Maker kissed his soul away,
And laid his flesh to rest.

ISAAC WATTS, The Presence of God.

Died of the kisses of the lips of God.

FREDERIC W. H. MYERS, St. Paul. Of Moses.

10 Yet there was round thee such a dawn
Of light, ne'er seen before,

As fancy never could have drawn,

And never can restore.

CHARLES WOLFE, To Mary.

11 Come gentle death, the ebb of care;
The ebb of care, the flood of life.

UNKNOWN, Upon Consideration of the State of This Life. (TOTTET, Miscellany, 1557.)

12 Is it then so sad a thing to die? (Usque adeone mori miserum est?)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 646.

XVI—Death: The Last Sleep

13 They do neither plight nor wed
In the city of the dead,

In the city where they sleep away the hours.

RICHARD BURTON, The City of the Dead.

14 The silence of that dreamless sleep
I envy now too much to weep.

BYRON, And Thou Art Dead.

Death, so called, is a thing which makes men weep,

And yet a third of life is passed in sleep.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 3.

15 He but sleeps the holy sleep. (Ἰερὸν ὕπνον κοιμάται.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 11.

16 Sleep on, beloved, sleep, and take thy rest;
Lay down thy head upon thy Saviour's breast;
We love thee well, but Jesus loves thee best—
Good-night! Good-night! Good-night!

SARAH DOUDNEY, The Christian's Good-Night.

Ira D. Sankey wrote the music for this hymn, which was sung at the funeral of Dr. Charles H. Spurgeon, 3 Feb., 1892.

17 Father in thy gracious keeping
Leave we now thy servant sleeping.

JOHN LODGE ELLERTON, Now the Laborer's Task is O'er.

18 Death is an eternal sleep. (La mort est un sommeil éternel.)

JOSEPH FOUCHÉ, who, as minister of police under the Directory, in 1794, ordered this inscription placed on the gates of French cemeteries.

Who sleeps the longest is the happiest;

Death is the longest sleep.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, The Fatal Marriage. Act v, sc. 2.

19 And wish my friend as sound a sleep
As lads' I did not know,

That shepherded the moonlit sheep

A hundred years ago.

A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad. No. 9.

20 They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or storm, each in the windowless palace of rest. Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battles, in the roar of conflict, they found the serenity of death.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Memorial Day Vision.

1 She is not dead, but sleepeth.

New Testament: Luke, viii, 52; Matthew, ix, 24.

2 A death-like sleep,
A gentle wafting to immortal life.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 434.

3 There's nothing terrible in death;
'Tis but to cast our robes away,
And sleep at night, without a breath
To break repose till dawn of day.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, In Memory of E. G.

4 Till tired, he sleeps, and life's poor play is o'er.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 282.

5 Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep.

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 10; xxiv, 33.

6 He giveth his beloved sleep.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 2.

Of all the thoughts of God that are Borne inward into souls afar,
Along the Psalmist's music deep,
Now tell me if that any is,
For gift or grace, surpassing this:
"He giveth his beloved—sleep?"

E. B. BROWNING, The Sleep. St. 1.

And friends, dear friends, when it shall be
That this low breath is gone from me,
And round my bier ye come to weep,
Let One, most loving of you all,
Say, "Not a tear must o'er her fall!
He giveth his beloved sleep."

E. B. BROWNING, The Sleep. St. 9.

And if there be no meeting past the grave,
If all is darkness, silence, yet 'tis rest.
Be not afraid, ye waiting hearts that weep,
For still He giveth His beloved sleep,
And if an endless sleep He wills, 'tis best.

MRS. THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY, Lines, on the grave of Thomas Henry Huxley.

7 She slept the sleep of the just. (Elle s'endormit du sommeil des justes.)

RACINE, Abrégé de l'Histoire de Port Royal.
Vol. iv, l. 517.

8 Sleep that no pain shall wake,
Night that no morn shall break,
Till joy shall overtake

Her perfect peace.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Dream-Land.

Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking,
Morn of toil, nor night of waking.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 31.

9 For a man who has done his natural duty, death is as natural and welcome as sleep.

GEORGE SANTAYANA. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 115.)

10 To die: to sleep;
No more; and by a sleep to say we end
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep;
To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause: there's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 60.

11 Then death rock me asleep, abridge my dole-ful days!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 211.

This sleep is sound indeed, this is a sleep
That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd
So many English kings.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 35.

12 He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 29.

After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 23.

And the fever called "Living"
Is conquered at last.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, For Annie.

13 The best of rest is sleep,
And that thou oft provok'st; yet grossly fear'st

Thy death, which is no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 17.

14 That sweet sleep which medicines all pain.

SHELLEY, Julian and Maddalo, l. 499.

15 Yes, 'twill only be a sleep:
When, with songs and dewy light,
Morning blossoms out of Night,
She will open her blue eyes
'Neath the palms of Paradise,
While we foolish ones shall weep.

EDWARD ROWLAND SILL, Sleeping.

16 Sleep; and if life was bitter to thee, pardon;
If sweet, give thanks; thou hast no more to
live;

And to give thanks is good, and to forgive.

SWINBURNE, Ave Atque Vale. St. 17.

Who knows but on their sleep may rise
Such light as never heaven let through
To lighten earth from Paradise?

SWINBURNE, A Baby's Death. Sec. 4.

The end is come of pleasant places,
The end of tender words and faces,
The end of all, the popped sleep.

SWINBURNE, Ilicet. St. 1.

God's finger touched him, and he slept.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxxv, st. 5.

Sleep till the end, true soul and sweet.
Nothing comes to thee new or strange.

Sleep full of rest from head to feet;
Lie still, dry dust, secure of change.
TENNYSON, To J. S. St. 19.

XVII—Death: The Good Death

Nobly to die were better than to save one's life. (Καλῶς τεθνήσκει κάλλιον ἂν μάλλον ἢ σεσῶσθαι.)

ÆSCHYLUS [?], Fragments. Frag. 235.

That was indeed to live—
At one bold swoop to wrest
From darkling death the best
That Death to Life can give!

T. B. ALDRICH, Shaw Memorial Ode. Pt. iii.

Happy he who dies before he calls for death to take him away. (Mori est felicitis antequam mortem invocet.)

FRANCIS BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 27.

But whether on the scaffold high,
Or in the battle's van,
The fittest place where man can die
Is where he dies for man.

MICHAEL BARRY, The Place to Die. (Dublin Nation, 28 Sept., 1844.)

We must all die!
All leave ourselves, it matters not where,
when,

Nor how, so we die well.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Valentinian. Act
iv, sc. 4.

For I say, this is death and the sole death,
When a man's loss comes to him from his gain,

Darkness from light, from knowledge ignorance,
And lack of love from love made manifest.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert.

The finest sight beneath the sky
Is to see how bravely a man can die.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, O'Murtoigh.

One likes to die where his father before him
Died, with the same sky shinin' o'er him.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, White Rose and Red. Pt.
iii, 2.

He died, as erring man should die,
Without display, without parade;
Meekly had he bowed and prayed,
As not disdainng priestly aid,
Nor desperate of all hope on high.
BYRON, Parisina. St. 17.

Then is it best, as for a worthy fame,
To dyen when that he is best of name.
CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 2197.

And could we choose the time, and choose aright,
'Tis best to die, our honour at the height.
DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. iii, l. 1088.

It is better to die, since death comes surely,
In the full noon-tide of an honored name,
Than to lie at the end of years obscurely,
A handful of dust in a shroud of shame.
J. J. ROCHE, Sir Hugo's Choice.

At length, fatigued with life, he bravely fell,
And health with Boerhaave bade the world farewell.

BENJAMIN CHURCH, The Choice. (1754)

And, having lived a trifler, die a man.
COWPER, Retirement, l. 14.

So he died for his faith. That is fine—
More than most of us do.

But say, can you add to that line
That he lived for it, too?
ERNEST CROSBY, Life and Death.

Death comes with a crawl, or comes with a pounce,
And whether he's slow or spry,

It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts,
But only, how did you die?
EDMUND VANCE COOKE, How Did You Die?

Some men die early and are spared much care,
Some suddenly, escaping worse than death;
But he is fortunate who happens where
He can exult and die in the same breath.
LOUISE DRISCOLL, The Good Hour.

Of no distemper, of no blast he died,
But fell like autumn fruit that mellow'd long,—

Even wonder'd at, because he dropp'd no sooner.

Fate seem'd to wind him up for fourscore years,

Yet freshly ran he on ten winters more;
Till like a clock worn out with eating time,
The wheels of weary life at last stood still.
DRYDEN, Œdipus. Act iv, sc. 1.

The game of death was never played more nobly.

JOHN FLETCHER, A Wife for a Month. Act v, 1.

Death never won a stake with greater toil.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis. St. 5.

1 Those who have endeavoured to teach us to die well, have taught few to die willingly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Boswell, Life, June, 1861.)

2 Yea, say that I went down to death
Serene and unafraid.

Still loving Song, but loving more
Life, of which Song is made!

HARRY KEMP, Farewell.

3 And grant that when I face the grisly Thing,
My song may trumpet down the gray Perhaps;

Let me be as a tune-swept fiddlestring
That feels the Master Melody—and snaps.

JOHN G. NEIHARDT, Let Me Live Out My Years.

4 So that he seemed to depart not from life, but from one home to another. (Ut non ex vita, sed ex domo in domum videretur migrare.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Atticus.

5 Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!

Old Testament: Numbers, xxiii, 10.

"O let me die his death!" all nature cries.

"Then live his life."—All nature falters there.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 367.

6 He died full of years and honors, as illustrious for those he refused as for those he accepted. (Et ille quidem plenus annis abiit, plenus honoribus, illis etiam, quos recusavit.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, sec. 2. Referring to Virginius Rufus.

Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season.

Old Testament: Job, v, 26.

The sweet wise death of old men honourable.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Althæa.

7 Thou, Abelard! the last sad office pay,
And smooth my passage to the realms of day:
See my lips tremble, and my eyeballs roll,
Suck my last breath, and catch my flying soul!
Ah, no!—in sacred vestments mayst thou
stand,

The hallow'd taper trembling in thy hand,
Present the cross before my lifted eye,
Teach me at once, and learn of me, to die.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 321.

8 Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them.

New Testament: Revelation, xiv, 13.

9 So die as though your funeral

Ushered you through the doors that led

Into a stately banquet hall
Where heroes banqueted.

ALAN SEEGER, Maktoob.

See also BRYANT under LIFE AND DEATH.

10 It is not a question of dying earlier or later, but of dying well or ill. And dying well means escape from the danger of living ill. (Citius mori aut tardius ad rem non pertinet, bene mori aut male ad rem pertinet. Bene autem mori est effugere male vivendi periculum.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 6.

11 They say he made a good end.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 186.

A' made a finer end and went away an it had been any christom child.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 11.

Mr. Badman died . . . as they call it, like a chrisom-child, quietly and without fear.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

12 And so espoused to death, with blood he sealed

A testament of noble-ending love.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 26.

And, to add greater honours to his age

Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 67.

Nothing in his life

Became him like the leaving it; he died

As one that had been studied in his death

To throw away the dearest thing he owed,

As 't were a careless trifle.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 4, l. 7.

They say he parted well, and paid his score;

And so, God be with him!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 52.

13 How oft, when men are at the point of death,
Have they been merry! which their keepers call

A lightning before death.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3,
l. 88.

14 To die well is the chief part of virtue. (Καλῶς θυήσκειν ἀρετῆς μέρος ἐστὶ μέγιστον.)

SIMONIDES, Epitaph. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 253.)

15 Now sure 's the moment when I ought to die,

Lest some hereafter bitterness in life

Impair this joy.

(Nunc est perfectio, interfici quom perpeti me possum,

Ne hoc gaudium contaminet vita ægritudine aliqua.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 551. (Act iii, sc. 5.)

16 As the last bell struck, a peculiar sweet smile shone over his face, and he lifted up his head a little, and quickly said, "Adsum!" and fell back. It was the word we used at school, when names were called; and lo, he, whose heart was as that of a little child, had answered to his name, and stood in the presence of The Master.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Bk. i, ch. 42.

How beautiful it is for man to die
Upon the walls of Zion! to be called,
Like a watch-worn and weary sentinel,
To put his armor off and rest—in heaven!

N. P. WILLIS, On the Death of a Missionary.

2
But when the great and good depart,
What is it more than this—
That Man, who is from God sent forth,
Doth yet again to God return?—
Such ebb and flow must ever be,
Then wherefore should we mourn?

WORDSWORTH, Lines on the Expected Dissolution of Mr. Fox.

XVIII—Death: One Fight More

3
And of all the ancient songs
Passing to the swallow-blue halls
By the dark streams of Persephone,
This only remains:
That in the end we turn to thee, Death,
That we turn to thee, singing One last song.
RICHARD ALDINGTON, Choricos.

To die would be an awfully big adventure.
JAMES M. BARRIE, Peter Pan. Act iii.
Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life.

CHARLES FROHMAN, his last words before going down with the Lusitania, torpedoed by the Germans, 7 May, 1915. (As reported by Rita Jolivet.) Mr. Frohman had produced Barrie's Peter Pan, and so was familiar with the preceding quotation.

Death is only an incident in life.
Message from Voltaire's Ghost. (DE MORGAN, Joseph Vance. Ch. 11.)

5
We shall go down with reluctant tread
Rose-crowned into the darkness.
RUPERT BROOKE, The Hill.
Proud, then, clear-eyed and laughing, go to greet
Death as a friend!
RUPERT BROOKE, Second Best.

6
I was ever a fighter, so—one fight more,
The best and the last!
I would hate that death bandaged my eyes,
and forbore,
And bade me creep past.
No! let me taste the whole of it, fare like my peers,
The heroes of old,
Bear the brunt, in a minute pay glad life's arrears
Of pain, darkness and cold.
ROBERT BROWNING, Prospice.

7
Like a led victim, to my death I'll go,
And dying, bless the hand that gave the blow.
DRYDEN, The Spanish Friar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 64.

We bear it calmly, though a ponderous woe,
And still adore the hand that gives the blow.
JOHN POMFRET, Verses to His Friend under Affliction.

Pleas'd to the last he crops the flowery food,
And licks the hand just rais'd to shed his blood.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 83.

8
So be my passing!
My task accomplished and the long day done,
My wages taken, and in my heart
Some late lark singing,
Let me be gathered to the quiet west,
The sundown splendid and serene,
Death.
W. E. HENLEY, Margaritæ Sorori.

I would always be in the thick of life,
Threading its mazes, sharing its strife;
Yet—somehow, singing!
When at the road's end shadows longer grow—
Into the last long shadow let me go,
Still—somehow, singing.
ROSSELLE MERCIER MONTGOMERY, Somehow, Singing.

10
Give me my scallop-shell of quiet,
My staff of faith to walk upon,
My scrip of joy, immortal diet,
My bottle of salvation,
My gown of glory, hope's true gage;
And thus I'll take my pilgrimage.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, His Pilgrimage.

11
'Tis but to die,
'Tis but to venture on that common hazard,
Which many a time in battle I have run;
'Tis but to do, what, at that very moment,
In many nations of the peopled earth,
A thousand and a thousand shall do with me.
NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act iv, sc. 1.

12
Death in my boots may-be, but fighting, fighting!
ROBERT W. SERVICE, Song of the Soldier-Born.

13
If I must die
I will encounter darkness as a bride,
And hug it in mine arms.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 83.

14
We count it death to falter, not to die. (Οὐ τὸ θανεῖν, ἀλλὰ φυνγεῖν θάνατος.)
SIMONIDES [?], Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 431.)

15
Each day, I gird my feeble soul with prayer:
May then the blood of Bayard be my own;

May I ride hard and straight and smite him square,
And in a clash of arms be overthrown;
And as I fall hear through the evening air
The distant horn of Roland, faintly blown.

FREDERIC F. VAN DE WATER, The Last Tourney.

And when I face the tyrant Death, may Bok be with me in the gloom, to decorate my final breath with tassels and an ostrich plume.

WALT MASON, Helpful Mr. Bok.

1 My foothold is tenon'd and mortis'd in granite,

I laugh at what you call dissolution,
And I know the amplitude of time.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 20.

2 Farewell, sweet dust; I was never a miser:
Once, for a minute, I made you mine:
Now you are gone, I am none the wiser,
But the leaves of the willow are bright as wine.

ELINOR WYLIE, Farewell, Sweet Dust.

XIX—Death and Fame

3 Above all, believe it, the sweetest canticle is "Nunc dimittis," when a man hath obtained worthy ends and expectations. Death hath this also: that it openeth the gate to good fame, and extinguisheth envy.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Death. (1597)

Death's a pleasant road that leads to fame.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Verses, l. 48. (1690)

Death opens the gate of Fame and shuts the gate of Envy after it.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. v, ch. 3.

4 Peace to the mighty dead!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lines to Commemorate the Day of Victory in Egypt.

There studious let me sit,
And hold high converse with the mighty dead.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 431.

5 The rest were vulgar deaths unknown to fame.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 394. (Pope, tr.)

6 No more famous shade will dwell in the house of death. (Non erit in Stygia notior umbra domo.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 52.

7 Weep him dead and mourn as you may,
Me, I sing as I must:

Blessed be Death, that cuts in marble
What would have sunk to dust!

EDNA ST. VINCENT MLLAY, Keen.

8 Death makes no conquest of this conqueror:
For now he lives in fame, though not in life.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 87.

9 A Power is passing from the earth.

WORDSWORTH, Lines on the Expected Dissolution of Mr. Fox, l. 17.

XX—Death and Beauty

10 Underneath this sable hearse
Lies the subject of all verse:
Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother:
Death, ere thou hast slain another,
Fair, and learn'd, and good as she,
Time shall throw a dart at thee.

WILLIAM BROWNE, *Epitaph on the Countess
Dowager of Pembroke*.

11 Thy day without a cloud hath passed,
And thou wert lovely to the last.

BYRON, And Thou Art Dead, l. 50.

So fair, so calm, so softly seal'd,
The first, last look by death reveal'd!

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 88.

12 Oh, who will find a lover for Death and for her only?

Though all men kiss her lips, they kiss against their will.

Oh, pity Death! Wistful she is, and exquisite and lonely

And all who sleep with her lie curiously still.

RALPH CHEYNEY, A Lover for Death.

13 One more Unfortunate,
Weary of breath,
Rashly importunate,
Gone to her death!

Take her up tenderly,
Lift her with care;
Fashion'd so slenderly,
Young, and so fair!

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs.

Past all dishonour,
Death has left on her
Only the beautiful.

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs.

14 In dreams she grows not older,
The lands of Dream among,
Though all the world wax colder,
Though all the songs be sung,
In dreams doth he behold her
Still fair and kind and young.

ANDREW LANG, Lost Love.

15 Die when you will, you need not wear
At Heaven's Court a form more fair
Than Beauty here on earth has given;
Keep but the lovely looks we see—
The voice we hear—and you will be
An angel ready-made for Heaven!

THOMAS MOORE, To —. A translation of "Moria pur quando vuol, non è bisogna mu-tar ni faccia ni voce per esser un Angelo," the words addressed by Lord Herbert of Cherbury to the beautiful nun at Murano.

And should you visit now the seats of bliss,
You need not wear another form but this.

JOHN OLDHAM, To Madam L. E.

1 Death aims with fouler spite at fairer marks.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Poems.

Death loves a shining mark, a signal blow.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 1010.

2 A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn
her.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 5, l. 62.

Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5,
l. 28.

Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty;
Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3,
l. 92.

3 She died in beauty, like a rose
Blown from its parent stem.

8 The dead abide with us. Though stark and cold,
Earth seems to grip them, they are with us still:
They have forged our chains of being for good or ill,
And their invisible hands these hands yet hold.

12 Ha! Dead! Impossible! It cannot be!
I'd not believe it though himself should swear
it.

HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotonthologos. Act ii,
sc. 4.

Is he then dead?

What, dead at last! quite, quite, for ever dead!
CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act v, sc. 1.

13 It singeth low in every heart,
We hear it each and all,—
A song of those who answer not,
However we may call;
They throng the silence of the breast,
We see them as of yore,—
The kind, the brave, the true, the sweet,
Who walk with us no more.

JOHN WHITE CHADWICK, Auld Lang Syne.

14 You may give over plow, boys,
You may take the gear to the stead,
All the sweat o' your brow, boys,
Will never get beer and bread.
The seed's waste, I know, boys,
There's not a blade will grow, boys,
'Tis cropped out, I trow, boys,
And Tommy's dead.

SYDNEY DOBELL, Tommy's Dead.

But Tom's no more—and so no more of Tom.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 20.

15 Covetous Death bereaved us all,
To aggrandize one funeral.
The eager fate which carried thee
Took the largest part of me:
For this losing is true dying;
This is lordly man's down-lying,
This his slow but sure reclining,
Star by star his world resigning.

EMERSON, Threnody.

16 Old Grimes is dead; that good old man
We never shall see more:

He used to wear a long black coat,

XXII—Death: Not Lost, but Gone Before

16 The buried are not lost, but gone before.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, The Excursion.

Thou art but gone before,
Whither the world must follow.

BEN JONSON, Epitaph on Sir John Roe. (DODD, Epigrammatists, p. 190.)

Gone before

To that unknown and silent shore.

CHARLES LAMB, Hester.

17 Oh! there at last, life's trials past,
We'll meet our loved once more,

Whose feet have trod the path to God—
 "Not lost, but gone before."

CAROLINE ELIZABETH SARAH NORTON, Not Lost, But Gone Before.

Those that he loved so long and sees no more,
 Loved and still loves—not dead, but gone before.
 SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 746.

Dear is the spot where Christians sleep,

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Life.

4 O thou soul of my soul! I shall clasp thee again,

And with God be the rest!

ROBERT BROWNING, Prospice.

I know thou art gone to the home of thy rest—
 Then why should my soul be so sad?

I know thou art gone where the weary are blest,
 And the mourner looks up, and is glad;

I know thou hast drank of the Lethe that flows
 In the land where they do not forget,

That sheds over memory only repose,
 And takes from it only regret.

THOMAS KIBBLE HERVEY, I Know Thou Art Gone.

5 Oh, write of me, not "Died in bitter pains,"
 But "Emigrated to another star!"

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Emigravit.

Nor sink those stars in empty night:
 They hide themselves in heaven's own light.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Friends.

6 'Tis sweet, as year by year we lose

Friends out of sight, in faith to muse
 How grows in Paradise our store.

JOHN KEBLE, Burial of the Dead.

7 It is an old belief
 That on some solemn shore,

Beyond the sphere of grief,
 Dear friends shall meet once more

J. G. LOCKHART, Lines Sent in a Letter to Carlyle, 1 April, 1842.

8 They are not dead; life's flag is never furled:
 They passed from world to world.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Our Dead, Overseas.

9 And may we find, when ended is the page,
 Death but a tavern on our pilgrimage.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Word.

10 If we could know
 Which of us, darling, would be first to go,
 Who would be first to breast the swelling tide
 And step alone upon the other side—
 If we could know!

JULIA HARRIS MAY, If We Could Know.

11 They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet
 Quaff immortality and joy.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 637. (1674 ed.)

12 And with the morn those angel faces smile
 Which I have loved long since and lost awhile.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Pillar of the Cloud.

13 They that love beyond the world, cannot be separated. Death cannot kill what never dies.
 Nor can Spirits ever be divided that love and and live in the same Divine Principle; the Root and Record of their Friendship. Death is but crossing the world, as Friends do the Seas;
 they live in one another still.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude. Pt. ii.

14 I am borne darkly, fearfully, afar;
 Whilst, burning through the inmost veil of Heaven,

The soul of Adonais, like a star,
 Beacons from the abode where the Eternal are.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 55.

15 He is not dead, this friend; not dead,
 But, in the path we mortals tread,

Got some few, trifling steps ahead,
 And nearer to the end;

So that you, too, once past the bend,
 Shall meet again, as face to face this friend

You fancy dead.

Henceforward, listen as we will,
The voices of that hearth are still;
Look where we may, the wide earth o'er
Those lighted faces smile no more. . . .
Yet Love will dream, and Faith will trust (Since He who knows our need is just)
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must.

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 187.

Passed on, beyond our mortal vision,
But now the thought is robbed of gloom,
Within the Father's many mansions
Still dwelling in another room.

The one whose going left us lonely
Is scaling heights undreamed of yore,
And guided on by Love's unfolding,
Has gone upstairs and shut the door.

4
No funeral gloom, my dears, when I am gone, Corpse-gazings, tears, black raiment, graveyard grimness;

Think of me as withdrawn into the dimness,
Yours still, you mine; remember all the best
Of our past moments, and forget the rest;
And so, to where I wait, come gently on.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, No Funeral Gloom.

Copied by Ellen Terry on the flyleaf of her Imitation of Christ, and under it, "I should wish my children, relatives and friends to observe this when I die." This wish was carried out.

Weep awhile, if ye are fain,—
Sunshine still must follow rain;
Only not at death,—for death,
Now I know, is that first breath
Which our souls draw when we enter
Life, which is of all life centre.

EDWIN ARNOLD, After Death in Arabia.

5
He who died at Azan sends
This to comfort all his friends:
Faithful friends! It lies, I know,
Pale and white and cold as snow;

And ye say, "Abdallah's dead!"
Weeping at the feet and head,
I can see your falling tears,
I can hear your sighs and prayers;
Yet I smile and whisper this:
"I am not the thing you kiss;
Cease your tears and let it lie;
It was mine—it is not I."

EDWIN ARNOLD, After Death in Arabia.

Behold—not him we knew!
This was the prison which his soul looked through.

O. W. HOLMES, The Last Look.

6
But never be a tear-drop shed
For them, the pure, enfranchised dead.

MARY E. BROOKS, Weep Not for the Dead.

7
On that grave drop not a tear!
Else, though fathom-deep the place,
Through the woolen shroud I wear
I shall feel it on my face.

E. B. BROWNING, Bertha in the Lane. St. 31.

8
Him who is dead and gone, honour with remembrance, not with tears. (Τὸν δὲ ἀποχόμενον μνήμῃ τιμᾶτε, μὴ δάκρυσιν.)

der MEMORY.

9
When I am dead, forget me, dear,
For I shall never know,
Though o'er my cold and lifeless hands
Your burning tears shall flow;
I'll cancel with my living voice
The debt you owe the dead—
Give me the love you'd show me then,
But give it now instead.

LADY CELIA CONGREVE, When I Am Dead.

10
Make little weeping for the dead, for he is at rest.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxii, 11.

When the dead is at rest, let his remembrance rest; and be comforted for him, when his spirit is departed from him.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 23.

Weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him.
Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxii, 10.

11
When I am dead, no pageant train
Shall waste their sorrows at my bier,
Nor worthless pomp of homage vain
Stain it with hypocritic tear.
EDWARD EVERETT, Alaric the Visigoth.

12
Thou art gone to the grave! but we will not deplore thee,
Though sorrows and darkness encompass the tomb.

REGINALD HEBER, Hymns: At a Funeral.

13
Let dirges be absent from what you falsely deem my death, and unseemly show of grief and lamentation! Restrain all clamor and forego the idle tribute of a tomb!

(Absint inani funere neniae
Luctusque turpes et querimoniae;
Compesce clamorem ac sepulchri
Mitte supervacuos honores.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 20, l. 21.

<sup>1</sup> You come not, as aforetime, to the headstone every day,

And I, who died, I do not chide because, my friend, you play;

Only, in playing, think of him who once was kind and dear,

And, if you see a beauteous thing, just say, he is not here.

<sup>3</sup> Weep not for him who departs from life, for there is no suffering beyond death. (Οὐδὲν γὰρ θανάτου δεύτερόν ἐστι πάθος.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 59.)

<sup>4</sup> We have no need of strains of sorrow and lamentation.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 398.

The silent organ loudest chants
The master's requiem.

EMERSON, Dirge.

<sup>5</sup> And when committed to the dust I'd have Few tears, but friendly, dropped into my grave.

JOHN POMFRET, The Choice, l. 164.

<sup>6</sup> Weep not, O friend, we should not weep:
Our friend of friends lies full of rest;

No sorrow rankles in her breast,
Fallen fast asleep, She sleeps below,
She wakes and laughs above;
To-day, as she walked, let us walk in love;
To-morrow, follow so.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, My Friend.

<sup>7</sup> When I am dead, my dearest,
Sing no sad songs for me;

Plant thou no roses at my head,
Nor shady cypress tree:
Be the green grass above me
With showers and dewdrops wet;

And if thou wilt, remember,
And if thou wilt, forget.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Song.

<sup>8</sup> Let not the eyes be dry when we have lost a friend, nor let them overflow. We may weep, but we must not wail. (Nec sicci sint oculi amisso amico nec fluant. Lacrimandum est, non plorandum.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiii, sec. 1.

<sup>9</sup> Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead; excessive grief the enemy to the living.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 1, l. 64.

<sup>10</sup> No longer mourn for me when I am dead
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:

Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it; for I love you so
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot

If thinking on me then should make you woe.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxxi.

<sup>11</sup> Come not, when I am dead,
To drop thy foolish tears upon my grave,
To trample round my fallen head,
And vex the unhappy dust thou wouldst not save.

There let the wind sweep and the plover cry;
But thou, go by.

TENNYSON, Come Not When I Am Dead.

<sup>12</sup> Oh, stanch thy bootless tears, thy weeping is in vain;

I am not lost, for we in heaven shall one day meet again.

UNKNOWN, The Bride's Burial. (Roxburghe Ballads.)

XXIV—Death: De Mortuis

<sup>13</sup> Speak not evil of the dead, but call them blessed. (Τὸν τεθνηκότα μὴ κακολόγει, ἀλλὰ μακάριζε.)

CHILLO. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium, cxxv, 15; DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilo, i, 69.) The Latin form of the proverb is, "De mortuis nil nisi bonum."

Speak no ill of the dead. (Τὸν τεθνηκότα κακῶς ἀγορεύειν.)

OLON, one of his laws. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 21.)

<sup>14</sup> Wherefore I praised the dead which are already dead, more than the living which are yet alive.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 2.

<sup>15</sup> Let not thy jests, like mummy, be made of dead men's flesh. Abuse not any that are departed; for, to wrong their memories, is to rob their ghosts of their winding-sheets.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, p. 146.

How can I speak into a grave? How can I battle with a shroud? Silence is a duty and a doom.

ROSCOE CONKLING, after Garfield's assassination. (STODDARD, As I Knew Them, p. 114.)

1 war not with the dead.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 485. (Pope, tr.) Said by Charles V of Luther.

It is not right to exult over slain men.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, l. 412. Quoted by John Bright in his speech on America, 29 June, 1867.

Brave men ne'er warred with the dead and vanquished. (Nullum cum victis certamen et æthere cassis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 104.

2 The record of a generous life runs like a vine around the memory of our dead, and every sweet, unselfish act is now a perfumed flower.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Tribute to Eben C. Ingersoll.

3 He doth sin that doth belie the dead.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 98.

Beat not the bones of the buried.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 666.

Speak me fair in death.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 275.

4 War not with the fallen, nor wound the dead. What valour is there in slaying the slain?

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1029.

5 All men are wont to praise him who is no more.

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. ii, ch. 45, sec. 1.

6 Nor shall thy death be without honor among the nations. (Neque hoc sine nomine letum Per gentis erit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 846.

7 Death softens all resentments, and the consciousness of a common inheritance of frailty and weakness modifies the severity of judgment.

J. G. WHITTIER, Ichabod: Note.

XXV—Death: Rest Lightly, Earth

8 Lie lightly on my ashes, gentle earth.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act iv, sc. 3.

Upon thy burned body lie lightly, gentle earth.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Maid's Tragedy. Act i, sc. 2.

9 Light lay the earth on Billy's breast,

His chicken heart's so tender;

But build a castle on his head,—

His skull will prop it under.

ROBERT BURNS, On a Noted Coxcomb. [Captain William Roddick, of Corbiston.]

10 May his body rest free from evil. (Corpus requiescat malis.)

ENNIUS, Thyestes. (CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 44, sec. 107.)

11 Earth of Tarentum, keep gently this body of a good man. Lie not heavy upon the stranger. (Γαῖα Ταραντίνων, ἔχε μελῖχος ἀνέρος ἐσθλοῦ τόνδε νέκυν. . . . κείνῳ μὴ βαρὺς ἔσσο τάφος.)

LOLLIUS BASSUS, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 372.)

12 May the earth lie light upon you. (Sit tibi terra levis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 29. An inscription frequently used on Roman tombstones, often indicated by the initials, S.T.T.L. "Requiescat in pace" was also frequently used, represented by the initials, R.I.P.

13 O bones, rest gently in protecting urn, and may the earth weigh light upon your ashes. (Ossa quieta, precor, tuta requiescite in urna, Et sit humus cineri non onerosa tuo!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 67.

May his bones rest gently. (Molliter ossa cubent.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vii, l. 162.

14 Yet shall thy grave with rising flowers be dress'd,

And the green turf lie lightly on thy breast. POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady.

15 Sleep well and peacefully, and above thy untroubled ashes may the earth be light! (Bene placideque quiescas, Terraque securæ sit super ossa levis.)

TIBULLUS, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 4, l. 49.

XXVI—Death the Deathless

16 Death be not proud, though some have called thee

Mighty and dreadful, for, thou art not so, For, those, whom thou think'st, thou dost overthrow,

Die not, poor death, nor yet canst thou kill me. . . .

One short sleep past, we wake eternally, And death shall be no more; death, thou shalt die.

JOHN DONNE, Holy Sonnets. No. x.

Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss. . . . So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men, And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxlvi.

17 Death is the final Master and Lord. But Death must await my good pleasure. I command Death because I have no fear of Death, but only love.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. iii, p. 55.

18 If the red slayer think he slays,

Or if the slain think he is slain,

They know not well the subtle ways

I keep, and pass, and turn again.
EMERSON, Brakma.

1
Death is the only deathless one.
JOHN PAYNE, Kyrielle.

2
In adamantine chains shall Death be bound,
And Hell's grim tyrant feel th' eternal wound.
POPE, Messiah, l. 47.

3
Be absolute for death; either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 4.

XXVII—Death and Birth

4
We weep when we are born, Not when we die!
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Metempsychosis.

The end of birth is death; the end of death is birth: this is ordained!
EDWIN ARNOLD, The Song Celestial. Ch. ii.

6
It is as natural to die as to be born; and to a little infant, perhaps, the one is as painful as the other.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Death.

7
For what remains but that we still should cry
For being born, or, being born, to die?
FRANCIS BACON, The World. (1624)

(1656); HENRY KING, BISHOP OF CHICHESTER,
Poems, p. 145. (1657)

9
With what strife and pains we come into the world we know not, but 'tis commonly no easy matter to get out of it.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 5.

10
Death borders upon our birth, and our cradle stands in the grave.

JOSEPH HALL, Epistles. Epis. 2.

11
He that once is born, once must die.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

12
On parent knees, a naked new-born child,
Weeping thou sat'st while all around thee smiled:

So live, that, sinking to thy life's last sleep,
Calm thou may'st smile, while all around thee
weep.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, On Parent Knees. (From
Enchanted Fruit: Six Hymns to Hindu Deities. See his Life, p. 110.)

When summoned hence to thine eternal sleep,
Oh, may'st thou smile while all around thee weep.
CHARLES WESLEY, On an Infant.

13
We begin to die as soon as we are born, and the end is linked to the beginning. (Nascentes morumur, finiaque ab origine pendet.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. iv, sec. 16.

14
Every one avoids seeing a man born, but all run hastily to see him die. To destroy him we seek a spacious field and a full light: but to construct him we hide ourselves in some dark corner, and work as close as we may.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

15 Dying is something ghastly, as being born is something ridiculous.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 91.

16
The babe is at peace within the womb,
The corpse is at rest within the tomb;
We begin in what we end.

SHELLEY, Fragment: From Rest to Rest.

17
Death is the peak of a life-wave, and so is birth. Death and birth are one.

ABBA HILLEL SILVER. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 40.)

18
Every minute dies a man,
Every minute one is born.

TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin. Pt. iv, st. 9.
"Moment" in later editions.

Every minute dies a man,
And one and one-sixteenth is born.

UNKNOWN, Parody by a Statistician.

19
All goes onward and outward, nothing collapses,
And to die is different from what any one supposed, and luckier.

Has any one supposed it lucky to be born?
I hasten to inform him or her it is just as lucky to die, and I know it.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 6-7.

20
Cradles rock us nearer to the tomb.
Our birth is nothing but our death begun.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 718.

21
To die is all as common as to live;
The one in choice, the other holds in chase;
For from the instant we begin to live
We do pursue and hunt the time to die.

UNKNOWN, The Reign of King Edward III.
Act iv, sc. 4. (1596)

From the day of your birth you begin to die as well as to live.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 20.

XXVIII—Death and the Child

22
At last he came, the messenger,
The messenger from unseen lands:
And what did dainty Baby Bell?
She only crossed her little hands,
She only looked more meek and fair!
We parted back her silken hair,
We wove the roses round her brow—

White buds, the summer's drifted snow—
 Wrapped her from head to foot in flowers . . .

And thus went dainty Baby Bell
 Out of this world of ours.

T. B. ALDRICH, Baby Bell.

1 Be kind to those dear little folks
 When our toes are turned up to the daisies!
 R. H. BARHAM, The Babes in the Wood.

2 Loveliest of lovely things are they
 On earth that soonest pass away.
 The rose that lives its little hour
 Is prized beyond the sculptured flower.
 BRYANT, A Scene on the Banks of the Hudson.

3 Ere sin could blight or sorrow fade,
 Death came with friendly care;
 The opening bud to Heaven conveyed,
 And bade it blossom there.
 S. T. COLERIDGE, Epitaph on an Infant.

4 When the lessons of life are all ended,
 And death says: "The school is dismissed!"
 May the little ones gather around me
 To bid me good night and be kissed.
 CHARLES MONROE DICKINSON, The Children.

5 For such a child I bless God, in whose bosom he is! May I and mine become as this little child.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 27 Jan., 1658.

6 Oh, call my brother back to me!
 I cannot play alone:
 The summer comes with flower and bee,—
 Where is my brother gone?
 FELICIA HEMANS, The Child's First Grief.

7 Here she lies a pretty bud,
 Lately made of flesh and blood;
 Who, as soon fell fast asleep
 As her little eyes did peep.
 Give her strewings, but not stir
 The earth that lightly covers her.
 ROBERT HERRICK, Upon a Child that Died.

8 But still when the mists of Doubt prevail,
 And we lie becalmed by the shores of Age,
 We hear from the misty troubled shore
 The voice of the children gone before,
 Drawing the soul to its anchorage.
 BRET HARTE, A Greyport Legend.

9 Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted: because they were not.
Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxxi, 15; New Testament: Matthew, ii, 18.

10 He seemed a cherub who had lost his way
 And wandered hither, so his stay
 With us was short, and 'twas most meet,
 That he should be no delver in earth's clod,

Nor need to pause and cleanse his feet
 To stand before his God.

J. R. LOWELL, Threnodia.

11 A boy of five years old serene and gay,
 Unpitied Hades hurried me away.
 Yet weep not for Callimachus: if few
 The days I lived, few were my sorrows too.
 LUCIAN, (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 308.)

12 My little daughter lieth at the point of death.
New Testament: Mark, v, 23.

13 She thought our good-night kiss was given,
 And like a lily her life did close;
 Angels uncurtain'd that repose,
 And the next waking dawn'd in heaven.
 GERALD MASSEY, Babe Christabel.

And thou hast stolen a jewel, Death!
 Shall light thy dark up like a Star.
 A Beacon kindling from afar
 Our light of love and fainting faith.
 GERALD MASSEY, Babe Christabel.

14 You scarce would think so small a thing
 Could leave a loss so large:
 Her little light such shadow fling
 From dawn to sunset's marge.
 In other springs our life may be
 In bannered bloom unfurled,
 But never, never match our wee
 White Rose of all the world.
 GERALD MASSEY, Our Wee White Rose.

Those who living fill the smallest space,
 In death have often left the greatest void.
 W. S. LANDOR, Geri.

We miss thy small step on the stair;
 We miss thee at thine evening prayer;
 All day we miss thee, everywhere.
 DAVID MACBETH MOIR, Casa Wappy.

No sound of tiny footfalls filled the house
 With happy cheer.
 ROBERT BUCHANAN, The Scaith o' Bartle.

15 O fairest flower no sooner blown than blasted,
 Soft silken Primrose fading timelessly.
 MILTON, On the Death of a Fair Infant, l. 1.

Think what a present thou to God hast sent,
 And render him with patience what he lent.
 MILTON, On the Death of a Fair Infant, l. 74.

16 With more fortitude does a mother mourn
 one out of many, than she who weeping cries,
 "Thou wert my only one." (Fortius e multis mater desiderat unum, Quam quæ flens clamat. Tu mihi solus eras.)
 OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 463.

17 And, father cardinal, I have heard you say That we shall see and know our friends in heaven:
 If that be true, I shall see my boy again;
 For since the birth of Cain, the first male
 child,

To him that did but yesterday suspire,
There was not such a gracious creature born.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 76.

1 All my pretty ones?
Did you say all? Oh, hell-kite! All?
What! all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 216.

Death never takes one alone, but two!
Whenever he enters in at a door,
Under roof of gold or roof of thatch,
He always leaves it upon the latch,
And comes again ere the year is o'er.
Never one of a household only!

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend: Pt. vi, The Farm-House in the Odenwald.

Insatiate archer! could not one suffice?
Thy shaft flew thrice; and thrice my peace was slain!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 212.

2 Oh! when a Mother meets on high
The Babe she lost in infancy,
Hath she not then, for pains and fears,
The day of woe, the watchful night,
For all her sorrow, all her tears,
An over-payment of delight?
SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. x, st. 11.

3 God, God, be lenient her first night there.
The crib she slept in was so near my bed;
Her blue and white wool blanket was so soft;
The pillow hollowed so it fit her head.

VIOLET ALLEYN STOREY, A Prayer for a Very New Angel.

4 A little soul scarce fledged for earth
Takes wing with heaven again for goal,
Even while we hailed as fresh from birth
A little soul.

A. C. SWINBURNE, A Baby's Death. St. 1.

5 But Thee, deep buried in the silent tomb,
That spot which no vicissitude can find.
Love, faithful love, recalled thee to my mind.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i, No. xxvii. Wordsworth is referring to his second daughter, Catherine, who died in 1812, at the age of four.

Three years she grew in sun and shower,
Then Nature said, "A lovelier flower
On earth was never sown;
This child I to myself will take;
She shall be mine, and I will make
A lady of my own."

WORDSWORTH, Three Years She Grew.

6 —A simple child,
That lightly draws its breath,
And feels its life in every limb,
What should it know of death?

WORDSWORTH, We Are Seven.

"But they are dead; those two are dead!
Their spirits are in Heaven!"

'Twas throwing words away; for still
The little Maid would have her will,
And said, "Nay, we are seven!"
WORDSWORTH, We Are Seven.

HYPSAEUS. (STOBAEUS, Florilegium, cxx, 13.

He whom the gods love dies young, while he has his strength and senses and wits. (Quem di diligunt Adulescens moritur, dum valet sentit sapit.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 816. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

8 "Whom the gods love die young," was said of yore,

And many deaths do they escape by this:

The death of friends, and that which slays even more,

The death of friendship, love, youth, all that is,

Except mere breath.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 12.

10 Whom the gods love die young no matter how long they live.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xxiv, cover.

It has never been satisfactorily determined whether the saying about the darlings of the gods dying young means young in years or young in heart.

E. V. LUCAS, Advisory Ben. Ch. 10.

11 One of the fathers saith . . . that old men go to death, and death comes to young men.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 119.

12 To kill the emotions and so live to old age, or to accept the martyrdom of our passions and die young is our doom.

BALZAC, La Peau de Chagrin, p. 67.

13 Blow out, you bugles, over the rich Dead!

There's none of these so lonely and poor of old,

But, dying, has made us rarer gifts than gold.
These laid the world away: poured out the red Sweet wine of youth; gave up the years to be
Of work and joy, and that unhop'd serene

That men call age, and those who would have been

Their sons, they gave their immortality.

RUPERT BROOKE, The Dead. (1914)

1 But, oh! fell death's untimely frost
That nipt my flower sae early.

ROBERT BURNS, Highland Mary.

2 You also, laughing one,
Tosser of balls in the sun,
Will pillow your bright head
By the incurious dead.

BABETTE DEUTSCH, A Girl.

3 As precious gums are not for lasting fire,
They but perfume the temple, and expire,
So was she soon exhal'd; and vanish'd hence;
A short sweet odour, of a vast expense.
She vanish'd, we can scarcely say she died;
For but a Now, did Heav'n and Earth divide:
She pass'd serenely with a single breath,
This moment perfect health, the next was
death.

JOHN DRYDEN, Eleonora, l. 301.

He was exhal'd; his great Creator drew
His spirit, as the sun the morning dew.

DRYDEN, On the Death of a Very Young Gentleman.

Early, bright, transient, chaste, as morning dew,
She sparkled, was exhal'd, and went to heaven.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 600.

4 Heav'n gave him all at once; then snatch'd
away,
Ere mortals all his beauties could survey;
Just like the flower that buds and withers in a
day.

DRYDEN, On the Death of Amyntas.

5 Earth laughs in flowers to see her boastful
boys

Earth-proud, proud of the earth which is not theirs;

Who steer the plough, but cannot steer their feet

Clear of the grave.

EMERSON, Hamatreya.

6 Young Never-Grow-Old, with your heart of gold

And the dear boy's face upon you,
It is hard to tell, though we know it well,
That the grass is growing upon you.

ALICE FLEMING, Spion Kop.

7 Grieve not that I die young. Is it not well
To pass away ere life hath lost its brightness?
FLORA ELIZABETH HASTINGS, Swan Song.

8 As full-blown poppies, overcharg'd with rain, Decline the head, and drooping kiss the plain,—

So sinks the youth; his beauteous head, de-prest

Beneath his helmet, drops upon his breast.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. viii, l. 371. (Pope, tr.)

9 Who dies in youth and vigour, dies the best, Struck thro' with wounds, all honest on the breast.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 100. (Pope, tr.)

10 Life's pleasure hath he lost—escaped life's pain,

Nor wedded joys nor wedded sorrows knew.

JULIANUS, On a Youth. (Goldwin Smith, tr.)

We that survive perchance may end our days
In some employment meriting no praise;
They have outlived this fear, and their brave ends
Will ever be an honour to their friends.

PHINEAS JAMES, Epitaph to His Stricken Comrades. (1633) James was a shipmaster.

We, growing old, grow stranger to the College, Symbol of youth, where we were young together,

But you, beyond the reach of time and weather,
Of youth in death forever keep the knowledge.

13 Oh, what hadst thou to do with cruel Death,
Who wast so full of life, or Death with thee,
That thou shouldst die before thou hadst grown old!

LONGFELLOW, Three Friends of Mine. Pt. ii.

14 Weep not for those whom the veil of the tomb,
In life's happy morning, hath hid from our eyes,

Ere sin threw a blight o'er the spirit's young
bloom,

Or earth had profan'd what was born for the skies.

THOMAS MOORE, Weep Not for Those.

Death chill'd the fair fountain ere sorrow had stain'd it;

'Twas frozen in all the pure light of its course,
And but sleeps till the sunshine of Heaven has

He would have lived much longer, if he could!

W. B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

<sup>5</sup> I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,

And not have strew'd thy grave.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 268.

Then, after his brief range of blameless days,
The toll of funeral in an angel ear
Sounds happier than the merriest marriage bell.

TENNYSON, The Death of the Duke of Clarence.

<sup>6</sup> The young gentleman, according to Fates and Destinies and such odd sayings, the Sisters
Three and such branches of learning, is indeed deceased; or, as you would say in plain terms, gone to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 64.

XXX—Death: Count No Man Happy

<sup>7</sup> Only when a man's life comes to its end in prosperity dare we pronounce him happy.
(Ὅλβισαι δὲ χρὴ βίον τελευτήσαντ' ἐν εὐεστοῖ φίλῃ.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 928.

<sup>8</sup> Let no one till his death
Be called unhappy. Measure not the work
Until the day's out and the labour done.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 76.

<sup>9</sup> Judge none blessed before his death.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xi, 28.

<sup>10</sup> Account ye no man happy till he die. (Μηδένα νομίζετε εὐτυχεῖν πρὶν ἂν θάνῃ.)

EURIPIDES, Daughters of Troy, l. 510.

Call no mortal blest till thou hast seen his dying day, and how he passed therethrough and came on death.

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 100.

<sup>11</sup> Praise day at night, and life at end.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>12</sup> Our love is like our life;

There's no man blest in either till his end.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, A Fine Companion.
Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>13</sup> None must be counted happy till his death, till his last funeral rites are paid. (Dicique beatus Ante obitum nemo supremaque funera debet.)

OVIM, Metamorphoses. Bk. iii, l. 136.

<sup>14</sup> When the Deity bestows prosperity on a man up to the end, that man we consider happy;
to pronounce anyone happy, however, while he is still living and running the risks of life, is like proclaiming an athlete victorious and crowning him while he is still contending for
the prize.

SOLON, to Cræsus. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon.
Sec. 27.) Cræsus paid no attention to this warning till he was conquered by Cyrus, and lay bound upon the pyre, when he called,
"O Solon!" thrice in a loud voice. Cyrus inquired the reason for the cry, and when he learned it, released Cræsus and permitted him to live. "Thus," adds Plutarch, "Solon had the reputation of saving one king and instructing another by a single saying."

I bid all men watch life's end. ("Ὅρα τέλος μακροῦ βίου.")

SOLON, to Cræsus. Ausonius puts this into Latin: Spectare vitæ jubeo cunctos terminum. (Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 87.)

I call a life happy only after its fated course is run.

(Tunc beatam dico vitam, cum peracta fata sunt.)

SOLON. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum
Sententiæ, l. 29.)

<sup>15</sup> Therefore wait to see life's ending ere thou count one mortal blest;

Wait till, free from pain and sorrow, he has gained his final rest.

(Ἡμέραν ἐπισκοποῦντα μηδὲν ὀλβίζειν, πρὶν ἂν τέρμα τοῦ βίου περάσῃ μηδὲν ἀλγεινὸν παθῶν.)

SOPHOCLES, Œdipus Tyrannus, l. 1529.

There is an old-world saying current still,
"Of no man canst thou judge the destiny
To call it good or evil, till he die."

(Δόγος μὲν ἔστ' ἀρχαῖος ἀνθρώπων φανεῖς, ὥς οὐκ ἂν αἰῶν' ἐκμάθους βροτῶν, πρὶν ἂν θάνῃ τις, οὐτ' εἰ χρηστὸς οὐτ' εἰ τῷ κακός.)

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniæ, l. 1.

Praise no man much until thou see his death.
(Μήπω μέγ' εἵπῃς πρὶν τελευτήσαντ' ἴδῃς.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragment. No. 520. (Plumptre, tr.)

XXXI—Death and Immortality

See also Immortality

<sup>16</sup> Death is another life. We bow our heads

At going out, we think, and enter straight Another golden chamber of the king's,
Larger than this we leave, and lovelier.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

1

To die

Is to begin to live. It is to end
An old, stale, weary work and to commence
A newer and a better. 'Tis to leave
Deceitful knaves for the society
Of gods and goddesses.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Four Plays in One.
(c. 1608)

2

Death with the might of his sunbeam,
Touches the flesh, and the soul awakes.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess.
Pt. xv.

3

To himself every one is an immortal; he may know that he is going to die, but he can never know that he is dead.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books,
p. 25.

4

The life of the dead is placed in the memory of the living. (Vita enim mortuorum in memoria vivorum est posita.)

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. xi, sec. 5.

To live in hearts we leave behind,
Is not to die.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground. St. 6.

I saw a dead man's finer part
Shining within each faithful heart
Of those bereft. Then said I, "This must be His immortality."

THOMAS HARDY, His Immortality.

5

'Tis immortality to die aspiring,
As if a man were taken quick to heaven.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Conspiracy of Charles,
Duke of Byron. Act i, sc. 1.

6

The last day does not bring extinction, but change of place. (Supremus ille dies non exstinctionem, sed commutationem adfert loci.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 49, sec. 117.

7

So when this corruptible shall have put on in-corruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.

O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 54, 55.

How when the light and glow of life wax dim in thickly gathering gloom,
Shall mortal scoff at sting of Death, shall scorn
the victory of the Tomb?

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st. 3.

My sword I give to him that shall succeed me in my pilgrimage, and my courage and skill to him that can get it. My marks and scars I carry with me, to be a witness for me that I have fought his battles who now will be my rewarder.

When the day that he must go hence was come, many accompanied him to the riverside, into which as he went he said: "Death, where is thy sting?" And as he went down deeper, he said:
"Grave, where is thy victory?" So he passed over, and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. Such was the passing of Valiant-for-Truth.

The world recedes; it disappears;
Heav'n opens on my eyes; my ears

With sounds seraphic ring:

Lend, lend your wings! I mount! I fly!

O Grave! where is thy victory?

O Death! where is thy sting?

POPE, The Dying Christian to His Soul.

It is through death and rebirth that this cor-ruptible shall become incorruptible, and this mortal put on immortality. . . . There is only one belief that can rob death of its sting and the grave of its victory; and that is the belief that we can lay down the burden of our wretched little makeshift individualities forever at each lift towards the goal of evolution.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

8

Immortality

Alone could teach this mortal how to die.

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Looking Death
in the Face, l. 77.

9

The quiet nonchalance of death

No daybreak can bestir;

The slow archangel's syllables

Must awaken her.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iv, No. 5.

10

But all lost things are in the angels' keeping,

Love;

No past is dead for us, but only sleeping,

Love;

The years of Heaven with all earth's little pain

Make good,

Together there we can begin again

In babyhood.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, At Last. St. 6.

11

Passed from death unto life.

New Testament: John, v, 24.

12

There is no Death! What seems so is transition;

This life of mortal breath

Is but a suburb of the life elysian,

Whose portal we call Death.

LONGFELLOW, Resignation. (1848)

There is no death! the stars go down

To rise upon some other shore,

And bright in Heaven's jeweled crown,

They shine for ever more.

JOHN LUCKEY MCCREERY, There Is No Death.

(First published in Arthur's Home Magazine, July, 1863. Wrongly ascribed to Bulwer-Lytton. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

There is no such thing as death.
In nature nothing dies.

From each sad remnant of decay
Some forms of life arise.

CHARLES MACKAY, No Such Thing as Death.

1 Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution,
She lives, whom we call dead.

LONGFELLOW, Resignation. St. 7.

2 Emerge thou mayst from the last whelming sea,
And prove that death but routs life into victory.

J. R. LOWELL, Epilogue.

3 I came from God, and I'm going back to God, and I won't have any gaps of death in the middle of my life.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Mary Marston. Ch. 57.

4 Time brings not death, it brings but changes;
I know he rides, but rides afar,
To-day some other planet ranges
And camps to-night upon a star
Where all his other comrades are.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, A Comrade Rides Ahead.

5 From out the throng and stress of lies,
From out the painful noise of sighs,
One voice of comfort seems to rise:
"It is the meaner part that dies."

WILLIAM MORRIS, Comfort.

6 This much, and this is all, we know,
They are supremely blest,
Have done with sin, and care, and woe,
And with their Saviour rest.

JOHN NEWTON, Olney Hymns.

7 The ear, the eye doth make us deaf and blind;
Else should we be aware of all our dead
Who pass above us, through us, and beneath us.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act iii.

8 The righteous hath hope in his death.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 32.

9 This day, which thou fearest as thy last, is the birthday of eternity. (Dies iste, quem tamquam extremum reformidas, æterni natalis est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cii, sec. 26.

10 Even through the hollow eyes of death
I spy life peering.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 270.

Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high;
Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 112.

11 And her immortal part with angels lives.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 19.

12 What a world were this,
How unendurable its weight, if they
Whom Death hath sundered did not meet again!

SOUTHEY, Inscription XVII: Epitaph.

13 Ah, well! for us all some sweet hope lies
Deeply buried from human eyes;
And, in the hereafter, angels may
Roll the stone from its grave away!

WHITTIER, Maud Muller.

14 Nothing is dead, but that which wished to die;

Nothing is dead, but wretchedness and pain.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 41.

XXXII—Death: Last Words

Note:—The reputed last words of famous men are always open to suspicion, but the ones that follow are among the best known and best authenticated. Quotations from the Bible and mere exclamations have been omitted.

15 O, but they say the tongues of dying men
Enforce attention like deep harmony:
Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent in vain,
For they breathe truth that breathe their words in pain.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 5.

A death-bed's a detector of the heart.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 639.

16 This is the last of earth! I am content.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS. (JOSIAH QUINCY, Life of John Quincy Adams.)

17 I have sent for you that you may see how a Christian can die.

JOSEPH ADDISON, shortly before his death, July 17, 1719, to his step-son, Lord Warwick, a young man of irregular life, who himself died soon afterwards.

There taught us how to live; and (oh! too high
The price for knowledge!) taught us how to die.

THOMAS TICKELL, To the Earl of Warwick, On the Death of Mr. Addison. l. 81.

Come and see how a marshal of France can die.
MARSHAL NEX, at the close of the battle of Waterloo. (Venez voir comment meurt un maréchal de France!)

18 I have such sweet thoughts.

ALBERT, Consort of Queen Victoria.

I have had wealth, rank, and power; but if these were all I had, how wretched I should be!

ALBERT, Consort of Queen Victoria.

1 How tired you must be. (Que vous devez être fatiguée.)

ALEXANDER I of Russia, to his wife.

2 Clasp my hand, dear friend, I am dying.

VITTORIO ALFIERI.

3 Give the boys a holiday.

ANAXAGORAS, the philosopher, who taught school, when asked if he wished for anything.

4 Wait till I have finished my problem.

ARCHIMEDES, to the Roman soldier who ordered him to follow.

5 Now comes the mystery.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

6 It is a great consolation to a poet at the point of death that he has never written a line injurious to good morals.

NICHOLAS BOILEAU.

7 I shall hear in heaven.

BEETHOVEN, referring to his deafness.

8 The executioner is, I believe, very expert, and my neck is very slender.

ANNE BOLEYN.

9 Tell mother—tell mother—I died for my country.

JOHN WILKES BOOTH. (Dic. Am. Biog. ii, 451.)

10 I have been dying for twenty years, now I am going to live.

JAMES DRUMMOND BURNS.

11 Don't let the awkward squad fire over my grave.

ROBERT BURNS.

12 I must sleep now.

GEORGE GORDON BYRON.

13 You, too, Brutus! (Et tu, Brute!)

JULIUS CÆSAR, as Brutus stabbed him.

14 The South, the poor South.

JOHN C. CALHOUN. (Dic. Am. Biog. iii, 419.)

15 I go from a corruptible to an incorruptible crown, where no disturbance can have place.

CHARLES I of England, on the scaffold. (HUME, Hist. of Engl., ch. 22.)

Remember!

CHARLES I, to Juxon, Archbishop of Canterbury, just before he laid his head on the block. Readers of Dumas will remember the use he made of this word in the Vicomte de Bragelonne.

16 I fear, gentlemen, I am an unconscionable time a-dying.

CHARLES II of England.

Don't let poor Nelly starve.

CHARLES II, referring to his mistress, Nell Gwynne.

17 Give Dayrolles a chair.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, polite to the last.

18 Remember, we meet again to celebrate the victory.

JOSEPH H. CHOATE, to Arthur Balfour, 13 May, 1917, at the close of exercises at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Mr. Choate died next day. (MARTIN, Life of Joseph Hodges Choate, iii, 391.)

19 What great God is this, that pulls down the strength of the strongest kings?

CLOTAIRE I. (GREGORY OF TOURS, History, iv, 21.)

20 One man have I slain to save a hundred thousand.

CHARLOTTE CORDAY, referring to her murder of Marat.

21 That unworthy hand! That unworthy hand!

THOMAS CRANMER, at the stake, as he thrust into the flames the hand that had signed his apostasy.

22 My desire is to make what haste I can to be gone.

OLIVER CROMWELL.

23 Nurse, it was I who discovered that leeches have red blood.

GEORGES CUVIER, the naturalist, to the nurse who was applying leeches.

24 Be sure you show my head to the mob. It will be a long time ere they see its like.

JACQUES DANTON, to the executioner, at the guillotine.

25 You may go home; the show is over.

DEMONAX, the philosopher, quoting Lucian.

26 Yes, on the ground.

CHARLES DICKENS, to his sister-in-law, who had urged him to lie down.

27 The first step toward philosophy is incredulity.

DENIS DIDEROT.

28 All my possessions for a moment of time.

QUEEN ELIZABETH of England.

29 A strange sight, sir, an old man unwilling to die.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, the "corn-law rhymer."

30 I have had my span of life. All I want now is heaven.

MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH.

31 I do not suffer, my friends: but I feel a certain difficulty of existing. (Je ne souffre pas, mes amis, mais je sens une certaine difficulté d'être.)

BERNARD DE FONTANELLE.

1
I die happy.

CHARLES JAMES FOX.

2
If Mr. Selwyn calls, let him in; if I am alive I shall be very glad to see him, and if I am dead he will be very glad to see me.

HENRY FOX, BARON HOLLAND, referring to George Augustus Selwyn.

A dying man can do nothing easy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, to his daughter who advised him to change his position in bed, that he might breathe more easily.

4
We are over the mountain, we shall go better now. (La montagne est passée, nous irons mieux.)

FREDERICK THE GREAT.

5
We are all going to heaven, and Van Dyck is of the company.

THOMAS GAINSBOROUGH.

6
Wally, what is this? It is death, my boy: they have deceived me.

GEORGE IV of England, to his page, Sir Walthen Waller, who was assisting him to a seat when the end came.

7
I only regret that I have but one life to give for my country.

NATHAN HALE, before mounting the scaffold.

8
Come, my son, and see how a Christian can die.

SIR HENRY HAVELOCK, to his son.

9
I have led a happy life.

WILLIAM HAZLITT.

10
All is lost. Monks, monks, monks!

HENRY VIII of England.

11
Don't turn out the light. (Then, smiling, he added the words of a popular song of the day, 1910) I'm afraid to go home in the dark.

O. HENRY. (C. A. SMITH, O. Henry.)

12
I am about to take my last voyage, a great leap in the dark.

THOMAS HOBBS. (1679) (WATKINS, Anecdotes of Men of Learning.)

The "leap in the dark" is the least to be dreaded.

BYRON, Diary, 5 Dec., 1813.

A little before you made a leap in the dark.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Letters from the Dead.

Now I am for Hobbes' Voyage—a great leap in the dark.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provoked Wife. Act v, sc. 6. Referring to matrimony.

The spiritual life is a grand experiment which ends in an experience; but it is not merely a leap in the dark.

13
I strike my flag.

ISAAC HULL.

14
I must arrange my pillows for another weary night.

WASHINGTON IRVING.

15
Let us cross the river and rest in the shade.

GENERAL "STONEWALL" JACKSON.

16
I resign my spirit to God, my daughter to my country.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

17
God bless you, my dear.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, to Miss Morris, who had come to ask his blessing. (BOSWELL, Life.)

18
I feel the flowers growing over me.

JOHN KEATS.

19
My bed-fellows are cramp and cough—we three all in one bed.

CHARLES LAMB.

20
I die content, I die for the liberty of my country. (Je meurs content, je meurs pour la liberté de mon pays.)

MARSHAL LANNES. Also attributed to Le Pelletier.

21
No one can be more willing to send me out of life than I am desirous to go.

ARCHBISHOP WILLIAM LAUD, at his execution, 1645. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 22.)

22
This side enough is toasted, so turn me, tyrant, eat,

And see whether raw or roasted I make the better meat.

ST. LAURENCE, who was broiled alive on a gridiron. (FOX, Book of Martyrs: St. Laurence.)

23
Let the tent be struck.

GENERAL ROBERT E. LEE.

24
Why do you weep? Did you think I should live forever? I thought it was more difficult to die.

LOUIS XIV of France, to Madame de Maintenon. (MARTIN, History of France, xiv, 91.)

25
May my blood cement your happiness! (Puisse mon sang cimenter votre bonheur!)

LOUIS XVI of France, on the scaffold, 21 Jan., 1793.

26
I shall retire early; I am very tired.

THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY.

1 It is God's way. His will, not ours, be done.
WILLIAM MCKINLEY. (Dictionary of American Biog., xii, 109.)

2 I always talk better lying down.
JAMES MADISON.

3 I want to meet my God awake.
MARIA-THERESA, refusing to take a drug when dying (CARLYLE).

4 Farewell, my children, forever; I am going to your father.
MARIE ANTOINETTE.

5 I see no reason why the existence of Harriet Martineau should be perpetuated.
HARRIET MARTINEAU.

6 After I am dead you will find "Calais" written upon my heart.
MARY Queen of England, referring to the capture of Calais by the French.

7 Poor Carlotta!
EMPEROR MAXIMILIAN of Mexico, referring to his wife.

8 Let me die to the sounds of delicious music.
VICTOR, MARQUIS DE MIRABEAU.

9 See me safe up: for my coming down, I can shift for myself.
SIR THOMAS MORE, on ascending the scaffold. (FROUDE, History of England. Ch. 9.)

This hath not offended the king.
SIR THOMAS MORE, drawing his beard aside as he placed his head upon the block. (BACON, Apothegms. No. 22.)

10 I have too often braved death to fear it.
MURAT, King of Naples, on the scaffold, 13 Oct., 1815.

11 What an artist the world is losing! (Qualis artifex pereo!)
EMPEROR NERO, as he drove a dagger into his throat, rather than be taken alive. (SUE-TONIUS, Lives of the Twelve Cæsars: Nero. Sec. 49.)

12 Die, my dear doctor! That's the last thing I shall do!
VISCOUNT PALMERSTON.

13 Oh, my country! how I leave my country!
WILLIAM PITT, referring to the shattering of the English coalition by the battle of Austerlitz. (Dictionary of National Biography.) Usually erroneously given as "How I love my country!" The authenticity of the phrase has been questioned, and there is some reason to believe that his last articulate utterance was, "I think I could eat one of Bellamy's veal pies."

14 Stay a little longer, Monsieur le Curé, and we will depart together.
MADAME DE POMPADOUR.

15 I am going to seek a grand perhaps; draw the curtain, the farce is played. (Je m'en vais chercher un grand peut-être; tirez le rideau, la farce est jouée.)

RABELAIS. (MOTTEUX, Life.) Motteux, strangely enough, translates this: "I am about to leap into the dark." The story that these were his last words has been pronounced apocryphal by some critics.

His religion, at best, is an anxious wish; like that of Rabelais, "a great Perhaps."
CARLYLE, Burns.

The grand Perhaps!
ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Even going my journey; they have greased my boots already.

FRANÇOIS RABELAIS, on his death-bed, after receiving extreme unction, to a friend who inquired how he was. (BACON, Apothegms, No. 46.) Also attributed to Sir Samuel Garth.

16 'Tis a sharp remedy, but a sure one for all ills.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, feeling the edge of the axe. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 20.)

So the heart is right, it is no matter which way the head lies.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, at his execution, when asked on which side he preferred to lay his head on the block.

17 We perish, we disappear, but the march of time goes on forever.
ERNEST RENAN.

18 I know that all things on earth must have an end, and now I am come to mine.
SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS.

19 So little done, so much to do!
CECIL RHODES.

20 O Liberty! what crimes are committed in thy name!
MADAME ROLAND, from the scaffold.

21 Put out the light.
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

22 I think I shall die to-night.
DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.

23 I am going to see the sun for the last time. (Je m'en vais voir le soleil pour la dernière fois.)
JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU.

24 Leave the grass. (Laissez la verdure.)
GEORGE SAND, meaning that she did not wish her grave covered with bricks or stone.

1 Ah, my children, you cannot cry for me as much as I have made you laugh.

PAUL SCARRON.

2 We slept reasonably, but on the next morning . . .

SIR WALTER SCOTT. Last and unfinished entry in his journal.

God bless you all; I feel myself again.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, to his family.

3 I have been all things, and it avails me naught. (Omnia fui, et nihil expediti.)

EMPEROR SEPTIMIUS SEVERUS. (EUTROPIUS, History, viii, 19.)

4 I die for the good old cause.

ALGERNON SIDNEY, on the scaffold, to which he had been condemned for complicity in the Rye House plot.

5 Crito, we owe a cock to Æsculapius! Be sure that it is paid! (ὦ Κρίτων, τῷ Ἀσκληπιῷ ὀφείλομεν ἀλεκτρούνα.)

SOCRATES, to the friend with whom he had been conversing after drinking the hemlock. (PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 118.) A cock was the usual offering made to Æsculapius, the Greek god of medicine and of healing. The phrase, "To sacrifice a cock to Æsculapius," meant to return thanks—to pay the doctor's bill, as it were—after recovery from illness.

6 I leave this world without a regret.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU.

7 Even in the valley of the shadow of death, two and two do not make six.

LEO TOLSTOY, when, as he was dying, he was urged to return to the fold of the Russian Orthodox Church.

8 Death is but a little word, but 'tis a great work to die.

SIR HARRY VANE, on the scaffold, 1662.

9 An emperor should die standing. (Imperatorem stantem mori oportere.)

VESPASIAN, his last words, as he tried to rise. (SÜETONIUS, Life.)

A bishop ought to die on his legs.

JOHN WOOLTON, Bishop of Exeter, his last words. (1594)

A bishop should die preaching.

JOHN JEWEL, Bishop of Salisbury. (1571)

It becomes not a valiant man to die lying like a beast.

SIWARD, EARL OF NORTHUMBERLAND, rising from his deathbed, 1055, and putting on his armor. "And so he died standing." (CAMDEN, Remains, p. 261.)

The die is cast. (Jacta alea est.)
JULIUS CÆSAR, on crossing the Rubicon, after coming from Gaul, and advancing into Italy against Pompey. (SÆTONTIUS, Twelve Cæsars: Julius. Sec. 32.) The Rubicon has been identified as a brook now called the Fluminico (little river), and Mussolini has recently caused a monument to be erected on its bank, near the village of Savignano, to mark the spot where Cæsar crossed it.
The honor has also been claimed for the Luso, a small stream which empties into the Adriatic near Rimini.
- But finally, with a sort of passion, as if abandoning calculation and casting himself upon the future, and uttering the phrase with which men usually prelude their plunge into desperate and daring fortunes, "Let the die be cast," (Ἐπερίφθω κύβος) he hastened to cross the Rubicon.
PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar. Ch. 32, sec. 6.
- I answered that the die was now cast; I had passed the Rubicon. Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish with my country was my unalterable determination.

JOHN ADAMS, Conversation, with Jonathan Sewall, 1774. (ADAMS, Works. Vol. iv, p. 8.)

1 He only is a well-made man who has a good determination.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Culture.

I like the sayers of No better than the sayers of Yes.

EMERSON, Journals.

ALFRED DE MUSSET. Title of play.

3 Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision: for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision.

Old Testament: Joel, iii, 14. The Valley of Decision is the title of a novel by Edith Wharton.

4 Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,

In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side;

Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight,

Parts the goats upon the left hand, and the sheep upon the right,

And the choice goes by forever 'twixt that darkness and that light.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis. St. 5.

5 Men must be decided on what they will NOT do, and then they are able to act with vigor in what they ought to do.

MENCIUS, Works. Bk. iv, pt. ii, ch. 8.

6 Deliberate as often as you please, but when you decide it is once for all. (Deliberandum est sæpe, statuendum est semel.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 132.

He who considers too much will perform little. (Wer gar zu viel bedenkt wird wenig leisten.)

SCHILLER, The Walk.

7 Swift decisions are not sure. (Φρονεῖν γὰρ οἱ ταχεῖς, οὐκ ἀσφαλεῖς.)

SOPHOCLES, Œdipus Tyrannus, l. 617.

Decide not rashly. The decision made Can never be recalled.

LONGFELLOW, Masque of Pandora: Tower of Prometheus on Mount Caucasus.

8 'Tis fix'd; th' irrevocable doom of Jove; No force can bend me, no persuasion move.

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. i, l. 413. (Pope, tr.)

what man Would do.

ROBERT BROWNING, Saul. Sec. xviii.

We know better than we do.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: The Over-Soul.

5
Knowledge we ask not—knowledge Thou hast lent,

But, Lord, the will—there lies our bitter need,
Give us to build above the deep intent
The deed, the deed.

JOHN DRINKWATER, A Prayer.

6
Do noble things, not dream them.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, A Farewell.

To stretch the octave 'twixt the dream and deed,
Ah, that's the thrill!

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Decadent to His Soul.

7
Thinking the deed, and not the creed,
Would help us in our utmost need.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Prelude, l. 221.

8
And what they dare to dream of, dare to do.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

The dreaming doer is the master poet—
And lo, the perfect lyric is a deed!

JOHN G. NEIHARDT, The Lyric Deed.

9
Space is as nothing to spirit, the deed is outdone by the doing.

RICHARD REALF, Indirection.

10
He knows a baseness in his blood
At such strange war with something good,
He may not do the thing he would.

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 301.

11
Forget the poet, but his warning heed,
And shame his poor word with your nobler
deed.

WHITTIER, The Panorama. Last lines.

III—Deeds: Great Deeds

12
Our wreaths may fade, our flowers may wane,
But his well-ripened deeds remain.

ALFRED AUSTIN, At His Grave.

But these are deeds that should not pass away,
And names that must not wither.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 67.

Things of to-day?
Deeds which are harvest for Eternity!
EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Hymn, l. 22.

13
There may be danger in the deed,
But there is honour too.

W. E. AYTOUN, The Island of the Scots, l. 43.

14
Great things are done when men and mountains meet;
This is not done by jostling in the street.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Gnomic Verses. No. 1.

15
Great deeds are reserved for great men.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 23.

His deeds inimitable.

CHAPMAN, Bussy D'Ambois. Act i, sc. 1.

16 Remember thine own verse: "Should heaven
turn hell

For deeds well done, I would do ever well."

CHAPMAN, The Tears of Peace: Induction.

17
Born, Cæsar-like, to write and act great deeds.
DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 175.

18
No great deed is done
By falterers who ask for certainty.
GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

19
Desperate deeds of derring do.
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

20
I count this thing to be grandly true:
That a noble deed is a step toward God.
J. G. HOLLAND, Gradatim.

Nor doubt that golden chords
Of good works, mingling with the visions, raise
The soul to purer worlds.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. i, 18.

21
First in the fight, and ev'ry graceful deed.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 295. (Pope, tr.)

22
Oh! 'tis easy
To beget great deeds; but in the rearing of them— . . .

There lies the self-denial.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act
iv, sc. 3.

23
But the good deed, through the ages
Living in historic pages,
Brighter grows and gleams immortal,
Unconsumed by moth or rust.
LONGFELLOW, The Norman Baron.

Whene'er a noble deed is wrought,
Whene'er is spoken a noble thought,
Our hearts, in glad surprise,
To higher levels rise.
LONGFELLOW, Santa Filomena.

<sup>1</sup> The gods see the deeds of the righteous. (Dipia facta vident.)
OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 117.

<sup>2</sup> Your deeds are known,
In words that kindle glory from the stone.
SCHILLER, The Walk.

<sup>3</sup> Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 2, l. 88.

<sup>4</sup> How far that little candle throws its beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 90.

O, would the deed were good!
For now the devil, that told me I did well,
Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 115.

<sup>5</sup> Not till earth be sunless, not till death strike blind the skies,
May the deathless love that waits on deathless deeds be dead.
SWINBURNE, Grace Darling, l. 103.

<sup>6</sup> Great deeds cannot die;
They with the sun and moon renew their light
For ever, blessing those that look on them.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iii, l. 237.

<sup>7</sup> And do we still hesitate to extend our renown by deeds? (Et dubitamus adhuc virtutem extendere factis?)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 806.

It is valor's task to extend our fame by deeds.
(Sed famam extendere factis, Hoc virtutis opus.)
VERGIL, Æneid, Bk. x, l. 468. "Famam extendere factis"—To extend fame by deeds—was the motto of Linnæus.

<sup>8</sup> A deed well done pleaseth the heart.
UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 110. (1460)

IV—Deeds: Evil Deeds

<sup>9</sup> When about to commit a base deed, respect thyself, though there is no witness. (Turpe quid ausurus, te sine teste time.)
ANACHARSIS. (AUSONTUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 43.)

<sup>10</sup> Inasmuch as ill deeds spring up as a spontaneous crop, they are easy to learn.
CERVANTES, Coloquio de los Perros.

<sup>11</sup> Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.
New Testament: John, iii, 19.

<sup>12</sup> Every guilty deed

Holds in itself the seed
Of retribution and undying pain.
LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. viii. See also under RETRIBUTION.

<sup>13</sup> Many things, base in the doing, please when done. (Multaque, dum fiunt, turpia, facta placent.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 218.

<sup>14</sup> Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2. See also under MURDER.

<sup>15</sup> There shall be done A deed of dreadful note.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 43.

A deed without a name.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 49.
Deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amazed.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 370.

<sup>16</sup> Unnatural deeds Do breed unnatural troubles.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 1, l. 79.

<sup>17</sup> You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, 5, 24.

<sup>18</sup> Let guilty men remember their black deeds
Do lean on crutches made of slender reeds.
JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act v, sc. 6.

V—Deeds Done and Undone

<sup>19</sup> We have left undone those things which we ought to have done; and we have done those things which we ought not to have done.
Book of Common Prayer: General Confession.

<sup>20</sup> For deeds undone
Rankle and snarl and hunger for their due,
Till there seems naught so despicable as you
In all the grin o' the sun.
W. E. HENLEY, Rhymes and Rhythms. No. vii, st. 2.

<sup>21</sup> It is a most mortifying reflection for a man to consider what he has done, compared with what he might have done.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1770.)

<sup>22</sup> It is done and cannot be undone. (Factum est illud: fieri infectum non potest.)
PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 741. (Act iv, sc. 10.)

The thing that is done cannot be undone.
RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. No. 35. (1539)
What's done, cannot be undone.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 1, 74. (1606)

Things without all remedy
Should be without regard; what's done is done.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 11.

What is done cannot be now amended.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 291.

What's done can't be undone. (Ce qui est fait ne se peut desfaire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

Did nothing in particular, And did it very well.
W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act ii.

And all that you are sorry for is what you haven't done.

MARGARET WIDDEMER, De Senectute.

VI—Deed and Doer

Who doth right deeds

Is twice-born, and who doeth ill deeds vile.

EDWIN ARNOLD, The Light of Asia. Bk. vi, l. 78.

We are much beholden to Machiavel and others, that write what men do, and not what they ought to do.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

I did some excellent things indifferently,
Some bad things excellently. Both were praised,

The latter loudest.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 205.

Do what thy manhood bids thee do, from none but self expect applause.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Canto viii, st. 37.

Our grand business undoubtedly is, not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand.

CARLYLE, Essays: Signs of the Times.

Our works are the mirror wherein the spirit first sees its natural lineaments.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 7.

Our deeds determine us, as much as we determine our deeds.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 29.

Our deeds still travel with us from afar,
And what we have been makes us what we are.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch: Ch. 70, Heading.

Our deeds are like children born to us: they live and act apart from our own will. Children may be strangled, but deeds never.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Ch. 16.

The manly part is to do with might and main what you can do.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

For as one star another far exceeds,
So souls in heaven are placed by their deeds.

ROBERT GREENE, A Maiden's Dream.

If thou do ill, the joy fades, not the pains;
If well, the pain doth flee, the joy remains.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 77.

Do well and right, and let the world sink.

GEORGE HERBERT, Priest to the Temple. Ch. 29.

The readiness of doing doth express
No other but the doer's willingness.

ROBERT HERRICK, Readiness.

No deed that sets an example of evil brings joy to the doer. (Exemplo quodcumque malo committitur, ipsi displicet auctori.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 1.

He who does something at the head of one regiment will eclipse him who does nothing at the head of a hundred.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to General Hunter.

Something attempted, something done,
Has earned a night's repose.

LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith.

A good man makes no noise over a good deed, but passes on to another as a vine to bear grapes again in season.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 6.

Nobody enters his good deeds in his day-book. (Nemo beneficia in calendario scribit.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. i, sec. 2.

To be nameless in worthy deeds, exceeds an infamous history.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v.

We are our own fates. Our own deeds
Are our doomsmen. Man's life was made not for men's creeds,
But men's actions.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto v, sec. 8.

I . . . Us'd no ambition to commend my deeds;

The deeds themselves, though mute, spoke loud the doer.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 247.

From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,

The place is dignified by the doer's deed.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 132.

I never saw . . .

Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 7.

I am in this earthly world; where to do harm
Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 75.

They look into the beauty of thy mind,

And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxi.

1 If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 189.

2 Go in, and cheer the town; we'll forth and fight;

Do deeds worth praise and tell you them at night.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 3, l. 92.

3 Man is of soul and body, formed for deeds
Of high resolve; on fancy's boldest wing.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iv, l. 160.

4 "The one may and the other may not, do this without harm," the difference lying not in the deed, but in the doer. ("Hoc licet inpune facere huic, illi non licet," Non quo dissimilis res sit sed quo is qui facit.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 824. (Act v, sc. 3.)

DEFEAT, see Failure

DEFIANCE

5 An attitude not only of defence, but defiance.
THOMAS GILLESPIE, The Mountain Storm.

Defence, not defiance.

Motto adopted by the British Volunteer Movement, 1859.

6 He manned himself with dauntless air,
Returned the Chief his haughty stare,
His back against a rock he bore,
And firmly placed his foot before:—
"Come one, come all! this rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I!"

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 10.

Like rock engirdled by the sea,
Like rock immovable is he.
(Ille, velut pelagi rupes immota, resistit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, l. 586. (Conington, tr.)

7 Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 196.

Rather let my head
Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any Save to the God of heaven and to my king.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 124.

I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,
And with the other fling it at thy face,
Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 49.

8 Thou mayest hold a serpent by the tongue,
A chafed lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting tiger safer by the tooth,

Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 258.

9 Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 51.

Lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be him that first cries "Hold, enough!"

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 33.

10 I do defy him, and I spit at him;
Call him a slanderous coward and a villain:
Which to maintain, I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tied to run afoot,
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 1, l. 60.

Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw at all;
I have a thousand spirits in one breast
To answer twenty thousand such as you.

DEMOCRACY

See also Government, Voting

I—Democracy: Definitions

7 Democracy arose from men's thinking that if they are equal in any respect, they are equal absolutely. (Ἀἴμος μὲν γὰρ ἐγένετο ἐκ τοῦ ἴσους ὁτιοῦν ὅντας οἶσθαι ἀπλῶς ἴσους εἶναι.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. v, ch. 1, sec. 2.

8 Democracy means government by the uneducated, while aristocracy means government by the badly educated.

G. K. CHESTERTON, (N. Y. Times, 1 Feb., 1931.)

9 Democracy is the healthful life-blood which circulates through the veins and arteries, which supports the system, but which ought never to appear externally, and as the mere blood itself.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 19 Sept., 1830.

10 A monarchy is like a man-of-war,—bad shots between wind and water hurt it exceedingly;
there is danger of capsizing. But democracy is a raft. You cannot easily overturn it. It is a wet place, but it is a pretty safe one.

JOSEPH COOK, Boston Monday Lectures:
Labor.

Fisher Ames expressed the popular security more wisely, when he compared a monarchy and a republic, saying that a monarchy is a merchantman, which sails well, but will sometimes strike on a rock and go to the bottom; whilst a republic is a raft, which would never sink, but then your feet are always in the water.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

11 The governments of the past could fairly be characterized as devices for maintaining in perpetuity the place and position of certain privileged classes. . . . The Government of the United States is a device for maintaining in perpetuity the rights of the people, with the ultimate extinction of all privileged classes.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Speech, Philadelphia, 25
Sept., 1924.

12 The democrat is a young conservative; the conservative is an old democrat. The aristocrat is the democrat ripe and gone to seed.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

13 Democracy is based upon the conviction that there are extraordinary possibilities in ordinary people.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, Democracy.

14 A republic may be called the climate of civilization.

VICTOR HUGO, Speech, French Assembly, 1851.

15 Men, by their constitutions, are naturally divided into two parties: 1. Those who fear and distrust the people, and wish to draw all powers from them into the hands of the higher classes. 2. Those who identify themselves with the people, have confidence in them, cherish and consider them as the most honest and safe, although not the most wise, depository of the public interests. . . . In every country these two parties exist. . . .
The appellation of Aristocrats and Democrats is the true one, expressing the essence of all.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 73.

16 Democ'acy gives every man

The right to be his own oppressor.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 7.

II—Democracy: Apothegms

1 The manners of women are the surest criterion by which to determine whether a republican government is practicable in a nation or not.

JOHN ADAMS, Diary, 2 June, 1778. (C. F. ADAMS, Life of Adams. Vol. iii, p. 171.)

2 You can never have a revolution in order to establish a democracy. You must have a democracy in order to have a revolution.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Tremendous Trifles: Wind and the Trees.

3 The Ship of Democracy, which has weathered all storms, may sink through the mutiny of those on board.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter to Wilson S. Bissell, 15 Feb., 1894.

4 Democracy is on trial in the world, on a more colossal scale than ever before.

C. F. DOLE, The Spirit of Democracy.

5 Would shake hands with a king upon his throne,

And think it kindness to his majesty.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Connecticut.

6 I am a Democrat still—very still.

DAVID B. HILL, after the nomination of William Jennings Bryan in 1896. (NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 705.)

7 An acrimonious and surly republican.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton.

8 Go thou, and first establish democracy in thy household. (Σὺ γὰρ πρῶτος ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ σου ποίησον δημοκρατίαν.)

LYCURGUS, to a man who demanded the establishment of democracy in Sparta. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Lycurgus. Ch. 19.)

9 Thus our democracy was from an early period the most aristocratic, and our aristocracy the most democratic.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, p. 20.

10 It is easier for a republican form of government to be applauded than realized. (Respublicæ forma laudari facilius quam evenire.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 33.

11 The only remedy against democrats is soldiers. (Gegen Demokraten Helfen nur Soldaten.)

WILHELM VON MERCHEL, Die Fünfte Zunft.

12 The world must be made safe for democracy. . . . We shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts—for democracy.

WOODROW WILSON, War Address to Congress, 2 April, 1917.

III—Democracy: Of the People, By the People

13 The government is a government of the people and for the people.

THOMAS COOPER, Some Information Respecting America. (London, 1795.)

14 The declaration that our People are hostile to a government made by themselves, for themselves, and conducted by themselves, is an insult.

JOHN ADAMS, Address, to the citizens of Westmoreland Co., Virginia, 1798.

15 The government of the Union, then, is emphatically and truly a government of the people. In form and in substance it emanates from them. Its powers are granted by them, and are to be exercised directly on them and for their benefit.

JOHN MARSHALL, Case of McCulloch vs. Maryland, 1819. (WHEATON, iv, 316.)

16 The people's government made for the people, made by the people, and answerable to the people.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Second Speech on Foote's Resolution, 26 Jan., 1830.

17 There is what I call the American idea. . . . This idea demands . . . a democracy,—that is, a government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people.

THEODORE PARKER, Speech, at Anti-Slavery Convention, Boston, 29 May, 1850.

For there is the democratic idea: that all men are endowed by their creator with certain natural rights; . . . that they are equal as men; . . . and therefore government is to be of all the people, by all the people, and for all the people.

THEODORE PARKER, Address, to the Anti-Slavery Society, Boston, 13 May, 1854.

Democracy is direct self-government, over all the people, for all the people, by all the people.

THEODORE PARKER, Sermon, delivered at Music Hall, Boston, 4 July, 1858. It was published as a pamphlet, On the Effect of Slavery on the American People, the above sentence occurring on page 5. Herndon, in his Life of Lincoln, asserts that he gave a copy of this pamphlet to Lincoln, who marked the above passage. There has been a tradition that "of the people, by the people, for the people" occurred in the introduction to the translation of the Bible made by John Wycliffe about 1384, but a careful examination has failed to disclose it. The nearest approach to it is the following quotation from Saint Jerome (vol. i, p. 56): "Hooly writ is the scripture of puplis, for it is maad, that alle puples schulden knowe it." The examination of the difficult text was made by the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, at the request of the compiler.

<sup>1</sup> The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. . . . It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, Gettysburg National Cemetery, 19 Nov., 1863.

<sup>2</sup> President Lincoln defined democracy to be “the government of the people, by the people, for the people.” This is a sufficiently compact statement of it as a political arrangement. Theodore Parker said that “Democracy meant not ‘I’m as good as you are,’ but ‘You’re as good as I am.’” And this is the ethical conception of it, necessary as a complement of the other.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, Essays: Democracy

<sup>3</sup> As the happiness of the people is the sole end of government, so the consent of the people is the only foundation of it, in reason, morality, and the natural fitness of things.

JOHN ADAMS, Proclamation, adopted by Council of Massachusetts Bay, 1774.

<sup>4</sup> You cannot possibly have a broader basis for any government than that which includes all the people, with all their rights in their hands, and with an equal power to maintain their rights.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Life. Vol. iv, p. 224.

<sup>5</sup> I know no safe depository of the ultimate powers of society but the people themselves; and if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their control with a wholesome discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them, but to inform their discretion by education.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to W. C. Jarvis, 28 Sept., 1820.

Governments are republican only in proportion as they embody the will of the people, and execute it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 33.

No government can continue good but under the control of the people.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 234.

The qualifications of self-government in society are not innate. They are the result of habit and long training, and for these they will require time and probably much suffering.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 22.

It is an axiom in my mind that our liberty can never be safe but in the hands of the people themselves.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 24.

<sup>6</sup> This end was the representative sovereignty of all the citizens concentrated in an election as extensive as the people themselves, and acting by the people, and for the people in an elective council, which should be all the government.

LAMARTINE, History of the Girondists. Vol. iii, p. 104. Referring to Robespierre's ideas.

<sup>7</sup> The problem of democracy is not the problem of getting rid of kings. It is the problem of clothing the whole people with the elements of kingship. To make kings and queens out of a hundred million people: that is the Problem of American democracy.

F. C. MOREHOUSE, The Problem of Democracy.

<sup>8</sup> The estate goes before the steward; the foundation before the house, people before their representatives, and the creation before the creator. The steward lives by preserving the estate; the house stands by reason of its foundation; the representative depends upon the people, as the creature subsists by the power of its creator.

WILLIAM PENN, England's Present Interest Considered, p. 392. (1674)

<sup>9</sup> In a government like ours, founded by the people, managed by the people.

JOSEPH STORY, On the Constitution. Sec. 304.

<sup>10</sup> Democracy means simply the bludgeoning of the people by the people for the people.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of a Man Under Socialism.

IV—Democracy: Its Virtues

<sup>11</sup> Will anybody deny now that the Government at Washington, as regards its own people, is the strongest government in the world at this hour? And for this simple reason, that it is based on the will, and the good will, of an instructed people.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, at Rochdale, 24 Nov., 1863.

<sup>12</sup> A representative democracy, where the right of election is well secured and regulated, and the exercise of the legislative, executive, and judiciary authorities is vested in select persons, chosen really and not nominally by the people, will, in my opinion, be most likely to be happy, regular, and durable.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 72.

<sup>13</sup> The republican is the only form of government which is not eternally at open or secret war with the rights of mankind.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Reply to Address, 1790.

<sup>1</sup> The love of equality, in a democracy, limits ambition to the sole desire, to the sole happiness, of doing greater services to our country than the rest of our fellow-citizens.

MONTESQUIEU, Spirit of the Laws. Bk. v, ch. 3.

<sup>2</sup> Democracy is better than tyranny. (Δημοκρατία κρείττον τυραννίδος.)

PERIANDER. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Periander. 4.)

<sup>3</sup> Freedom in a democracy is the glory of the State, and, therefore, in a democracy only will the freeman of nature deign to dwell.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. ii, sec. 391.

<sup>4</sup> The Republican form of government is the highest form of government: but because of this it requires the highest type of human nature—a type nowhere at present existing.

HERBERT SPENCER, The Americans.

<sup>5</sup> He who would save liberty must put his trust in democracy.

NORMAN THOMAS. (Saturday Review of Literature, 7 June, 1930.)

By God! I will accept nothing which all cannot have their counterpart of on the same terms.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 24.

Thunder on! Stride on! Democracy. Strike with vengeful stroke!

WALT WHITMAN, Rise O Days. Sec. 3.

<sup>7</sup> The beauty of a Democracy is that you never can tell when a youngster is born what he is going to do with you, and that, no matter how humbly he is born . . . he has got a chance to master the minds and lead the imaginations of the whole country.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Columbus, O., 10 Dec., 1915.

I believe in Democracy because it releases the energies of every human being.

Use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 554.

19

O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it

To lock it in the wards of covert bosom,
When it deserves, with characters of brass,

A fortified residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And razure of oblivion.

Here's the devil-and-all to pay.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 10.

1
God made bees, and bees made honey,
God made man, and man made money;
Pride made the devil, and the devil made sin;
So God made a cole-pit to put the devil in.

UNKNOWN. An old rhyme found on the flyleaf of a Bible belonging to a miner living near Hutton-Henry. Transcribed by James Henry Dixon.

II—Devil: Ill and Well

2
When the wolf was sick he would be a monk,
but when he recovered he was a wolf again.
(Lupus languebat monachus tunc esse volebat,
Sed cum convaleuit lupus ut ante fuit.)

WALTER BOWER, Scotichronicon, ii, 292. (c. 1450) A proverb circulated in the early Middle Ages in all languages. (Notes and Queries. Ser. viii, vol. 12, p. 331.)

The devil was sick, the devil a monk would be;
The devil was well, the devil a monk was he.
(Ægrotat Dæmon, monachus tunc esse volebat; Dæmon convaleuit, Dæmon ante fuit.)

UNKNOWN. A variation of the medieval Latin proverb quoted above. (Urquhart, tr.)

When the devil was sick, the devil a saint would be;

When the devil was well, the devil a saint was he.
SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 314. (1875)

And almost every one when age,
Disease, or sorrows strike him,
Inclines to think there is a God,
Or something very like him.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Dipsychus. Pt. i, sc. 5.

There are few so confirmed in Atheism, that a pressing danger or the neighborhood of death will not force to a recognition of the divine power.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

4
The devil was sick and crazy;
Good would the monk be that was lazy.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals Dictionary Revised. Sig. K8. (1586)

5
We are never so virtuous as when we are ill.
. . . It is then a man recollects that there are gods, and that he himself is mortal; . . . and he resolves that if he has the luck to recover, his life shall be passed in harmless happiness.

PLINY, THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vii, epis. 26.

God and the Doctor we alike adore
But only when in danger, not before;
The danger o'er, both are alike requited,
God is forgotten, and the Doctor slighted.

JOHN OWEN, Epigram.

He is resolved to make good the Italian proverb,
When the danger's past the saint is cheated.

(Passato el pericolo è gabato el Santo.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 24.

III—Devil: His Faults

8
A winnock-bunker in the east,
There sat auld Nick, in shape o' beast;
A towzie tyke, black, grim and large.

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter.

9
The Devil himself, which is the author of confusion and lies.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 3.

10
When to sin our biass'd nature leans,
The careful devil is still at hand with means.
DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 79.

11
'Gainst the logic of the devil
Human logic strives in vain.

A. L. GORDON, The Wayside House.

12
Who is the most diligent bishop and prelate in England? . . . I will tell you. It is the devil. . . . He is never out of his diocese. . . . The devil is diligent at his plough.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermon on Ploughers. (1549)

13
Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour.

New Testament: I Peter, v, 8.

14
No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act v, sc. 2, l. 12.

15
If there be devils, would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell!

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1, l. 147.

IV—Devil: His Virtues

16
The devil's ever kind to his own.

ALEXANDER BROME, New Montebank. (1660)

The devil has a care of his footmen.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act i, sc. 4.

17
The Devil that old stager . . . who leads Downward, perhaps, but fiddles all the way!

ROBERT BROWNING, Red Cotton Night-cap Country. Pt. ii, l. 264.

18
All the devils respect virtue.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

The dear old devil.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

1 Part of that Power am I, least understood,
Which always wills the Bad and always works
the Good.

GEOTHE, Faust. (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

2 I call'd the devil, and he came;
With wonder his form did I closely scan;
He is not ugly, and is not lame,
But really a handsome and charming man.
HEINE, Pictures of Travel: The Return Home.

3 Devils are not so black as they are painted.
THOMAS LODGE, A Margarite of America, p.
57. (1596)

As if the devil was not so black as he was painted.
DEFOE, History of the Devil. Pt. ii, ch. 6.

We paint the devil foul, yet he
Hath some good in him, all agree.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church: Sin.

4 It is Lucifer,
The son of mystery;
And since God suffers him to be,
He, too, is God's minister,
And labors for some good
By us not understood.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend: Epilogue.

5 The virtue of the devil is in the loins. (Diadoli virtus in lumbis est.)
ST. JEROME, Contra Jovimen, ii, l. 2.

6 The spirit that I have seen
May be the devil: and the devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 627.

7 The devil shall have his bargain; for he was never yet a breaker of proverbs.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 131.
Now I perceive the devil understands Welsh;
And 'tis no marvel he is so humorous.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 233.

8 The prince of darkness is a gentleman.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 147.
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Goblins.

9 The devil is good when he is pleased.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

10 From his brimstone bed at break of day
A-walking the Devil is gone,
To look at his little snug farm of the world,
And see how his stock went on. . . .
His coat was red and his breeches were blue,
And there was a hole where his tail came through.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Devil's Walk. Sts. 1, 3.
This poem was originally published by S. T.
Coleridge, 6 Sept., 1799, under the title The Devil's Thoughts. It consisted of fourteen stanzas of which Southey had written the first three. It was reprinted in Coleridge's

Sibylline Leaves (1817), with a statement of Southey's share in its composition. It is reprinted in Southey's works with many additional stanzas. It was imitated by Byron and claimed by Professor R. C. Porson, who was exposed as an impostor.

V—The Devil According to Milton

11 Th' infernal serpent; he it was whose guile,
Stirr'd up with envy and revenge, deceiv'd
The mother of mankind.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 34.

12 Hail horrors, hail
Infernal world, and thou profoundest hell
Receive thy new possessor.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 250.

13 His spear, to equal which the tallest pine
Hewn on Norwegian hills, to be the mast
Of some great ammiral, were but a wand,
He walk'd with to support uneasy steps
Over the burning marle.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 292.

14 His form had yet not lost
All her original brightness, nor appear'd
Less than arch-angel ruin'd, and th' excess
Of glory obscur'd.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 591.

15 High on a throne of royal state, which far
Outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind,
Or where the gorgeous East with richest hand
Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold,
Satan exalted sat, by merit rais'd
To that bad eminence.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 1.

16 The strongest and the fiercest Spirit
That fought in Heav'n, now fiercer by despair:

His trust was with th' Eternal to be deem'd
Equal in strength; and rather than be less
Car'd not to be at all.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 44.

17 Black it stood as night,
Fierce as ten furies, terrible as hell,
And shook a dreadful dart; what seem'd his
head

The likeness of a kingly crown had on.
Satan was now at hand.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 670.

18 Incens'd with indignation Satan stood
Unterrified, and like a comet burn'd.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 707.

19 O'er bog or steep, through strait, rough, dense,
or rare,
With head, hands, wings, or feet, pursues his
way,

And swims or sinks, or wades, or creeps, or flies.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 948.

1 Abash'd the Devil stood,
And felt how awful goodness is, and saw
Virtue in her shape how lovely; saw, and pin'd
His loss.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 846.

2 Satan, so call him now, his former name
Is heard no more in heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 655.

3 Swinges the scaly horror of his folded tail.

MILTON, Hymn on the Morning of Christ's Nativity, l. 172.

DEVOTION

4 Compar'd with this, how poor Religion's pride.

In all the pomp of method and of art,
When men display to congregations wide,
Devotion's ev'ry grace, except the heart!
ROBERT BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night.

5 Devotion, mother of obedience.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The History of the Civil War. Bk. vi, st. 33. See also under IGNORANCE.

6 The image of devotion. (Pietatis imago.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 405.

7 Devotion has mastered the hard way. (Vicit iter durum pietas.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 688.

8 Devotion! daughter of Astronomy!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 769.

DEW

9 The dew,
'Tis of the tears which stars weep, sweet with joy.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Another and a Better World.

Dewdrops, Nature's tears, which she Sheds in her own breast for the fair which die.
The sun insists on gladness; but at night,
When he is gone, poor Nature loves to weep.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Water and Wood.

10 In lang, lang days o' simmer,
When the clear and cloudless sky
Refuses ae wee drap o' rain

To Nature parched and dry,
The genial night, wi' balmy breath,
Gars verdure spring anew,
An' ilka blade o' grass

Keps its ain drap o' dew.

JAMES BALLANTINE, Its Ain Drap o' Dew.

11 He lived upon dew, after the manner of a grasshopper. (Rore vixit more cicadæ.)

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 11.

12 The dews of the evening most carefully shun;
Those tears of the sky for the loss of the sun.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Advice to a Lady in Autumn.

13 Dew-drops are the gems of morning,
But the tears of mournful eve!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age.

14 Sudden perfect as the dew-bead,
Gem of earth and sky begotten.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy: Song. Pt. i.

15 The world globes itself in a drop of dew.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

The drop of dew which hangs from the blade of grass reflects a sky as vast and as pure as the immense ocean in its azure plains.

(La goutte de rosée à l'herbe suspendue,
Y réfléchit un ciel aussi vaste, aussi pur,
Que l'immense océan dans ses plaines d'azur.)

LAMARTINE.

Every dew-drop and rain-drop had a whole heaven within it.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

And every dew-drop paints a bow.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxxii, st. 5.

16 The lovely varnish of the dew, whereby the old, hard, peaked earth and its old self-same productions are made new every morning, and shining with the last touch of the artist's hand.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses: Literary Ethics.

17 The wizard silence of the hours of dew.

EDMUND GOSSE, Dejection and Delay.

18 Brushing with hasty steps the dews away,
To meet the sun upon the upland lawn.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. St. 25.

19 I've seen the dew-drop clinging
To the rose just newly born.

CHARLES JEFFERYS, Mary of Argyle.

20 Stars of morning, dew-drops which the sun
Impearls on every leaf and every flower.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 743.

21 The dew-drop in the breeze of morn,
Trembling and sparkling on the thorn,
Falls to the ground, escapes the eye,
Yet mounts on sunbeams to the sky.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Recollection of Mary F.

22 That diamond dew, so pure and clear,
It rivals all but Beauty's tear.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 2.

- 1
I must go seek some dewdrops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 14.
And like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 224.
- 2
Oh, dewy was the morning
Upon the first of May,
And Dewey was the Admiral,
Down in Manila Bay.
And dewy were the Regent's eyes
Them orbs of royal blue,
And dew we feel discouraged?
I dew not think we dew!
EUGENE WARE, Dewey. (Topeka Capital, May, 1898.)

DIAMOND

- 3
Better a diamond with a flaw than a pebble without.
CONFUCIUS, Analects.
- 4
A diamond is valuable tho' it lie on a dung-
hill.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 74.
- 5
The lively diamond drinks thy purest rays,
Collected light compact; that, polished bright,
And all its native lustre let abroad,
Dares, as it sparkles on the fair one's breast,
With vain ambition emulate her eyes.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 142.
- 6
Diamond me no diamonds! . . . prize me no prizes!
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 501.
- 7
None cuts a diamond but a diamond.
WEBSTER AND MARSTON, The Malcontent. Act
iv, sc. 3. (1604)
Diamonds cut diamonds.
JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act i, sc.
3. (1629)
Wit must be foiled by wit; cut a diamond with a diamond.
CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 5.
Among such fellows, it was diamond cut diamond.
THACKERAY, Barry Lyndon. Ch. 10.
- 8
The tears of fallen women turned to ice
By man's cold pity for repentant vice.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Diamonds.

DICKENS, CHARLES

- 9
Has Dickens turned his hinge
A-pinch upon the fingers of the great?
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 403.
- 10
The good, the gentle, the high-gifted, ever-friendly, noble Dickens—every inch of him an Honest Man.

THOMAS CARLYLE. (Forster, Life, iii, 475.)

- 11
And on that grave where English oak and holly
And laurel wreaths entwine,
Deem it not all a too presumptuous folly—
This spray of Western pine!
BRET HARTE, Dickens in Camp.

12
He has risen like a rocket and he will come down like a stick.

JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART, in review of the
Pickwick Papers in the Quarterly Review.
The phrase stolen from Thomas Paine, who used it with reference to Edmund Burke.

I will watch for that stick, Mr. Lockhart, and when it comes down, I will break it across your back.

CHARLES DICKENS, on meeting Lockhart for the first time after the publication of the review referred to above.

- 13
He violated every rule of art
Except the feeling mind and thinking heart.

JOHN MACY, Couplets in Criticism: Dickens.

14
If Columbus found a new world, Dickens created one—and peopled it with men and women.

ARTHUR QUILLER-COUCH, Address, Dickens
Fellowship dinner, 7 Feb., 1931.

DIFFERENCES

- 15
There's but the twinkling of a star
Between a man of peace and war, . . .
A formal preacher and a player,
A learn'd physician and man-slayer.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 957.
- 16
Strange! all this difference should be
'Twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee.
JOHN BYROM, On the Feuds between Handel and Bononcini. Wrongly attributed to Pope and Swift. See under COMPARISONS.
- 17
The whole character and fortune of the individual are affected by . . . the perception of differences.
EMERSON, Nature, Addresses: Discipline.
- 18
Distinction without a difference.
FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. vi, ch. 13.
- 19
There are fagots and fagots. (Il y a fagots et fagots.)
MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act i, sc. 5.
- 20
The king can drink the best of wine—
So can I;
And has enough when he would dine—
So have I;
And can not order rain or shine—

- Nor can I.
Then where's the difference—let me see—
Betwixt my lord the king and me?
CHARLES MACKAY, Differences.
- <sup>1</sup> Differing but in degree, of kind the same.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 490.
- <sup>2</sup> All Nature's diff'rence keeps all Nature's peace.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 56.

decide.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. No. 201.
- <sup>5</sup> O, the difference of man and man!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 26.
- <sup>6</sup> Because it makes no difference. ('Οτι οὐδὲν διαφέρει.)
THALES, when asked why he did not die, after he had declared that there was no difference between life and death. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Bk. i, sec. 36.)
- <sup>7</sup> No difference will I make 'twixt Tyrian and Trojan. (Tros Turiusque mihi nullo discrimine agetur.)

DIGESTION

See also Appetite

- <sup>26</sup> 'Tis not her coldness, father,
That chills my labouring breast;

It's that confounded cucumber
I've ate and can't digest.

R. H. BARHAM, The Confession.

1
A good digestion turneth all to health.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 60.

2
Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 237.

Unquiet meals make ill digestion.

3
I am convinced digestion is the great secret of life.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Arthur Kinglake, 30 Sept., 1837.

DIGNITY

By pains men come to greater pains; . . .
and by indignities men come to dignities.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place.

5
There is a certain dignity of manners absolutely necessary, to make even the most valuable character either respected or respectable.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 Aug., 1749.

With grave
Aspect he rose, and in his rising seem'd
A pillar of state; deep on his front engraven
Deliberation sat, and public care;
And princely counsel in his face yet shone
Majestic, though in ruin.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 300.

7
Our dignity is not in what we do, but what we understand.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 202.

Perhaps the only true dignity of man is his capacity to despise himself.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 230.

8
It is easier to grow in dignity than to make a start. (Facilius enim crescit dignitas quam incipit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 2.

9
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 6.

10
My cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind
That it will quickly drop.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 99.

11
Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 130.
See also under HONORS.

12
Too coy to flatter, and too proud to serve,
Thine be the joyless dignity to starve.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Advice, l. 236.

13
True dignity abides with him alone
Who, in the silent hour of inward thought,
Can still suspect, and still revere himself,
In lowliness of heart.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Left upon a Seat in a Yew Tree, l. 61.

14
Beneath one's dignity. (Infra dig.: Infra Dignitatem.)

A proverbial expression, origin unknown.

DILEMMA, see Choice

DILIGENCE, see Industry

DIMPLES

15
Then did she lift her hands unto his chin,
And praised the pretty dimpling of his skin.
FRANCIS BEAUMONT, Salmacis and Hermaphroditus, l. 661.

16
And love to live in dimple sleek.
MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 30.

17
There's a boil on his ear; and a corn on his chin,—
He calls it a dimple—but dimples stick in—
Yet it might be a dimple turned over, you know!

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, The Man in the Moon.

Pandarus: She puts her white hand to his cloven chin.

Cressida: Juno have mercy! how came it cloven.

Pandarus: Why, you know, 'tis dimpled.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 2, l. 132.

19
In each cheek appears a pretty dimple;
Love made those hollows; if himself were slain,

He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love lived and there he could not die.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 242.

20
The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 97.

And then the dimple on his chin.
JOHN LYLY, Cupid and Campaspe.

I—Dining: Its Importance

21
That all-softening, overpowering knell,
The tocsin of the soul—the dinner bell.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 49.

22
All human history attests
That happiness for man—the hungry sinner—

Since Eve ate apples, much depends on dinner!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 99.

<sup>1</sup> All people are made alike.

They are made of bones, flesh and dinners.
Only the dinners are different.

GERTRUDE LOUISE CHENEY, People. The author of this was aged nine in 1927 when it was written.

<sup>2</sup> My dinners have never interfered with my business. They have been my recreation. . . . A public banquet, if eaten with thought and care, is no more of a strain than a dinner at home.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW, Interview, on his 80th birthday.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 206. (1592)

One Diggory Chuzzlewit was in the habit of perpetually dining with Duke Humphrey.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 1. Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, son of Henry IV, was renowned for his hospitality, was buried in St. Paul's, and when the promenaders left for dinner, the poor stay-behinds who had no dinner to go to, used to say that they were dining with Duke Humphrey. The expression was at one time very common.

<sup>4</sup> 'Tis not the food, but the content,
That makes the table's merriment.

ROBERT HERRICK, Content not Cates.

<sup>5</sup> Among the great whom Heaven has made to shine,

How few have learned the art of arts,—to dine!

Nature, indulgent to our daily need,
Kind-hearted mother! taught us all to feed;
But the chief art,—how rarely Nature flings
This choicest gift among her social kings!

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret, l. 31.

<sup>6</sup> A simple dinner in a poor man's house, without tapestries and purple, has smoothed the wrinkles from the anxious brow. (Mundæque parvo sub lare pauperum Cenæ sine aulæis et ostro Sollicitam explicuere frontem.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 14.

<sup>7</sup> A man seldom thinks with more earnestness of anything than he does of his dinner.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 249.

This was a good dinner enough, to be sure, but it was not a dinner to ask a man to.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. Ch. 9.)

<sup>8</sup> What, did you not know, then, that to-day Lucullus dines with Lucullus? (Παρά Λουκούλλον δεῖπναι Λουκούλλος.)

LUCIUS LUCULLUS, to the servant who had provided only a small repast when his master happened to dine alone. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Lucullus. Ch. 41, sec. 2.)

<sup>9</sup> Dr. Middleton misdoubted the future as well as the past of the man who did not, in becoming gravity, exult to dine. That man he deemed unfit for this world and the next.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 20.

<sup>10</sup> He may live without books,—what is knowledge but grieving?

He may live without hope,—what is hope but deceiving?

He may live without love,—what is passion but pining?

But where is the man that can live without dining?

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto ii, st. 19.

O hour of all hours, the most bless'd upon earth,
Bless'd hour of our dinners!

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto ii, st. 18.

<sup>11</sup> The true Amphitryon is the Amphitryon with whom we dine. (Le véritable Amphitryon est l'Amphitryon où l'on dine.)

MOLIÈRE, Amphitryon. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 89. That is, the person who provides the dinner, whether the master of the house or not, is the real host. The story is that Jupiter assumed the likeness of Amphitryon in order to visit the latter's wife, Alcmena, and gave a banquet at his house, but Amphitryon came home unexpectedly and claimed the honor of being the host. The guests and servants decided that "he who gave the feast was to them the host."

I am the true Amphitryon.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act v, sc. 1.

<sup>12</sup> A good dinner, and company.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 19 July, 1668. See also under COMPANY.

<sup>13</sup> Is this a cause why one should not dine? (Cur quis non prandeat hoc est?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 85.

<sup>14</sup> Judicious drank, and greatly daring din'd.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 318.

<sup>15</sup> Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 17.

Oh, better, no doubt, is a dinner of herbs,
When season'd by love, which no rancour disturbs,

And sweeten'd by all that is sweetest in life
Than turbot, bisque, ortolans, eaten in strife!

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto ii, st. 22.

<sup>16</sup> A very man—not one of nature's clods—
With human failings, whether saint or sinner:
Endowed perhaps with genius from the gods
But apt to take his temper from his dinner.

J. G. SAXE, About Husbands.

1
Little we fear Weather without,
Sheltered about The Mahogany Tree.
THACKERAY, The Mahogany Tree.

II—Dining: The Menu

2
A rich soup; a small turbot; a saddle of venison; an apricot tart: this is a dinner fit for a king.

BRILLAT-SAVARIN, La Physiologie du Goût.

A warmed-up dinner was never worth much.
(Un diner réchauffé ne valut jamais rien.)

BOILEAU, Le Lutrin. Pt. i, l. 104.

Like warmed-up cabbage served at each repast,
The repetition kills the wretch at last.
(Occidit miseros crambe repetitia magistros.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 154. (Gifford, tr.)

4
You must reflect carefully beforehand with whom you are to eat and drink, rather than what you are to eat and drink. For a dinner of meats without the company of a friend is like the life of a lion or a wolf.

EPICURUS, Fragments. Frag. 542. (Quoted SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xix, 10.)

He showed me his bill of fare to tempt me to dine with him. "Foh," said I, "I value not your bill of fare, give me your bill of company."

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 2 Sept., 1711.

5
Dinners cannot be long where dainties want.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

6
From the egg to the apples. (Ab ovo usque ad mala.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. iii, l. 6. Referring to the first and last dish of a dinner, the equivalent of the modern "From soup to nuts."

The most nourishing meat is first to be eaten, that ancient proverb ratifieth Ab ovo ad mala; from the egg to the apples.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Health's Improvement, 295. (1639)

Corydon and Thyrsis met,
Are at their savoury dinner set,
Of herbs, and other country messes,
Which the neat-handed Phillis dresses.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 83.

8
And we meet, with champagne and a chicken,
at last.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, The Lover.

What say you to such a supper with such a woman?

BYRON, Note to a Letter on Bowles's Strictures.

9
I will make an end of my dinner; there's pipins and cheese to come.

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 2, l. 12.

10
Across the walnuts and the wine.

TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter, l. 32.

You'll have no scandal while you dine,
But honest talk and wholesome wine.

TENNYSON, To the Rev. F. D. Maurice.

Dinner was made for eatin', not for talkin'.

THACKERAY, Fashionable Fax.

11
A puzzle dinner—where you'd be puzzled which dish to try first. (Cena dubia . . . ubi tu dubites quid sumas potissimum.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 342. Horace repeats the expression, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 77.

12
They make their pride in making their dinner cost much; I make my pride in making my dinner cost little.

H. D. THOREAU. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

III—Dining: The Number at Table

13
The number at table should be three or four,
or at most five.

ARCHESTRATUS. (ATHENÆUS, Deipnosophists. Bk. i.)

Not fewer than three, nor more than nine. (Neque pauciores tribus, neque plures novem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Quoting an old proverb.

14
Crowd not your table: let your numbers be Not more than seven, and never less than three.

WILLIAM KING, Art of Cookery, l. 259.

Best company consists of five persons.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 132.

Seven make a banquet; nine make a clamor.
(Septem convivium; novem convicium.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

15
I have chosen five; for six are suitable for a feast with a king: if more, it is a clamor.
(Quinque advocavi; sex enim convivium Cum rege justum: si super, convicium est.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

16
The more the merrier; the fewer, the better fare.

JOHN PALSGRAVE, L'Éclair. Langue Française, 885. (1530)

17
At a round table there's no dispute of place.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

18
Heavenly Father, bless us,
And keep us all alive,
There's ten of us to dinner
And not enough for five.

UNKNOWN, Hodge's Grace.

IV—Dining: The Diner-Out

19
Solomon of saloons, And philosophic diner-out.

ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium."

No dinner goes off well without him.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Ixion in Heaven. Jupiter refers to Apollo.

Ye diners-out from whom we guard our spoons.

MACAULAY, Political Georgics.

See also JOHNSON, under VICE AND VIRTUE.

1 Philosopher, whom dost thou most affect,
Stoics austere, or Epicurus' sect?
Friend, 'tis my grave infrangible design
With those to study and with these to dine.

RICHARD GARNETT, Epigram.

Catius is ever moral, ever grave,
Thinks who endures a knave, is next a knave,
Save just at dinner—then prefers, no doubt,
A rogue with venison to a saint without.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 77.

2 At dinner my man appears.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Then from the Mint walks forth the man of rhyme,

Happy to catch me just at dinner-time.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 13.

3 When a man is invited to dinner, he is disappointed if he does not get something good.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 186.)

4 To eat at another's table is your ambition's height. (Bona summa putes aliena vivere quadra.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 2.

It is the hope of a good dinner that beguiles you. (Spes bene cenendi vos decipit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 166.

5 Philo swears that he has never dined at home, and it is so: he never dines at all unless invited out.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. 47.

6 Who depends upon another man's table often dines late.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 164.

V—Dining: After Dinner

7 Truth that peeps
Over the glass's edge when dinner's done,
And body gets its sop, and holds its noise,
And leaves soul free a little.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology, l. 17.

8 That old English saying: After dinner sit a while, and after supper walk a mile.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, 186. (1588)

9 Men are . . . conservatives after dinner.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

10 Strange to see how a good dinner and feasting reconciles everybody.

SAMUEL PEPPYS, Diary. 9 Nov., 1665.

11 A dinner lubricates business.

WILLIAM SCOTT, BARON STOWELL. (BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, viii, 67, note.)

We were to do more business after dinner; but after dinner is after dinner—an old saying and a true.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 26 Feb., 1711.

12 Serenely full, the epicure would say,
"Fate cannot harm me, I have dined to-day."

SYDNEY SMITH, A Recipe for Salad.

13 After a good dinner, one can forgive anybody, even one's own relations.

OSCAR WILDE, Woman of No Importance. Act ii.

14 He that hath a good dinner knows better the way to supper.

UNKNOWN, Fair Maid of Bristow. (1605)

17 You must look into people, as well as at them.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 4 Oct., 1746.

18 It is fortunate that diplomats generally have long noses, since usually they cannot see beyond them.

Attributed to PAUL CLAUDEL, while Ambassador of the French Republic at Washington, but denied by him in a letter to the compiler.

19 American diplomacy is easy on the brain but hell on the feet.

CHARLES G. DAWES, American Ambassador to Great Britain, in talk at Washington, 2 June, 1931.

It depends on which you use.

HENRY PRATHER FLETCHER, ex-Ambassador to Italy, commenting on Mr. Dawes's epigram.

20 "Frank and explicit"—that is the right line to take when you wish to conceal your own mind and to confuse the minds of others.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. vi, ch. 1.

If you wish to preserve your secret wrap it up in frankness.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays.

This is some fellow, . . . doth affect
A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb
Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter, he,
An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth!
An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.

These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness

Harbour more craft and more corrupter ends
Than twenty silly ducking observants
That stretch their duties nicely.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 101.

Ambassadors are the eye and ear of states.
(Gli ambasciatori sono l'occhio e l'orecchio degli stati.)

GUICCIARDINI, Storia d'Italia.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

Keep a good table and look after the ladies.
(Tenez bonne table et soignez les femmes.)

NAPOLEON I, instructions to Abbé Dominique de Pradt, when sending him as ambassador to Warsaw in 1812.

The rulers of the State are the only ones who should have the privilege of lying, either at home or abroad; they may be allowed to lie for the good of the State.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 389.

An ambassador is an honest man, sent to lie abroad for the good of his country. (Legatus est vir bonus peregre missus ad mentiendum Reipublicæ causa.)

SIR HENRY WOTTON, written in the album of his friend, Christopher Fleckamore, in 1604, as he passed through Augsburg on his way to Venice to assume the English Ambassadorship there. It was published eight years later by Jasper Scioppius (Ecclesiasticus, ch. 8), a scurrilous controversialist, with malicious intent, and raised a storm of disapproval in Europe, losing Wotton for a time the favor of King James I. Wotton apologized, insisting that the epigram was only "a merriment," and called attention to the double meaning of "lie," but this, unfortunately, was not present in the Latin in which he had written the jest. (WALTON, Life; Reliquiæ Wottonianæ; Dictionary of National Biography.)

This merry definition of an ambassador I had chanced to set down at my friend's, Mr. Christopher Fleckamore, in his Album.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, Letter to Velserus, 1612.

Men, like bullets, go farthest when they are smoothest. (Die Menschen gehen wie Schiesskugeln weiter, wenn sie abgeglättet sind.)

Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,
That know not how to use ambassadors.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 35.

All ambassadors make love and are very nice and useful to people who travel.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 102.

Tell the truth.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, when asked by a young diplomatist how best to puzzle his adversaries. (Reliquiæ Wottonianæ.)

DISAPPOINTMENT

The best-laid schemes o' mice an' men
Gang aft agley,

An' lea'e us nought but grief an' pain,
For promis'd joy!

BURNS, To a Mouse.

But evil fortune has decreed,
(The foe of mice as well as men)

The royal mouse at last should bleed,
Should fall—ne'er to arise again.

MICHAEL BRUCE, The Musiad.

Like to the apples on the Dead Sea's shore,
All ashes to the taste.
